This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world’s books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that’s often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book’s long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google’s system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google “watermark” you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can’t offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book’s appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google’s mission is to organize the world’s information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world’s books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at http://books.google.com/
ANNALS
OF THE BODLEIAN LIBRARY,
OXFORD,
A. D. 1598 — A. D. 1867;

With a Preliminary Notice of the earlier Library founded in the Fourteenth Century.

BY THE REV. WILLIAM DUNN MACRAY, M.A.
CHAPLAIN OF ST. MARY MAGDALENE AND ST. MARY WINTON COLLEGES;
EDITOR OF "CHRONICON ARRATLÆ EVESHAMENSIS," &c.

RIVINGTONS
London, Oxford, and Cambridge
1868
PREFACE.

This volume is an attempt to tell a tale which has not been told with any particularity and fulness since the days of Anthony à Wood, and yet a tale which, since those days, has been continually growing in interest, and engaging in fresh scenes the attention and admiration of successive generations. Fragments of the tale, it is true, have been told at times; latest of all, an abstract, brief but accurate, has been given in Mr. Edwards' valuable Memoirs of Libraries. But the present narrative, while it embraces a wider range, is, at the same time, independent throughout of all that have preceded it, being largely compiled from sources available only to those who are familiar with the stores of the Library and habituated to their use, as well as from private accounts and papers, for access to which, as for other kind assistance, the writer is indebted to the Librarian. Yet it is only as an attempt that the volume asks to be received and judged; for a work of this kind cannot at once attain completeness. Its very size will show to those who are acquainted with its subject, that minuteness in detail cannot be expected. The difficulty has been, out of the abundance of materials, to compile an epitome which should at once be concise and yet not, through conciseness, be deprived of interest. To point out all the special treasures in each branch in which the Library is rich, as it would occupy the extent of several volumes, so it would require the combined knowledge of several students, each in his several sphere. While, therefore, no portion of the Library has been unnoticed, it will, the writer trusts, be readily pardoned, should those portions with which he is specially acquainted, and in the direction of which his own line of work specially leads, seem to any to occupy more prominence than others of equal importance. It is worthy of notice that, in tracing the growth and history of the Library, the fact of its older divisions having undergone comparatively little change in arrangement, greatly facilitates examination, and, at the same time, often imparts an interest of its own to well-nigh each successive shelf of books; for each tier has thus its own record of successive benefactions and successive purchases to display, and leads us on step by step from one year to another.

'Bowers of Paradise!' Thus it was that an enthusiastic Hebrew student, writing of the Bodleian but a few years ago, apostrophized the little cells and curtained cages wherein readers sit, while hedged in and canopied with all the wisdom and learning of bygone generations, which here bloom their blossoms and yield up their fruits. And, as if answering in actual living type to the parable which the Eastern metaphor suggests, these cells from year to year have been and (though of late more infrequently) still are, the resort of grand and grave old bees, majestic in size and deportment, of sonorous sound, and covered with the dust, as it were, of ages. Just as a solemn rookery befits an ancestral mansion, so these Bees of the Bodleian form a fitting accompaniment to the place of their choice. And while the Metaphor well describes the character of that place whither men resort for refreshment amidst the work of the world and for the recruiting of mental strength for the doing of such work, so the Type well describes those who from the bowers gather sweetness and wealth, first for their own enriching and next for the enriching of others. Long then in these bowers may there be found busy hives of men; above all, those that gather thence, abundantly, such Wisdom as is præ melle ori.

Bodleian Library,
May 30, 1868.
CONTENTS.

Annals .............................................. 1

Appendix A. Account of a Tartar Lambskin Cloak 307

" B. Vellum-printed Books, added since 1830 310

" C. List of MSS. from Monastic and other Libraries 313

" D. MSS. and Miscellaneous Curiosities exhibited in the Library and Picture Gallery 319

" E. Numismatic Collection 339

" F. Past and Present Officers of the Library 341

" G. Rules of the Library 344

Lithograph of Shakespeare-autograph, to face page 301
ANNALS

OF THE

BODLEIAN LIBRARY.
ANNALS

OF THE

BODLEIAN LIBRARY.

In the north-east corner of St. Mary's Church, a church full of nooks little known to ordinary visitors, is a dark vaulted chamber (dark, because its windows have been built up), whose doors, when opened, only now reveal the abiding-place of the University fire-engines. Here of old sat the Chancellor of the University, surrounded by the Doctors and Masters of the Great Congregation, in a fashion which was formerly depicted in the great west window of St. Mary's Church, and is still represented on the University seal, and which, in the early part of the last century, was adopted by Dr. Richard Rawlinson as his book-plate, being engraved from the impression attached to his own diploma in Civil Law. Above this chamber there is another, lighted by four windows, containing forty-five feet in length and twenty in breadth, and now assigned as the lecture-room of the Professor of Law. Here was begun about 1367, and finally established and furnished in 1409, the first actual University Library, called after Bishop Thomas Cobham, of Worcester, who about 1320 (seven years before his death) had commenced preparations for the building of the room and the making provision for its contents.

1 When Duke Humphrey's Library was completed, and the books were removed thither, this upper room took the place of that beneath it as the Convocation
Wood tells us that before this time there were indeed some books kept in chests in St. Mary’s Church, which were to be lent out under pledges, as well as some chained to desks, which were only to be read in situ; but this University chest soon gave way to the formal Library, as, at a later period, another University chest was lost in funded investments and a banker’s balance. Another precursor of the general Library was found in the collection bequeathed to Durham College (on the site of which now stands Trinity College) in 1345 by one of its founders, the earnest lover and preserver of books, Philip of Bury; he of that charming book, that ‘tractatus vere pulcherrimus,’ the Philobiblion. He,—who apostrophizes books as the masters who teach without flogging or fleecing, without punishment or payment; as ears of corn, full of grain, to be rubbed only by apostolic hands; as golden pots of manna; as Noah’s ark and Jacob’s ladder, and Joshua’s stones of testimony and Gideon’s lamps and David’s scrip, and who says that in the noblest monasteries of England he found precious volumes defiled and injured by mice and worms, and abandoned to moths,—gave strict injunctions for the care of the large collection, gathered from all quarters, with which he enriched his College. It was to be free for purposes of study to all scholars, who might have the loan of any work of which there

House, ‘in which upper room,’ says Hearne, ‘was brave painted glass containing the arms of the benefactors, which painted glass continued till the times of the late rebellion.’ (Bliss, Reliquiae Hearneanae, ii. 693.)

1 The original treasure-chest, from which all academic money-grants are still said to be made, is preserved in the Bursary of Corpus Christi College, in which college it was kept in accordance with the statutes of the University, tit. xx. § 1.

9 The Bishop’s Bibliomania is thus noticed by a contemporary, W. de Chambre, in his Continuatio Hist. Dunelm. (Hist. Dunelm. Scripti. tres; Surtees Society, 1839, p. 130):—‘Iste summe delectabatur in multitudine librorum. Plures enim libros habuit, sicut passim dicidebat, quam omnes Pontifices Angliae. Et preter eos quos habuit in diversis maneriis suis, repositos separatim, ubicunque cum sua familia residerat, tot libris jacobant sparsim in camera qua dormivit, quod ingredientes vix stare poterant vel incedere nisi librum aliquem pedibus conculcarent.’ was a duplicate, provided they left a pledge exceeding it in value, but for purposes of transcription no volume was to go beyond the walls of the house. A register was to be kept, and a yearly visitation was to be held. Some of these books, on the dissolution of the College by Henry VIII, are said to have been transferred to Duke Humphrey's Library, and some to Balliol College.

The Librarian of Cobham's Library was also entitled Chaplain to the University, and as such was ordered, in 1412, to offer masses yearly for those who were benefactors of the University and Library, and was endowed with half a mark yearly, as well as with £5 issuing from the assize of bread and ale, which had been granted to the University by King Henry IV, who was also a principal contributor to the completion of the Library, and is therefore to this day duly remembered in the Bidding-Prayer at all the academic 'Commemorationes Solenniores.' But no trace remains of the devotional and sacred duties once attaching to the office, and laymen have been eligible to it from the time of Bodley's re-foundation. The old regal stipend, however, amounting at last to £6 13s. 4d., continued to be paid to the Librarian, until in 1856, by the revised code of statutes, various small payments were consolidated; it is found entered in the annual printed accounts up to that year.

But not a score of years had passed after Cobham's Library had been actually completed and opened before the building of a room more worthy of the University was commenced. In 1426 the University began to erect the present noble Divinity School for the exercises in that faculty; but as their own means soon bedroom of the late centenarian President of Magdalene College, Dr. Routh, was in this respect just like Bishop Bury's; and as the latter sent his library from Durham to be in some sort a nucleus for an University Library at Oxford, so the former bequeathed his to Durham that it might assist the development of the University Library there.

---

1 Philobiblion, cap. xix.
made for the observance of the Duke’s obit. A catalogue of 364 of the MSS. is printed, from the lists preserved in the University Register, p. 758, vol. ii. of Rev. H. Anstey’s Documents Illustrative of Social and Academic Life at Oxford, published in the series of Chronicles issued by the Master of the Rolls. The extent of these gifts rendered the room at St. Mary’s quite insufficient for the purpose to which it was assigned, and the University therefore, in a letter to the Duke, dated July 14, 1444, informed him of their intention to erect a more suitable building, of which (as a delicate way, probably, of bespeaking his aid towards the cost, as well as of testifying their gratitude for past benefactions) they formally offered him the title of Founder. In the subjoined note is given an extract from this letter (copied from the Register of Convocation), which is interesting from its description of the inconveniences of the old room, and the advantages of the new site. And this new building, first contemplated in A.D. 1444

1 Register of Convoc. F., ff. 53b, 54b. The subsequent gifts are entered in the same Register as follows:—

1. Last day of Feb., 1440. A letter to thank the Duke for 126 volumes brought by John Kyrekeby. (f. 57b.)
2. Nov. 10, 1441. Letter acknowledging ten books (Treatises of Augustine, Rabans, &c.) received through Will. Say, proctor, and John Kyrekeby. (ff. 59b–60.)
4. Oct. 1443. Letter for another gift, number of volumes not specified. (f. 66.)
6. Feb. 1446. Letter of thanks for another gift, not specified. (f. 75b.)

2 Nemo illos [ libros ] sine admiratione conspicit, cunctis una voce testantibus, se nuncquam libros tanta claritate conspicuos, tanta gravitate refertos vidisse. . . .
Et ut per hoc, si quid maximo addi posit, tante munificentie gloria ftat illustrior, optamus sacram et celebrem scientiarum sedem reparari, ubi honorificentius et ad utilitatem studentium multo commodius libri vestri, ab aliiis segregati, collocentur. Jam enim si quis, ut fit, uni libro inhaeres, alii studere volentibus ad trec vel quatuor pro vicinitate colligationis praecludit accessum. Itaque locus huic rei nobis maxime videtur idoneus ubi venerabilis vir, modo Cancellarius noster, semper reverendus pater amantissimus Magister Thomas Chace, spectabilem.
and finished about 1480, forms now the central portion of the great Reading-Room, still retaining its old advantages of convenience and of seclusion 'a strepitu sæculari.'

The Duke's MSS. were, as became the object of his gift, very varied in character. With works in Divinity are mingled in the catalogue a large number in Medicine and Science, together with some in lighter literature, amongst which latter are found no less than seven MSS. of Petrarch and three of Boccaccio. Some additional MSS, being 'all the Latyn bokes that he had,' together with £100 towards the completion of the 'Divyne Scoles,' which the Duke had intended to bequeath, but the formal bequest of which was prevented by his dying intestate in 1447, were subsequently procured, although with considerable difficulty. But only three out of the whole number of his MSS. are now known to exist in the present Library. One of these is a fine copy of books iv.–ix. of Valerius Maximus, with the commentary by D. de Burgo, and with an index by John de Whestamstede, Abbot of St. Albans (now marked, Auctarium, F. infra, l. 1*); the second is a translation by L. Aretine of the Politics of Aristotle (marked, Auct. F. v. 27); and the third, the Epistles of Pliny (Auct. F. ii. 23). The first bears the Duke's arms; novarum Scolarum fabricam ad cetera sue virtutis testimonia insigni mensura ab humo erexit, quam nos cito, quoad exigua suppeditabat facultas, promovimus. Hic locus, propter a strepitu sæculari removetur, Bibliotecam admodum videtur conveniens, cujus fundationis titulum, si Magnanimitati vestrae acceptabili fuerit, cum omni devotione offerimus.' Register F. ff. 71b, 72. We find from an entry on the latter page that on January 13, 1444 (-5), 'liber Platonis in Phedro' (sic) was lent by Convocation to the Duke.

1 They were not received by August, 1450, on the 28th of which month a letter was written from Convocation to Thomas Bokelonde, Esq., and John Summerset, M.D., on the subject. (Register F. ff. 88b–9.)

2 It contains inscriptions recording its gift by Whethamstede 'ad usum scolarium studencium Ozeniae,' with anathemas upon those who should alienate it, or destroy, were it but its title: 'Si quis rapiat, raptim titulumve retractet, vel Judæ laqueum vel furcas sensiat.'
the second has an original dedication to him by the translator; the last (which was restored to the University by Dr. Robert Master, Oct. 30, 1620) contains his own autograph. Six MSS. now in the British Museum, which formerly belonged to the Duke, are described in Sir H. Ellis' Letters of Eminent Literary Men, (printed by the Camden Society,) pp. 357–8. Two of these appear in the List of Humphrey's benefaction to Oxford; for Harl. 1705, which is a translation of Plato's Politics by Peter Candidus, or White, who gave it to the Duke, is doubtless the book entered at the end of the List as 'Item, novam traductionem totius Politeiae Platonicae;' while Cotton, Nero. D. v., the Acts of the Council of Constance, appears at fol. 67. Another of these six MSS, Harl. 988, is an anonymous commentary on the Canticles, which formerly belonged to Sir Robert Cotton, and which contains an inscription by him intended to commemorate his returning it to the University Library in 1602. It came into Harley's possession amongst Bishop Stillingfleet's MSS, all of which were bought by him. A letter from Wanley to Hearne, in which the book is mentioned, is preserved in the Bodleian in a Rawlinson MS. (Letters xvii.) under date of Oct. 13, 1714, Hearne's reply to which is printed by Sir H. Ellis, ubi supra; while Wanley's rejoinder is also found in the above MS, dated Oct. 27, in which he says, 'As for my Lord's MS. of the Canticles, designed for the Bodleian Library by Sir Robert Cotton, I know not how you find it to have once belonged to Humphrey, duke of Gloucester. My Lord has indeed two of his books, which we know to have been his, for certain; because one of them (which was given to his Lordship) hath a note therein of his hand-writing, and the other hath his armes and stile on the outside, as also his library-mark. This last (which was bought of Sir Simonds

---

1 Two treatises on the Canticles, by Gilbert Porret and Musca, were contained in the Duke's first gift to Oxford. (Anstey, vol. ii. p. 759.)
D'Ewes), together with the Cotton MS. of the Canticles, I besought his Lordship to give to the University for your Library, and I hope his Lordship will do so in a little time.' Another of the Duke's books, being Capgrave's Commentary on Genesis, which occurs in the second list of those given to the University, is now in the library of Oriel College. One volume, containing, among other philosophical treatises, Plato's Phaedo, Timaeus, &c, with the Duke's autograph, 'Cest livre a moy Homfrey duc de Gloucester' (given to him by an Abbot of St. Alban's) is in Corpus Christi College, 243. And a copy of Wickliffe's Bible, in two volumes, which bears Humphrey's arms, is amongst the Egerton MSS. (617–8), Brit. Mus.

The large increase of treasures which these benefactions brought to the University probably caused the first institution of a formal Visitatio. On Nov. 29, 1449, we find that Visitors were appointed by Congregation for the purpose of receiving from the Chaplain an account of the books contained in the Library¹.

Duke Humphrey was followed in the good work of the Divinity School and Library by another whose name still retains its place in the formal list of benefactors, Bishop Thomas Kempe, of London, who, besides contributing very largely in money towards the completion of the former, sent some books to the latter in 1487, some seven years after the new room had been finally completed and opened for use. But Antony Wood (in whose pages records of other benefactors may be found) tells us that very few years passed before the Library began to lose some of its newly-acquired treasures; for Scholars borrowed books upon petty and insufficient pledges, and so chose to forfeit the latter rather than return the former², while tradition reported that Polydore Virgil, the

¹ Wood MS. F 27. (Bodl. Libr.)
² A sale of a collection of (apparently) these forfeited pledges, or else of books deposited as securities for loans of money, took place in the year 1546. On Jan. 18, historian, being at length refused any further opportunities of abstraction, obtained a special licence from Henry VIII for the taking out any MS. for his use! From this traditionary report Sir H. Ellis, in his introduction to a translation of Virgil's history, printed for the Camden Society in 1844, endeavours to vindicate his author's reputation, but more by conjecture than evidence. In 1513 a Chaplain and Librarian was elected, named Adam Kirkebote. The new Librarian, soon after, supplicated Congregation that on Festival Days he should not be bound to open the Library before twelve o'clock; a practice which, commencing at that day, does still unto this (the Library on Holy Days during Term being now not opened until the conclusion of the University sermon, at eleven o'clock) witness to the religious spirit which pervades all the old institutions of Oxford. In 1527, when one Flecher was Chaplain, it is recorded that 'Magister' Claymond (doubtless the President of Corpus Christi College, of that name) was permitted by vote of Congregation to take Pliny's Natural History out of the Library. In 1543 Humphrey Burnford was elected Chaplain on Oct. 31, in the room of — Whytt, deceased. It was probably during his tenure of office that the Library was destroyed. For in 1550 the Commissioners deputed by Edward VI for reformation of the University visited the Libraries in the spirit of John Knox, destroying, without examination, all MSS. ornamented by illuminations or rubricated initials as being eminently Popish, and leaving the rest exposed to any chance of injury and robbery. The traditions which Wood has recorded as having been learned at the mouths of aged men who had in their turn received them from those who were contemporaneous with the Visitation, are abundantly confirmed by the well-known descriptions of Leland and Bale of what went on in other places, and therefore, although no direct documentary evidence of the proceedings of the spoilers is known to exist, we may believe that Wood's account of pillage and waste, of MSS. burned, and sold to tailors for their measures, to bookbinders for covers, and the like, until not one remained in situ, is not a whit exaggerated. One solitary entry there is, however, in the University Register (I. fol. 157a), which, while it records the completion of the catastrophe, sufficiently thereby corroborates the story of all that preceded, viz. the entry which tells that in Convocation on Jan. 25, 1555–6, 'electi sunt hii venerabiles viri, Vice-cancellarius et Procuratores, Magister Morwent, præses Corporis Christi, et Magister Wright, ad vendenda subsellia librorum in publica Academiae bibliotheca, ipsius Universitatis nomine.' The books of the 'public' library had all disappeared; what need then to retain the shelves and stalls, when no one thought of replacing their contents, and when the University could turn an honest penny by their sale? and so the venerabiles viri made a timber-yard of Duke Humphrey's treasure-house.

1545-6, the following decree passed Convocation: 'Decretum est authoritate Convocationis Magne ut eis in domo inferiori sub domo Congregationis, et omnes libri pro pignoribus jacentes, aut etiam aliis in eadem domo inventi, venderentur, secundum arbitrium quinque in eadem Convocatione eligendorum. Electi itaque sunt et a Vice-Cancellario admissi ibidem, Doctor Standishe, Mr. Parret, procurator, Mr. Slythers, Mr. Symonds, et Mr. Wattsone.' Reg. I. 107b.

1 Wood MS. F. 27. 2 Ibid. 3 Ibid. fol. 94a.

But four years after the final despoiling of the Library there was an undergraduate entered at Magdalen College, who, by the good Providence which always out of evil brings somewhat to counterpoise and correct, was to be moved by the sight of the ruin and desolation to restore what his seniors had destroyed, and to reconstruct the old Plantagenet's Library on such a basis, and with such means for carrying on its re-edification, that the glory of the latter house should soon eclipse that of the former. All around him he doubtless found traces of the recent destruction; his stationer may have sold him books bound in fragments of those MSS. for which the University but a century before had consecrated the memory of the donors in her solemn prayers; the tailor who measured him for his sad-coloured doublet, may have done it with a strip of parchment brilliant with gold, that had consequently been condemned as Popish, or covered with strange symbols of an old heathen Greek’s devising, that probably passed for magical and unlawful incantations. And the soul of the young student must have burned with shame and indignation at the apathy which had not merely tolerated this destruction by strangers, but had contentedly assisted in carrying it out to its thorough completion. Himself a successful student, he became eager to help others to whom thus the advantages of a library were denied; and, for a while without fee or reward, undertook a public Greek lecture in the Hall of Merton College, to which college he had been elected in 1563. And when, after years thus spent in academic pursuits, Thomas Bodley betook himself to diplomatic service abroad, he still, amidst all the distractions of foreign and domestic politics, preserved his affection for the scenes and the studies of his early familiarity. So, when the days came

1 Bodley appears to have been altogether an accomplished linguist. James, in the preface to the first Catalogue of 1605, after speaking of his proficiency in the classical languages, adds, ‘Linguis vero exoticae, veluti italicam, Gallicam, Hispanicam, Hebraeam praeipue, ceterarum omnium parentem, tam perfecte callet, ut illo neminem fere scientiorem invenies.’ And in one of four letters addressed to him on the interpretation of passages in the Old Testament, which are printed among the Epistles of J. Drusius, De Quasitis (1595, p. 40), Drusius says, ‘Vere dicam, Bodlee, et intelligis optime litteras Hebræas, et amas unice earum peritos.’ The same volume contains also one letter to his brothers, Laurence, Miles, and Josias, on the Pastor of Hermas.
wherein statecraft began to weary him and Courts ceased to charm, his thoughts reverted to the place where, free from these, he might still, although in a more private capacity, labour for the good of the commonwealth; he remembered the room once precious to students, 'scientiarum sedes,' as the University had called it of old, but now destitute alike both of science and of seats. 'And thus,' says he himself, 'I concluded at the last to set up my staff at the Library-door in Oxon; being thoroughly persuaded that, in my solitude and suerease from the commonwealth-affairs, I could not busy myself to better purpose than by reducing that place (which then in every part lay ruined and waste) to the publick use of students.' So therefore, on Feb. 23, 1597–8, he wrote a letter to the Vice-Chancellor, offering that whereas 'there hath bin heretofore a publike library in Oxford, which, you know, is apparant by the roome itself remayning, and by your statute records, I will take the charge and cost upon me, to reduce it again to his former use,' first by fitting it up with shelves and seats, next by procuring benefactions of books, and lastly by endowing it with an annual rent. This offer being accepted with great gratitude, other letters followed from him in March, in which he desired that delegates should be chosen to consider the best mode of fitting up the room, and mentioned an offer on the part of his own College, Merton, to provide timber for the purpose. Two years were spent in the carrying out of this work and in the preliminary arrangements. Amongst these preparations was the putting up the beautiful roof which to this day is such an object of deserved admiration. It is divided into square compartments, on each of which are painted the arms of the University, being the open Bible, with seven seals¹, between three ducal crowns, on the open pages of which are the words (so truly fitting for a Christian School) ‘Dominus Illuminatio mea’; while on bosses that intervene between each compartment are painted the arms of Bodley himself, being five martlets with a crescent for difference, quartered with the arms of Hone (his mother’s family), two bars wavy between three billets; on a chief the three ducal crowns of the University shield, ‘quarum merito gloriám ab Academia derivat.’ (Wake, Rex Platon. p. 12.) The striking motto ‘Quarta perennis erit’ was assigned to Bodley at the same time with this academic augmentation². When, in 1610, the eastern wing of the Library was erected, a similar roof was added, as was also done to the Picture Gallery (built between 1613–1619); in the latter room the roof, having become decayed and out of repair, was unhappily altogether removed in the year 1831, and a plaster ceiling, divided into compartments, substituted. A few of the panels of this roof have been preserved, one bearing the figures of two cats, which used to be an object of interest to juvenile visitors, and a series bearing the letters which compose Sir Thomas Bodley’s name, together with a portrait of him upon a centre panel. A high-backed arm-chair, the Librarian’s seat of office in the Library, was formed out of oak from

2 This letter (with the subsequent correspondence) is printed by Hearne, at the end of the Chronicle of John of Glastonbury, vol. ii. p. 612, from the Reg. of Convoc. M*: f. 31a.

¹ Most probably intended to refer to the Apocalyptic book (Rev. v. 1.), and to signify the unsealing of Divine Revelation, the fountain of all wisdom, by our Blessed Lord. Sir J. Wake prefers to take the seven seals as representing the seven liberal arts.

² The motto appears to have varied. It is sometimes given in titles of books printed at Oxford about the time of James I, as ‘Sapientiae et Felicitatis;’ and in an heraldic MS. of the seventeenth century as ‘XX. Exod. Decem ... Omnipotens mandata. Verbum Dei manet in eternum. Amen.’ (Rawl. B. xl. f. 81.) Others [have] this, ‘Veritas liberabit, Bonitas regnabit;’ and others this, ‘In principio erat Verbum,’ &c. (Hearne, in Rawl. MS. C. 876, f. 51.)

³ Wake notices it as a singular coincidence that the Library was first opened on the day of the ‘Quatuor coronati Martyres,’ Nov. 8, whom, by mistake, he calls ‘Tres.’
the roof, and an engraving hangs in the Gallery which represents the room before its change for the worse.

On June 25, 1600, Bodley wrote to the Vice-Chancellor, mentioning that, as the mechanical work was now brought to a good pass, he had begun to busy himself in the gathering of books, and had provided a Register for the enrolment of the names of all benefactors, with particulars of their gifts. This Register (formerly, like all the books in folio, chained to its desk), consisting of two large folio volumes, on vellum, now lies on a table in the great room, and is an object of notice by most visitors. The volumes are ornamented exteriorly with silver-gilt bosses on their massy covers, on which are engraved the arms of Bodley and those of the University, and interiorly in many places with the donors' coats of arms painted in their proper colours, and with various devices. Vol. i. extends from 1600 to 1688, containing 428 pages in double columns; and commences with a printed record of the gifts for the first four years, on pp. 1–90. The following printed title is prefixed: 'Munificent-tissimis atque optimis cujusvis ordinis, dignitatis, sexus, qui Bibliothecam hanc libris, aut pecuniis numeratis ad libros coemendos, aliove quovis genere ampliarunt, Thomas Bodleius, eques aura-tus, honorarium hoc volumen, in quod hujuscemodi donationes, simulque nomina donantium singillatim referuntur, pietatis, memoriae, virtutisque causa, dedit, dedicavit.' A paragraph follows, which mentions Bodley's own work of refitting and endowing, and notes that his own large gifts are not entered because he hopes throughout his life to make continually large additions. The whole of this title is printed in the preface to James' first Catalogue, issued in 1605, who was probably part-writer of it.1 Wake
(Rex Platonicus, p. 120) speaks of the Register, 'aureis umbilicis

1 See Reliquiae Bodleiana, p. 158.
fibulisque fulgido, as always lying 'eminentissimo loco,' a prominent object of notice to all who entered the Library. Vol. ii. extends from 1692 to 1795, ending in the middle of the volume, on p. 216; but there is reason to fear that there are many omissions in the later portion of its period. Each volume has an index of names. The gifts of the principal donors, as recorded in this Register up to its close, are printed in Gutch's edition of Wood's History, vol. ii. part ii. pp. 920–950. It will not be necessary, therefore, to mention here the names of many, but of such only as are 'e principibus principes.' From the year 1796 inclusive, when the gifts of donors began to be entered in the annual printed catalogues of purchases and statements of accounts, this MS. Register ceased to be used.

Among the first and largest benefactors in the year 1600 occur Lord Buckhurst (afterwards Earl of Dorset), the Earl of Essex, Lords Hunsdon, Montacute, [editions of the Fathers], Lisle (afterwards Leicester), Lumley¹, and William Gent, who gave a large collection of books, chiefly medical.

Many volumes were given about this time by Bodley, which had been collected in Italy by Bill, the London bookseller, who was employed by Sir Thomas to travel on the Continent as his agent for this purpose.

The famous copy of the French Romance of Alexander (now numbered Bodl. 264) must have been one of the MSS. given by Bodley himself at the commencement of his work, as it is found entered in the printed Catalogue of 1605, but does not occur in the Benefactors' Register. It is decorated with a large number of beautiful paintings on a chequered background of gold and colour; but its special interest lies in the illustrations at the foot of about half the pages, which exhibit the most quaint and grotesque representations of customs, trades, amusements, dress, &c., of the time. Some of these were engraved by Street; and four specimens, together with one of the larger miniatures illustrating the text, are given by Pulham in his Bibli. Descr., vol. i., where, at pp. 198-201, he discusses, in his own peculiar fashion, on the merits of the volume. A notice of the book may also be found in Warton’s Hist. of Angl. Poetry, edit. 1840, vol. i. p. 142. At f. 208 is the following colophon, which is of much interest, as affording evidence that the work of the painter occupied upwards of five years:—

¹ One of the books given by Lord Lumley has the autograph of Cranmer, 'Thomas Cantuarien.,' on the title-page. The book, appositely enough, bears the title of Siebardi Antidotum contra diversas omnium fere seculorum bareses, fol. Bas. 1528.

"Quod quinque annos du bon roi Alexandre, est venit par faveur, les accompagnement,

Le Rossis du pavou et ce pres, qui au perescript

Le sainct 24 de Decembre, jam MCCCXXXVIII.

Expansa a modo scyne crimen liber,

Apostro loguesum comment de det honorem.

Au petit livre de la maison de le enlumeur au avoit jour d’aulc. Per Johan de guise, d’au do grant, MCCCXXXVIII.

This is followed by a continuation (of later date) of the romance, in Northern English verse, on seven leaves; and lastly, by a French Romance of the ‘grant kaan à la graunt cite de Tambalu.’ A writer’s name is given in the following lines on f. 208, but in a hand apparently not that of any part of the book:—

"I am tibi at Chiriu, quaestum liber explicit iste.

Nomen scriptoris est Thomas Plenus Amoris."

The earliest owner’s name occurring in the volume is that of

---

1 Printed by Rev. J. Stevenson at the end of the Romance of Alexander, edited by him for the Ramburgh Club in 1840, from Ashmole MS. 44.

2 Plenus-Amoris, or Fullahow, seems to have been the name of a family of scribes. But the expression seems often also to have been used for the mere sake of rhyme. In the colophon of a translation of Alan Chartier in Rawl. A. 338, are these lines:—

‘Nomen scriptoris,

Del gracia, Plenus Amoris:

Caret meroris

Dext det sibi omnibus horis.’

Peter Plenus-Amoris was the scribe of Fairfax 6; Thomas, of Univ. Coll. MS.
'Richart de Widevelle, seigneur de Rivières,' recorded in an inscription on the cover at the end, which proceeds to say that 'le dist Seigneur acetast le dist liure lan de grace mille ccclxvi.
le premier jour de lan a Londres.' Rivers' own autograph follows ('Ryverys'), with some words in French, written in a perfectly frantic scrawl. Subsequent owners were 'Gyles Strangwayes' and 'Jaspere Fyfolle' (whose signatures are engraved by Dibdin, ubi supra), and 'Thomas Smythe'.

A.D. 1601.

It is from this date that our notes on the history of the Library can begin to assume an annalistic form. A gift of £20 from Herbert Westphaling, Bishop of Hereford, was expended in the purchase of books with great success; no fewer than thirty were obtained, and amongst them were, 'Evangelia quatuor Saxonica, lingua et charactere vetustiss.,' being the MS. from which John Foxe had taken the text of the Saxon Gospels in the edition published at the expense of Archbishop Parker in 1571, and which was subsequently re-edited by Junius. It is now numbered, Bodl. MS. 441.
An early edition (qu. edito princeps?) of the Gospels in the Russian language (now placed among the Bodley MSS. 213) appears among some books given by Sir Henry Savile, whose brother-historian and antiquary, William Camden, is also registered as the donor of a few MSS. and printed books. Thomas Allen, M.A., of 142; William, of All Souls' 51; Geoffrey, of Sloane 513 (Brit. Mus.) In the following instances the name appears to be used only rhythmically:—

"Nomen scriptoris est Jhon Wilde plenus amoris."—(Rawlinson B. 214.)
"Nomen scriptoris Jon. semper plenus amoris,
Esteby cognomen, cui semper det Deus homen' (sic).—(Bodl. 643.)
1 Probably this book is the 'large liure en francois tres bien estumines de le Rymance de Alexandre,' once in the library of Tho. of Woodstock, Duke of Gloyc.
See Mr. Coxo's pref. to Gower's Vox Clam. (Roxb. Club, 1850,) p. 50.
2 Savile's benefactions were continued in the years 1609 and 1614, and in 1620 he sent a large number of Greek and Latin MSS.
Gloucester Hall, the astrologer, gave twenty MSS; the rest of his collection came subsequently to the Library, included in that of Sir Kenelm Digby, to whom Allen had bequeathed it. One of the twenty now given was an extremely curious volume, chiefly written in the ninth century (marked Auctarium F. iv. 32), including in its contents an original drawing (engraved in Hickes’ Thesaurus, p. 144) by St. Dunstan of himself as prostrate at the feet of the throned Christ, a grammatical tract by Eutychius (or Eutex, as the scribe calls him, while professing doubt as to the right form), with Welsh glosses (noticed by Lhuyd in his Archeol. Brit., p. 226); the first book of Ovid De Arte amandi, with similar glosses; and lections in Greek and Latin from the Prophets and Pentateuch, amongst which is one from Hosea containing, in the Latin version, a line or two unlike any known early version, (although faithful to the Hebrew), but found also in a quotation in Gildas. Capt. Josias

---

1 In the year 1604 he appears again as the donor of some printed books. A notice of one of his MSS. (now Bodl. 198), which once belonged to Bishop Groteste, was by him given to the Friars Minor at Oxford, and by them, about 1433, to Gascoigne, who presented it to Durham College, is to be found in Warton’s Life of Sir T. Pope, 1774, pp. 392-3. The volume contains MS. notes by both Groteste and Gascoigne.

2 Another relic of Dunstan is preserved among the Hatton MSS. No. 30 of that collection. ‘Expositio Augustini in Apocalypsin,’ written in Anglo-Saxon characters, has the following inscription in large letters on the last leaf: ‘Dunstan Abbas hunc libellum scribere jussit.’

3 These glosses, together with an ‘Alphabetum Nemnivii’ in Runic characters, (of which a facsimile is given in Hickes’ Thesaurus, p. 168), and some Welsh and Latin notes on weights and measures, are printed, with copious notes, by Zeuss in his Grammatica Celtica, 8vo. Leipzig. 1853, vol. ii. pp. 1076-96. The MS. is described also in Wanley’s Catalogue, p. 63, and the latest account of it, together with a facsimile from the tract by Eutychius, is to be found in Villemarquè’s Notice des principaux MSS. des anciens Bretons, 8vo. Par. 1856. And the Alphabet of Nemnivus, together with another, and somewhat later, Runic Alphabet (of the ‘winged’ form), found in Bodl. MS. 572, is printed at pp. 10-12 of the Ancient Welsh Grammar of Edeyn, edited for the Welsh MSS. Soc. in 1856 by Rev. John Williams, ab Ithel.

4 This reading was pointed out to the author by Rev. A. W. Hadden, B.D.
Bodley\(^1\) gave an astronomical sphere and other instruments in brass, which now stand in the south window adjoining the entrance to the Library. But the great benefactor of the year was the newly-appointed Librarian, Thomas James, who gave various MSS., chiefly patristic (which, however, Wood says, 'he had taken out of several College libraries'), and sixty printed volumes. From the first preparation of the new foundation Bodley had fixed upon James, then a Fellow of New College, as his Library-Keeper. The volume of letters published by Hearne (from Bodl. MS. 699) in 1703, under the title of Reliquiae Bodleianae, consists chiefly of those which the Founder addressed to James while his collection of books was in process of formation, but unfortunately they have no dates of years, and Hearne printed them simply as they came into his hands, without any attempt to determine their order of sequence. We learn from these that James' salary at the outset was £5 13s. 4d. quarterly; but almost at once he threatened to 'strike' unless it were raised to an annual stipend of £30 or £40, while at the same time he demanded permission to marry. This latter requisition appeared particularly grievous to Bodley, who had made celibacy a stringent condition in his Statutes, and he forthwith expostulated strongly with his Librarian on these his 'unseasonable and unreasonable motions' (p. 52). The upshot, however, was that Bodley, very unwillingly, consented to become the 'first breaker' of his own institution, (which 'hereafter,' he says, 'I purpose to become inviolable,' and, for the love he bore to James, allowed him to marry\(^2\). But it was not until the year 1813 that the Statute was altered and the Librarian released from his obligation of perpetual celibacy, and even then, by a singular

---

1 Afterwards Sir Josias, a younger brother of Sir Thomas, and Governor of Duncannon in Ireland, author of a humorous Latin tour in Lecale (a barony in the county of Down), which, although not unfrequently met with in MS, has never yet been printed.

2 Reliquiae Bodl. p. 162. See also p. 183.
and unmeaning compromise, it was ordered that he, as well as the Under-Librarians, should be unmarried at the time of election. The whole restriction was, however, finally removed on the revision of the Statutes in 1856. But its infringement appears to have been again tolerated, in one instance, at least, during the last century, viz. in the case of Dr. Hudson. Hearne\textsuperscript{1} enters the following ‘memorandum’ of uncharitable hearsay gossip respecting his quondam chief and friend: ‘Dr. Hudson was married when he was elected Librarian. His first wife was one Biesley. That he hath now is his second. It is said that he was married to this Biesley when he was Taberder of Queen’s. The Dr. hath been of a loose, profligate, and irreligious life, as I have often heard. The family of the Harrisons he is married into now is good for just nothing, being as stingy (if it can be) as himself.’

A.D. 1602.

The largest pecuniary donor of this year was Blount, Lord Mountjoy (afterwards Earl of Devon), who forwarded £100 to Sir T. Bodley from Waterford; which were expended upon books in most classes of literature, including music. Among various gifts of MSS. were some Russian volumes from Lancelot Browne, M.D., and (together with Persian, Finnish, &c.) from Sir Rich. Lee, ambassador in Muscovy. Lord Cobham gave £50 in money, with the promise of ‘divers MSS. out of St. Augustin’s library in Canterbury\textsuperscript{2}.’ ‘Biblia Latina pulcherrima,’ 2 vols. fol. was given by George Rives, Warden of New College. This is probably a huge and magnificent specimen of twelfth-century work, now numbered Auctarium, E. infra, 1, 2\textsuperscript{3}. But the year was specially marked by the donation of 47 MSS. (including some early English volumes) from Walter (afterwards Sir Walter) Cope; and above all, by the gift, from the Dean and Chapter of Exeter to their fellow-countryman Bodley, of 81 Latin MSS. from their Chapter Library. By what right they thus alienated their corporate property no one probably cared to enquire; but, from the tokens of neglect still visible upon the books, we may conclude that only by this alienation were they in all likelihood saved from ultimate destruction: for they nearly all bear more or less sign of having been exposed to great damp, which in several instances has well-nigh destroyed the initial and final leaves. Most of them are beautiful specimens of early penmanship, ranging chiefly from the eleventh century to the thirteenth; and amongst them is that precious relic of English Church offices, the Service-book given to Exeter Cathedral by Bishop Leofric in the reign of Edward Conf., described in the Registrum Benefactorum simply as ‘Missale antiquissimum.’ This is happily perfect; in size a small and thick quarto volume, written on very stout vellum, and containing 377 leaves. Four other volumes (possibly more) were also gifts of Leofric to his Church; they are now numbered Auct. D. II. 16 (the four Gospels), Auct. F. I. 15 (Boethius and Persius), Auct. F. III. 6 (Prudentius), and Bodley MS. 708 (Gregory’s Pastorale.) They each contain an inscription in Latin and Anglo-Saxon, varying in expression, but all to the following effect (as in the last-mentioned volume): ‘Hunc librum dat Leofricus episcopus ecclesie Sancti Petri Apostoli in Exonia ad sedem suam episcopalem, pro remedio animæ suæ, ad utilitatem successorum suorum. Siquis autem illum inde abstulerit, perpetuae maledictioni subjacet.’

Fiat. Ðæg boc ðæl lœxuric Ḟ. in[to] Scœ petitær muntære on exænceþære þæg hig þæscorporol ʃr. hig æþerþilgenþū to niþþþorþinþū. ʃg hig hœa ut æþrebœ hæbbe he ece gentþêpunge miþ eallœ þeþþlum. ÆŒ.’ To the MS. of the Gospels are prefixed very curious lists in Anglo-Saxon of the lands, vestments, books, &c, given by Leofric to his Church, and of relics given by King Athelstan (of which another copy is preserved in the Missal); these lists are printed in the Monasticon, and the titles of the books are given in Wanley's Catalogue (p. 80).

The Library being now supplied with upwards of 2000 volumes, it was solemnly opened on Nov. 8 (the day appointed for the annual visitation,) by the Vice-Chancellor, with a procession of doctors and delegates. Meeting them at the door of the room, the Librarian hastily extemporized a short speech in honour of the occasion, 'in qua,' as the University Register records, 'tribus ferme versibus amplexus est omnia.'

A.D. 1603.

Sir Walter Raleigh appears in this year as a donor of £50. He is sometimes said to have procured for Oxford the library of Hieron. Osorius, which was carried off from Faro in Portugal (of which place Osorius had been bishop), when that town was captured by the English fleet under the Earl of Essex in 1598.
Raleigh was a captain in the squadron, and probably influenced the disposal of the books; but no direct mention has been found of his name in relation to them. Sir William Monson, in the account of the expedition given in his Naval Tracts, only says that the library 'was brought into England by us, and many of the books bestowed upon the new erected library of Oxford.' Eleven MSS. were given by Sir Rob. Cotton, of which the list in the Register is printed in Sir H. Ellis' Letters of Eminent Literary Men, issued by the Camden Society in 1843 (p. 103). One of these (Auct. D. II.
14) is the MS. of the Gospels, traditionally believed to be one of those two copies of the old Italic version sent by St. Gregory to St. Augustine in Britain, which were preserved in St. Augustine's Abbey, Canterbury¹; of which the other now exists among Archbp.
Parker's MSS. in Corp. Chr. Coll. Cambr., No. 286. They are both written in quarto, in uncial letters and double columns. Their date may possibly be somewhat later than that which is traditionally assigned; but at any rate they are certainly among what the historian Elmham calls 'primitiae librorum totius ecclesiae Anglicanae.'

On the last fly-leaf of the Bodley MS. is the following list of English Priests' libraries. 'Jelas bocas haue of Salomon prest. pis secodspel tphaht.
  j emantypluia j pe (erased) j pe æglisce saltepe j pe cpranc j ce tropere j pulf mep cild ðætteleuaui ('Ad Te levavi.') j pistolari j pe (erased) j ce immere.
  j ce capitelari.
(word erased) j pe spel boc. j sigap prest. pelece boc j Blakehad
boc. j Æilmer ce grete Satep. j ce little tropere ropbeande.
  j ce Donatum. xv bocas Ealsric Æilpine. Godric. j Bealdeuine abb j Freoden j hu—(torn) j Æuregise.' Several leaves are wanting at the beginning and one at the end; the book commences at
S. Matt. iv. 14, and ends in S. John xxi. 16. It now numbers 172 leaves, besides the fly-leaf, and contains 29 lines in a column; the Cambridge MS. has 25 lines.

Two Russian MSS. were given in this year by John Mericke, English Consul in Russia, and a collection of Italian books by Sir Michael Dormer.

A.D. 1604.

On June 20, letters patent were granted by James I, styling the library by the founder's name, and licensing the University to hold lands, &c, in mortmain for its maintenance, to an amount not exceeding 300 marks per annum'.

In the list of donors occur Sir Christopher Heydon, Sir Jerome Horsey (whose gift includes a MS. of the Gospels in Russian, and rolls containing forms of letters, &c, in the autograph of the Czar Ivan Basilides), Sir Ralph Winwood (17 Greek MSS.), Robert Barker the printer, and Sir Henry Wotton (a MS. of the Koran).

1 Wood MS. F. 27.
A.D. 1605.

The bust of Bodley, which is seen in the large room, was sent by Sackville, Earl of Dorset, the Chancellor of the University. It attracted the notice of King James upon his entering the Library on the fourth day of his visit to Oxford in August of this year, who, upon reading its inscription, indulged in the very mild pun that the Founder should rather be called Sir Thomas Godly than Bodly¹. And, looking on the well-filled cases, he said he had often had proof from the University of the fruits of talent and ability, but had never before seen the garden where those fruits grew and whence they were gathered. He examined various MSS. of the Holy Scriptures, and especially of the old English version, as well as of the Ethiopic, on the authority of which, ‘more suo, summo cum judicio disceptavit.’ Then, taking up Gaguinus’ treatise De Puritate Conceptionis Virg. Mar., printed at Paris in 1498, he remarked that the author had so written about purity as if he wished that it should only be found on the title of his book; and said it had often been his desire that such objectionable writings (especially on religious subjects) could be altogether suppressed rather than be tolerated to the corruption of minds and manners. He admitted, however, that probably there was no disadvantage from their being stored up in collections of this kind. Moved to a wonderful temper of liberality, the king then offered to present from all the libraries of the royal palaces whatsoever precious and rare books Sir T. Bodley, on examination, might choose to carry away; and promised that the grant should be made under seal, lest any hindrance should arise. It appears² that this (somewhat hasty) grant was actually passed under the Privy Seal about the beginning of November in the same year, and that ¹ This would-be witticism is made the subject of a quatrain in the Justa Funebrae Bodlei, p. 108.

Bodley expected to carry off a great many MSS. from Whitehall. Probably the full execution of his intentions was hindered, as he himself appears to have suspected might happen; at any rate, there is very little in the Library that tells of having come from the royal collections, except a few folio editions of the Fathers which once were in the possession of Hen. VIII, as his arms stamped upon the covers testify\(^1\), and three or four MSS. which bear like evidence of having belonged to James I. Upon leaving the room, after spending considerable time in its examination, the king exclaimed that were he not King James he would be an University man; and that, were it his fate at any time to be a captive, he would wish to be shut up, could he but have the choice, in this place as his prison, to be bound with its chains, and to consume his days amongst its books as his fellows in captivity\(^2\).

In this year appeared the first Catalogue of the Library, compiled by Thomas James. It is a quarto volume, published by Joseph Barnes at Oxford, consisting of 425 pages, with an Appendix of 230 more; the Preface is dated June 27. The book is dedicated to Henry, Prince of Wales\(^3\). It includes both printed

---

\(^1\) His arms also occur in several places in a Greek MS. now numbered Auct. E. 1. 15. And there is one volume among Selden's books (8o. A. 24, Art. Seld.) which appears to possess considerable interest as having come from the library of the many-wived king. It is a fine copy of \(\text{æ}\)sop, with the \(\text{Batracomyomachia, etc.}\), printed by Froben in 1518, which may be conjectured, from the binding, to have been a gift from Henry to Anne Boleyn. The cover is of embossed calf; on one side is the Tudor rose supported by angels, with the sun, moon, and four stars above, encircled by the lines:—

\[\text{Hec rosa virtutis de celo missa sereno,}\]
\[\text{Eternum flores regia sceptra feret.}\]

Below are the initials A.H., conjoined with a knot. On the other side is a representation of the Annunciation, with the same initials repeated.

\(^2\) The account of the king's visit is given in Sir J. Wake's \(\text{Reus Platonicus.}\)

\(^3\) pp. 116–123.

\(^8\) At the suggestion of Bodley, who thought that more reward was to be gained from the prince than from the king. (\textit{Reliquiae Bodl.} 206.)
books and MSS. arranged alphabetically under the four classes of Theology, Medicine, Law, and Arts, with lists of expositors of Holy Scripture, commentators on Aristotle, Hippocrates, and Galen, and in Civil and Canon Law. The legal and medical lists were added at Bodley's special desire. A continuation of this classified index, embracing writers on Arts and Sciences, Geography and History, is to be found in Rawlinson MS. Miscell. 730. It was drawn up by James, after his quitting the Library, for the use of young students in the faculty of Arts, in order to show his continued interest in them and in the place of his old occupation. In the preface he thus describes the arrangement of his book: 'Exhibeo, primo, libros distributos secundum facultates suas; secundo, dissectos in minutissimas portiones vel sectiones, idque alphabetice; tertio, habetis cognitos et exploratos auctores singulos qui de singulis subjectis vel generatim vel specialiam scripserunt libros, tractatus, epistolae; postremo, ne quid desit, habetis editiones certas, et maxime ex parte ex pluribus selectas et meliores, cito parabiles, digitos ad pluteos et pluteorum sectiones intendendo.' This volume came into Rawlinson's possession from Hearne, who notes in it: 'This MS. came out of the study of Dr. Anthony Hall, of Queen's College, Oxford, who married the widow of Dr. John Hudson, to whom this book once belong'd.'

A.D. 1606.

Chinese literature began to make its appearance even at this early date. Among the books bought with £20 given by Lady Kath. Sandys were, 'Octo volumina lingua Chinensi,' while two others, 'Excusa in regno et lingua Chinensi,' were bought, together with the donor's own 'Historie of Great Britaine,' with a gift of £5 from John Clapham.

1 Reliquiae Bodl. pp. 195, 256.
The books having some time since begun to crowd the room provided for them, so that James, in his Preface to the Catalogue of 1605, said there already seemed to be more need of a Library for the books than books for the Library, the Founder commenced in this year an extension of his building. On July 16 the first stone was laid of the eastern wing, and of the Proscolium, or vestibule of the Divinity School, beneath; which were completed by 1612, as in that year several donations were placed in the new room. An inscription in gold letters, in the front of this building, commemorates Bodley's work; having become barely legible, it has recently been restored to its pristine lustre by the care of the present Librarian. The noble east window contains some very curious and interesting relics in stained glass which were presented to the Library (with numerous other fragments, which adorn some of the other windows in the Library and partly fill two of those in the Picture Gallery), in 1797, by Alderman William Fletcher of Oxford, a zealous local antiquary and Churchman of the good old school. The three principal fragments represent: 1. Henry II, stripped naked, and suffering flagellation with birch rods, at the hands of two monks, before the shrine of Thomas à Becket. 2. The marriage (as supposed) of Henry VI with Margaret of Anjou, representing, says Dr. Rock, that portion of the ceremony which took place at the Church door; formerly in a window of Rollright Church, Oxfordshire. There is no evidence, however, to connect this representation with Henry VI, and it has been conjectured to describe his marriage chiefly from its corresponding in some very small degree to a representation of that event, formerly at Strawberry Hill, and described and engraved in Walpole's Anecdotes of Painting, i. 36. It is probably of an earlier date. 3. The doing homage by William, King of Scotland, with his abbots and barons, to Henry II in York Minster in 1171. Of the first of these, two coloured engravings, and of the second, one, are found in a copy of Gutch's Wood, which came to the Library from the same donor, Alderman Fletcher, in 1818, illustrated with very numerous and curious engravings and drawings, as well as enriched with some MS. notes, and bound in seven large quarto volumes.¹

1 It is probably to aid given for the erection of this structure that the following passage refers: 'To the building Bodley's Library at Oxford a considerable sum was contributed by the Bishop of London, being his share of the moneys paid into court for commutation of penance.' Archd. Hale's Notes to the Register of Worcester (Camden Soc. 1855), p. cxxviii. Aid was also given by the Crown, for on May 3, 1611, an order was issued by the Lord Treasurer to the officers of the woods at Stow, Shotover, &c, near Oxford, to deliver to Sir T. Bodley, for enlarging the Library, the timber which was to have been employed for making the Thames navigable to Oxford, a work which did not proceed. (Calendar of State Papers, Dom. Series, 1611-18, p. 25.)

2 See also under 1618.

3 Church of our Fathers, i. 421.

The large coats of arms appear to have been inserted in 1716, as in the accounts for that year we find, 'For paynted armes in the Library window, £5.' But one coat of arms was put up in the year 1771, (q. v.)

It was in this year that the Library began to be enlarged with the gift of copies of all works published by the members of the Stationers' Company, in pursuance of an agreement made with them by Bodley, which became the precursor of the obligations of the Copyright Acts. On Dec. 12 the Company made a grant of one perfect copy of every book printed by them, on condition that they should have liberty to borrow the books

¹ Mr. Fletcher died in 1826, at the age of eighty-seven, and was buried (in a stone coffin traditionally said to be that of Fair Rosamond) in the church of the village where he was born, Yarnton, near Oxford. His tomb is remarkable as exhibiting, before Architectural and Ecclesiological societies had been thought of, an anticipation of better days in monumental design than had yet appeared; a brass, upon a high altar-tomb, represents him clad in his aldermanic gown, with his hands clasped in prayer. A bust of him is in the Picture Gallery.
thus given, if needed for reprinting, and also to examine, collate, and copy the books which were given by others. An order of the Star-Chamber was made July 11, 1637, in confirmation of this grant. The proposal of such an agreement emanated from the Librarian James; but in the effecting it Bodley says that he met with 'many rubs and delays.' Ayliffe says that the agreement was very well observed until about 1640. He should rather have said 'about 1630,' for in that year, in a paper of notes made by the Librarian for the use of Archbishop Laud, as Chancellor of the University (in which the mention of a gift of books by Fetherston, a London bookseller, fixes the date), complaint is made that the Company were very negligent in sending their books, and it is suggested that a message from the Chancellor might quickly remedy that neglect. In 1642, Verneuil, the Sub-Librarian, complained in the Preface to his Nomenclator, &c., of the neglect which had then begun; mentioning the names of several benefactors, he adds: 'These have beene more courteous than the Stationers of London, who by indenture are bound to give the Library a copy of every booke they print.' In the Visitation Order-Book, under the year 1695, is the following 'memorandum' by Hyde, then Head Librarian: 'That in November, 1695, a copy of the indenture between Sir Thomas Bodley and the Company of Stationers, as also a copy of their By-Law to enforce their particular members to complyance, was sent up to the Master of the Company to be communicated and publicly read to the Company once every year, as is in the indenture expressed. The originall was also some years agoe carried up and shewed to the Master and Wardens, because some of them used to raile at the unjustness of the Act of Parliament in forcing them to give a copy of each book to the Bodleian

---

1 Rushworth, iii. 315. 2 Reliquiae Bodl. p. 350. 3 Univ. of Oxford, i. 460. 4 Calendar of State Papers, 1635-6, p. 65. 5 See sub anno 1647.
Library; and therefore we shewed them that we had also another antecedent right to a copy of each book printed by any member in their Company. The Indenture mentions only the giving of books new printed, but the By-law mentions books both new-printed and also reprinted with additions. We have been told that Sir Thomas Bodley gave to the Company 50 pounds worth of plate when they entred into this Indenture. But its not mentioned in our counter-part. Every book is to be delivered to the junior Warden within 10 dayes after its off from the press, and we are to appoint somebody to demand them of him. The obligation is upon every printer to give books; it were to be wished it had been upon every proprietor; for the proprietor must give them to us.'

A.D. 1611.

The permanent endowment of the Library was commenced by the Founder in this year, by the purchase, from Lord Norreys, of the manor of Hendons by Maidenhead, worth annually £91 10s.; to which he added 'certain tenements in London,' producing an annual rent of £40. From the former, now called Hindhay farm, in the parishes of Bray and Cookham, Berks, the Library receives an annual rent, at the present time, of about £220; the latter, which consisted of houses situated in Distaff Lane, were sold in 1853, and the produce invested in £3455 10s. 3 per cent. Consols.

The first book which came from the Stationers' Company, in pursuance of the Indenture made in Dec. 1610, was an anonymous catechetical work printed in this year by Felix Kingston for Thomas Man, entitled, 'Christian Religion substantially, methodicallie, plainlie, and profitablie treatised.' It is now numbered 40 R. 34 Th., and a note in Bodley's own handwriting records its presentation.

1 See sub anno 1612.
Twenty Arabic, Persian, and other MSS, were presented by — Pindar, Consul at Aleppo of the Company of English Merchants, whom Bodley three years previously had requested to procure such books.

Among other minor matters which called forth the care of Bodley, was the providing a bell for the purpose of giving notice when the Library was about to be closed. After it had been placed in the Library some accident appears to have happened to it, since we read in one of his letters to James*, 'As touching the bell, I would have it cast again, and if my friends think it good, made somewhat better.' In 1655 a bell-rope was bought at the price of 1s. 4d. Of late years, however, the Founder's bell had altogether disappeared, and the fact of its very existence was unknown, while a small hand-bell, suggestive of a muffin-man, and, more recently, a hand-bell taken from a Chinese temple at Tien-tsin, and presented by Col. Rigaud, supplied its place. But in July, 1866, in the course of moving some boxes and rubbish buried under some stairs, a mouldy bell of considerable size was dragged to light, which proved to be the missing bell of the Founder. It was immediately put by the Librarian into the hands of Messrs. White, of Appleton, Berks, who fitted it with a frame and wheel; and now, restored to a conspicuous place in the great room, it daily thunders forth an unmistakable signal for departure. Around it, in gold letters, runs the inscription:—'Sir Thomas Bodley gave this bell, 1611.' The bell-founder's initials, W. S., are accompanied by the device of a crown between three bells.

Another relic of Bodley's furniture is a massy iron chest, fastened with three locks, two of which are enormous padlocks, for the preservation of the moneys of the Library, of which the keys used to be in the custody of the Vice-Chancellor and Proctors. This is now exhibited in the Picture Gallery, on account of the extreme

---

1 Heane's Job. Glaston. ii. 637.
2 Reliquiæ Bodl. p. 314.
beauty of the ironwork of the locks, which covers in its intricate ramifications the whole of the inside of the lid. On the outside are painted the arms of the University (with the older motto 'Sapientiae et Felicitatis') and of Bodley.

A.D. 1612.

Two large donations of MSS. were received during this year; the one from the Dean and Chapter of Windsor (in imitation of their brethren of Exeter), of 159 volumes, chiefly theological; and the other of a large collection of scientific treatises, chiefly astronomical and medical, about 120 in number, from Thomas Twine, M.D., of Lewes.

The agreement that was entered into by the Stationers' Company in 1610 having probably been found in some degree inoperative from the absence of any penalty upon non-fulfilment, the Company at the commencement of this year passed the following ordinance, which made it obligatory on every one of their members to forward their books to the Library. It is here printed (for the first time) from the original, preserved in the University Archives, marked A. 27.

1 Vicesimo octavo Januarii 1611 nono regni regis Jacobi, at Stacomers Hall, in Ave Mary Lane in London. Present, the Masters, Wardens, and Assistants of the Company of Stacomers.

1 Forasmuch as this Companye out of their zeale to the advancement of learninge, and at the request of the right worshipfull Sir Thomas Bodley, Knight, founder of the presente publique library of the University of Oxford, beinge readye to manifeste their willinge desires to a worck of so great pietye and benifft to the generall state of the Realme, did by their Indenture under their common seale dated the twelveth daye of December in the eight yeare of his Maj.\textsuperscript{m} raigne of England, Fraunce and Ireland, and the foure and fortith yere of his raigne of Scotland, for them and their successors, graunte and confirme vnto the Chauncellor; Maisters, and Schollers of the Universitie of Oxford, and to their successors for ever, That of all bookes after that from tyme to tyme to be printed in the said Company of Stac\textsuperscript{0}ners, beinge newe books and coppies never printed before, or thoughe formerly printed yet newly augmented or enlarged, there should be freeli given one perfect Booke of every such booke (in quyers) of the first ympression thereof, towards the furnishinge and increase of the said Library; Nowe therefore, to the intent the said graunte maie take due effect in the orderlie performance and execuc\textsuperscript{on} thereof, and that so good and godlie a worck and purpose maie not bee disappointed or defeated by any meanes, It is ordayne by this Company, that all and every printer and printers that from tyme to tyme hereafter shall either for hym- or themselves, or for any other, printe or cause to be printed any newe booke or coppie never printed before, or although formerly printed yet newly augmented or enlarged, shall within ten daies next after the finishinge of the first ympression thereof and the puttinge of the same to sale, bringe and deliver to the yonger warden of the said Company of Stac\textsuperscript{0}ners for the tyme beinge one perfect booke thereof to be delivered over by the same Warden to the recited use to the handes of such person or persons as shalbe appointed by the said Chauncellour, Maisters and Schollers for the tyme beinge to receive the same; And it is alsoe ordayne that every printer that at any tyme or tymes hereafter shall make defect in performance hereof, shall for every such defect forfeite and paie to the use of this Company treble the value of every booke that he shall leave undelivered contrarie to this ordenance; Out of the which forfeiture, upon the levyinge and payment thereof, there shalbe provided for the use of the said Librарye that booke for the not delivery whereof the said forfeiture shalbe had and paid. And to the intent all printers and others of this Company whome it shall concerne maie take notice of this ordenance, and that any of them shall not pretend ignorance thereof, It is ordayne that once in every yere at some generall assemble and meetinge of the said Company upon some of their ushall quarter daies, or some other tyme in the yere at their discretion, this presente ordinance shalbe publiquely read in their Hall, as other their ordenances are accustomend to be read there

' John Haryson  ' William Leake
' John Norton, Mr.  ' Robert Barker
' Richard Field  Wardens  ' Thomas Mane
' Humphrey Lownes  ' Thomas Dawson
' Edward White  ' John Standishe
' Humfray Hooper  ' Thomas Adames
' Simon Waterson  ' John Haryson1
' Ri. Collins, Clerk of the Companie.

' Havinge lately byn entreated, as well by the said Sir Thomas Bodley, Knight, as by the Maister, Wardens, and Assistants of the foresaid Company of Stacôners, to take some spetiall notice of this their publique acte and graunte, and (in regard of our beinge of his Maiestyes highe Comission in ecclesiasticall causes) to testifie under our handes with what allowance and good liking we have thought it meete to be received, Wee doe not onlie as of merrit comend it to posteritie for a singular token of the fervent zeale of that Company to the furtherance of good learninge and for an exemplarie guift and graunt to the Schollers and Students of the Universitye of Oxford, But withall we doe promise by subscribinge unto it, that if at any tyme hereafter occasion shall require that we should help to maynteyne the due and perpetuall execucion of the same, Wee will be readie to performe it, as farre as either of our selves thourghoue our present authoritie or by any whatsoeuer our further endeavours it maie be fitlye procured.

' G. Cant.  ' Richard Moket  ' Jo. Roffens
' Jo. London  ' R. Cov. & Lich.  ' George Montaigne (sic)
' Jo. Benet  ' Jhon Boys  ' Rob. Abbott
' Tho. Ridley  ' Char. Fotherbye  ' Henr. Hickman
' Tho. Edwardes  ' Martin Fotherby  ' John Dix
' G. Newmane  ' John Layfeilds  ' Willm. FFerrand.'
' John Spenser

1 Probably the son of the John Haryson who signs above.
A.D. 1613.

The death of the Founder occurred on Jan. 28, after long suffering from stone, dropsy, and scurvy, for which he is said to have been mis-treated by a Dr. Hen. Atkins\(^1\). Two volumes of elegiac verses were thereupon issued by the University, of which one (Bodleiomnema) was written entirely by members of Merton College; the other (Justa Funebria Ptolemai Oxoninsis) by members of the University in general. In the latter collection are Latin verses by Laud, then President of St. John's, and Greek verses by Isaac Casaubon. Bodley was buried (according to his desire in his will) in the chapel of his old College, Merton, on March 29, with all the state of a public funeral. He bequeathed the greater part of his property for the building of the east wing of the Library and the completion of the Schools, appointing Sir John Bennett and Mr. William Hakewill his executors. The former, however, proved in some measure an unfaithful steward. When prosecuted in Parliament in 1621, for gross bribery in his office as Judge of the Prerogative Court, some of Bodley's money was still remaining in his hands, and was mentioned in the charges brought against him. For the due payment of a portion of this, by annual instalments of £150, the University, on June 28, 1624, accepted four bonds from him, witnessed by Thomas Coventreye, Matthew Bennet, and Henry Wigmore; only one of these appears to have been paid off, leaving an unpaid deficit of £450\(^2\). The entry of this debt is carried on, together with the loan made to King Charles I in 1642, in the Library accounts\(^3\), from year to year

\(^1\) Calendar of State Papers, 1611–18, p. 137.

\(^2\) A full account of Bennet's defalcations is given by B. Twyne, from the University Registers, in vol. vi. (pp. 120–4) of his Collectanea, now in the Univ. Archives. See also Parliam. Hist. vol. v. p. 462.

\(^3\) These accounts, as now preserved, unfortunately only commence at the year 1653, and there is a hiatus from 1661 to 1676, both inclusive.
up to 1782, when by order of the Curators the entries were discontinued. In the notice of the Library contributed (as it is said) by Dr. Hudson to Ayliffe’s Ancient and Present State of Oxford (vol. i. p. 460), it is stated that the Library estate falls miserably short by reason of ‘the fraud of his [Bodley’s] executor, the loan of a great sum of money to Charles I in his distress, and by the fire of London,’ that event, doubtless, necessitating the rebuilding of the houses in Distaff Lane.

Bodley was charged by some of his contemporaries, and apparently with some justice, with sacrificing in his will the claims of relatives and friends too much to the interests of the Library. One Mr. John Chamberlain, a friend of Bodley, whose gossipping letters to Sir Dudley Carleton, Alice Carleton, and others, are preserved in the State Paper Office, does not spare his accusations on this head. In a letter dated Feb. 4, 1613, he says that Bodley has left legacies to great people, £7000 to the Library, and £200 to Merton College, but little to his brothers, his old servants, his friends, or the children of his wife, by whom he had all his wealth. In another, dated June 23, 1613, he remarks that the executors cannot excuse Bodley of unthankfulness to many of his relatives and friends, he being ‘so drunk with the applause and vanity of his librarie that he made no conscience to rob Peter to pay Paul.’ Some inferential corroboration of this is afforded by the following curious paper preserved among Rawlinson’s gatherings (now in a vol. numbered Rawl. MS. Miscell., 1203), being no other than a petition for relief addressed by the grand-nephew and grand-niece of Bodley in the year 1712 (as appears from the Library accounts) to the Heads of Houses and Curators of the Library, who appear both officially and individually to have been very parsimonious in their response:

1 Calendar of State Papers, 1611-18, p. 169.
To the Worshipful Mr. Vice-Chancellor and to all heads and governors of Colleges and Halls within the famous University of Oxon.

The humble petition of William Snoshill of East Lockinge in the county of Berks, labourer, and of Jane the wife of Thomas Hatton of Childrey in the county aforesaid, labourer, sister of the said William Snoshill,

Humbly sheweth,

That your Petitioners being the grand-children of the sister of Sir Thomas Bodley, the munificent founder of the Bodleian Library in your University, being now reduc’d to a poor and low estate, do with all humility make bold to represent their distrest condition to your consideration, hoping that out of your tender pity and commiseration, and that regard you have for the pious memory of so great a benefactor to your University, to whom your poor Petitioners are so nearly allied, you will be pleas’d to consider them as real objects of your charity and compassion, and thereby you will lay an eternal obligation on them of praying for your present and future happiness.

William Snoshill
Jane Hatton.

We, whose names are subscribed to this Petition, are well satisfied of the truth thereof.

Thomas Paris, rector of Childrey
John Holmes
John Bell, vic. of Sparsholt
John Aldworth, rector of East Lockinge
Ralph Kedden, M.A., vicar of Denchworth, Berks.

(Mem.) The Curators gave the Petitioners the sum of four pounds out of Sir Thomas Bodley’s chest. Dr. Altham, Hebrew professor, and Dr. Hudson, Library-keeper, gave, each of them, ten shillings.

An alphabetical catalogue was prepared in this year by James, but was not printed. The MS, in two small hand-books, remains in the Library. It was ordered by the Curators, at the Visitation on Nov. 13, that 6s. 8d. be paid quarterly to the Bedel of the Stationers' Company as a gratuity for his trouble. MSS. were received from Edw. James, B.D., who had been a contributor already in the year 1601.

A.D. 1614.

Various orders were made by the Curators at the Visitation on Nov. 10, which are prefixed to the small MS. 'hand-catalogues' made at that time for the use of those authorities. They resolve that the catalogues of newly-published works issued at Frankfort in each spring and summer shall be examined by them within one week after their arrival. They make an attempt to obtain possession of a gift of the Founder's giving, which had never yet reached the place of its intended deposit. In 1609 it had been reported to Convocation that there was about to be sent to the Library by Sir T. Bodley 'toga ex lana agni Tartarici ἀσφόρας, magni quidam valoris, ei data (ut in publica Bibliotheca conservetur) ab Richardo Lee, milite, qui eandem dono recepit ab Augustissimo Imperatore Muscoviae'. But the precious cloak had never yet arrived; the Curators therefore resolve 'quod literæ scribantur ad exequutores domini Fundatoris pro illo pretioso pallio ex zoophyto confecto, et legato ad nos per Ric. Leigh, militem, olim legatum apud Imperatorem Russiae, et quod in cista ex ligno bene olenti, ad eam finem comparanda, reponatur in archivis, munita sera affabre facta; clavis permaneat semper apud Vice-Cancellarium vel ejus deputatum, nec cuiquam illud inspiciendi vel contractandi potestas esto, nisi in presentia eorumdem.' At this Visitation Joseph

1 'Reg. Conv. K. f. 43,' MS. note by Dr. P. Bliss. Bodley mentions in a letter to James his expectation of exhibiting the 'lamb's-wool-gown' to the King. Relig. Bodl. 173. An account of this marvellous garment will be found in the Appendix.
Barnes, the Oxford printer, appeared and promised to give a copy of every book which he might print. Complaint was made that the London Stationers had already begun to fail in the fulfilment of their agreement.

On Aug. 29 the King visited the Library on his way to Woodstock, and, asking for Fulke's Annotations on the Rhemish New Test., pointed out the remarks at Rom. x. 15, on the calling of ministers; 'deprehendit calumnias et imposturas quorundam pontificiorum de ordine et vocatione ministrorum'. In 1620 the editions of 1601 and 1617 of these Annotations were both in the Library, as appears from the Catalogue of that year, but in Hyde's Catalogue, published in 1674, only the edition of 1633 is found. This is one out of various instances which prove that, by a great miscalculation of literary value, later editions of a writer's works were thought to supersede so entirely the earlier, that the latter could be advantageously parted with. The Library has, however, since become re-possessed of the earlier editions, that of 1601 having been presented in 1824, and that of 1617 having been bought more recently. But the most remarkable example of this mistaken alienation of books occurs with reference to the first folio edition of Shakespeare. In the Supplemental Catalogue of 1635, the folio of 1623 duly appears; but in the Catalogue of 1674 we find only the third edition, that of 1664, which doubtless had been thought to be sufficient as well as best; upon its arrival, therefore, from Stationers' Hall, the precious volume of 1623 was probably regarded as little more than waste-paper. Nor was it until the year 1821, when Malone's collection was received, that a copy was again possessed by the Library.

2 The extraordinary fancy prices sometimes given for books, and their variations, are particularly exemplified in the case of the first folio Shakespeare. In 1778 Stevens said it was 'usually valued at seven or eight' guineas. (Shakespeare, second
A.D. 1615.

Richard Connock, auditor and solicitor to Prince Henry of Wales, gave a MS. book of *Hore*¹, which had formerly belonged to Mary I, and afterwards to Prince Henry. The donor, in a note prefixed, records that he gives the volume, 'not for the religion it contains, but for the pictures and former royall owners' sake.' It is a volume of the early part of the fifteenth century, in small quarto, containing 224 leaves, and ornamented with very beautiful illuminated borders and exquisite drawings in camaieu gris. Among these is one of the martyrdom of Becket, which, doubtless in consequence of the book being in the possession of the Princess Mary, has entirely escaped the defacement and obliteration ordered by her father to be made in all Service-books where the office for S. Thomas of Canterbury occurred. The following inscription (nearly effaced at its close by over-much handling in former years), addressed by Mary to one of her ladies, whose name does not appear, to whom probably she presented the book, occurs in the blank portion of one of the leaves:—

'Geate you such riches as when the shype is broken, may swyme away wythe the Master. For dyverse chances take away the goods of fortune; but the goods of the soule whyche bee only the trewe goods, nother fyer nor water can take away. Yf you take labour and payne to do a vertuous thyng, the labour goeth away, and the vertue remaynethe. Yf through pleasure you do any vicious thyng, the pleasure goeth away and the vice remaynethe. Good Madame, for my sake remembre thy.

¹ The gift is omitted in the Benefaction-Register, apparently because it was a rule not to record donations of single volumes [Reliquiae Bodl. pp. 91, 283]; consequently several books of the greatest value are omitted.

"Your lovyng mystres,

'Marye Princesse.'"

This inscription (which does so much credit to its writer) was first printed by Hearne at the end of Titii Livii Foro Julien. Vita Hen. V. (p. 228) and last, in Bliss' Reliquiae Hearn. i. 105. Mr. Coxe has noted (from Alstedii Systema Mnemonicum, 1610, i. 705) that the latter part is taken directly and literally from Musonius, while indirectly it comes from an oration by Cato. Probably the first part may be traced to some similar source.

Another autograph inscription by Mary while Princess is found in a small book (Laud MS. Miscell. i.) of private prayers in Latin and English, which belonged to Jane Wriothesley, wife of Thomas Earl of Southampton, and which she seems to have employed as a kind of album. At f. 45b are these lines, which appear to form a triplet, although not written in metrical form by the Princess:

"Good Madame, I do desyer you most hartly to pry,
That in prosperyte and adversyte I may Have grace to keep the trewe way."

"Your lovyng frend, to my . . . [power?]"

Unfortunately the conclusion, with the signature, has been cut off. A couplet, signed by Queen Katherine Parr, has an equal, and most regal, disregard of the restraints of metrical rhythm (f. 8b.):

"Madam, althowe I have differed wrettynge in your booke,
I am no lesse your frend than you do looke.

'Kateryn the Quene KP.'"

1 George Herbert expresses the same idea at the end of his Church Porch:

"If thou do ill, the joy fades, not the pains;
If well, the pain doth fade, the joy remains."
Other inscriptions are inserted by Margaret Queen of Scotland, Mary Countess of Lennox and mother of Lord Darnley, and by the Countess of Southampton’s daughters, Elizabeth, Mary, and Anne.

James Button, Esq., of the county of Worcester, gave, on March 28, a curious relic of the ancient language of Cornwall, being three Miracle-Plays of the Creation, the Passion, and the Resurrection, in Cornish, contained in a MS. on vellum, small folio, eighty-three leaves, written in the fifteenth century; now numbered Bodl. 791. A copy on paper of the Play of the Creation, written by John Jordan in 1611, is also in the Library, numbered Bodl. 219, which appears to have come from the library of King James I, having the royal crown stamped on the parchment cover, with the initials I.K. A second modern copy has also been recently presented (in 1849) by Edwin Ley, Esq., of Bosahan, Cornwall, which is accompanied by a translation by John Keigwyn, made in 1695. The dramas were printed in two volumes at the University Press, with a translation, notes, and glossary, by Mr. Edwin Norris, in 1859.

Some MSS. were given about this time by the three sons of Rich. Colt, D.D., and in 1618 twenty Greek volumes by Cecil, Earl of Exeter.

A.D. 1620.

At the beginning of May, James resigned the office of Librarian, but not as Wood says, on account of his promotion to the Subdeanery of Wells, since that took place in the year 1614. His appointment to the rectory of Mongeham, Kent (also mentioned by Wood), was in 1617. He continued, however, to reside in Oxford, and dying there in August, 1629, was buried in New College Chapel.

On the 9th of the same month of May, John Rouse, M.A., Fellow of Oriel, was elected James’ successor. No account of him is given by Wood, possibly from dislike of his Puritanical principles, and of his continuing to hold office during the usurpation. He appears to have discharged his trust in the Library with faithfulness, and, at least, to have deserved some mention at the historiographer’s hands for the Appendix to the Catalogue which he issued in the year 1635 (q.v.)¹ He is best known as the friend of Milton, who, on Rouse’s application to him for a copy of his Poems both English and Latin, published in 1645, in the place of one previously given by Milton which had been lost, sent the volume, together with a long autograph Latin Ode, dated Jan. 23, 1646 (–7), and bearing the following title: ‘Ad Joannem Rousium, Oxoniensis Academiae Bibliothecarum, de libro poematum amisso quem ille sibi denuo mitti postulabat, it cum alii nostris in Bibliotheca publica reponeret, Ode Joannis-Miltoni’.² The volume is now numbered 80. M. 168 Art. A facsimile of a considerable portion of the Ode (which Cowper translated into English, and which is said to have been the last of Milton’s Latin poetical effusions) is given in plate xvii.
of Sam. Leigh Sotheby’s sumptuous volume, entitled Ramblings in the Elucidation of the Autograph of Milton, 4º. Lond. 1861; and at p. 120 there is a facsimile in full of Milton’s inscription in another volume (4º. F. 56 Th.) which contains a collection of the political and polemical treatises published by him in the years 1641-5. This latter inscription, which gives a list of the contents

¹ One fact to his credit is indeed mentioned by Wood in the Fasti, under the year 1648, viz. that he prevented the then Vice-Chancellor, Dr. Reynolds, and the Proctors from breaking open Bodley’s chest in search of money, by assuring them that there was nothing in it. Hearne (MS. Diary, vol. xii. p. 13) says that Rouse inserted a portrait of Sir Thos. Bodley, done at his own charge, in the window of the room which he occupied on the west side of Oriel College.

² Cowley followed Milton’s example by inserting an Ode, in this case in English, in a folio copy of his Poems (numbered C. 2. 21. Art.), which he gave June 26, 1656. It is printed exactly from the original in Reliquiae Hearnii. ii. 921-3.
of the volume, is addressed as follows: 'Doctissimo viro proboque librorum æstimatori Joanni Rousio, Oxoniensis academiae Bibliothecario, gratum hoc sibi fore testanti, Joannes Miltonius opuscula hæc sua in Bibliothecam antiquissimam atque celeberrimam asciscenda libens tradit, tanquam in memoriaæ perpetuae Fanum, emeritimque, uti sperat, ividiæe calumniæque vacationem; si Veritati, Bonoque simul Eventui satis litatum sit.' Warton tells the almost incredible story, in his edition of Milton's Poems, that about the year 1720 these two volumes were thrown out into a heap of duplicates, from which Nathaniel Crynes, who afterwards bequeathed his own collection to the Library, was permitted to pick out what he pleased for himself; fortunately, however, he was too good a royalist and churchman to choose anything that bore the name of Milton, and so the books, despised and rejected on both sides, by mere chance remained in the place of their original deposit! Such an incident, if true, goes far to justify the charges of ignorance and neglect of the Library which Hearn in his Diary constantly brings against Hudson, the Librarian at that time, and those whom he employed.

The second edition of the Catalogue was issued by James, shortly after his resignation of his office, with a Dedication to Prince Charles, and a Preface dated June 30. It consists of 539 quarto pages, in double columns. It abandons the classified arrangement of the former Catalogue, and adopts that (followed ever since) of one alphabet of names. James, in his Preface, gives as his reason for this course, the frequent difficulty (already experienced even in so small a collection) of deciding to what class a book should be assigned, and the inconvenience resulting from division of the works of the same author. He points out the value of the Library to foreigners, who can there consult 16,000 volumes for six hours a day, excepting Sundays and holidays. As instances of the copiousness of its stores, he mentions that there are to be found above 100 folio and quarto volumes on Military Art, in Greek, Latin, and other languages; and that there are 3000 or 4000 books in French, Italian, and Spanish. He notes that heretical and schismatical books are not to be read without leave of the Vice-Chancellor and Regius Professor of Divinity; and makes some remarks on the method of keeping a Common-place-book. He gives as the reason for his quitting his post, his severe sufferings from stone and paralysis.

1 See sub anno 1745.

On June 4, King James presented the folio edition of his Works as edited by Bishop Montague. The book (now marked B. 14. 17. Theol.) contains the following presentation inscription, written and signed by Sir R. Naunton:—

‘Jacobus Dei gratia Magnæ Britanniæ, Franciæ et Hiberniæ Rex, fidei defensor, &c. Postquam decrevisset publici juris facere quæ sibi erat commentatus, ne videretur vel palam pudere literarum quas privativam amaverat, vel eorum seu opinioni seu invidiæ cedere qui Regis Majestatem literis dictatabant immuni, vel Christiani Orbis et in eo Principum judicia expavescere, quorum maxime intererat vera esse omnia quæ scrispsit; circumspicere etiam cœpit certum aliquod libro suo domicilium, locum, si fieri possit, semotum a fato, æternitati et paci sacrum. Ecce commodum sua se obtulit Academia, illa pæne orbis notior quam Cantabrigiæ, ubi exulibus Musis jam olim melius est quam in patria, ubi a codicibus famæ nuncupatis tinea abs-terrentur legentium manibus, sycophantæ scribentium ingeniis. In hoc immortalis literarum sacris, inter monumenta clarorum

1 At this time there were only two other public libraries in Europe, both later in date than the Bodleian, viz. that of Angelo Rocca at Rome, opened in 1604, and the Ambrosian at Milan, opened in 1609. The fourth public library was that of Card. Mazarin at Paris, opened in 1643. Evidence of the consequent appreciation by foreigners of the advantages of the Bodleian Library is given under the year 1641.

2 An Appendix to James’ Catalogue was printed in 1635. q. v.
virorum, quos quantum dilexit studiorum participatione satis indicavit, in bibliotheca publica, lucbrationes has suas Deo Opt. Max., Cui ab initio devote erant, æternum consecrat, in venerando Alma Matris sinu, unde contra seculorum rubiginem fidam illi custodiam promittit, et contra veritatis hostes stabile patrocinium.'

The book, which was carried to Oxford by a special deputation, consisting of Patrick Young, the Librarian at St. James's (to whom £20 was given by the University for his pains), and others, was received by the University with great ceremony. A Convocation was held in St. Mary's Church, on May 29, at which an oration was delivered by Rich. Gardiner, the Deputy-Orator, and at which a letter of thanks was approved (which is printed in Wood's Annals, ii. 336); from thence the Vice-Chancellor, attended by 24 doctors in their scarlet robes, and a mixed multitude of others, carried it in solemn procession to the Library, where the keeper, Rouse, 'made a verie prettie speech,' says Patrick Young, 'and placed it in archivis . . . with a great deale of respect.' 'The King was greatly pleased with the formality and flattery with which his works were received, and the more so 'because Cambridge received them without extraordinary respect.'

Another gift in this year, presented by Thomas Nevile, K.B., eldest son of Sir H. Nevile, Knt., is thus described in the Register: 'Elegantissimum libellum diversa scripturae genera continentem, manu Esteris Anglicæ, characteribus esquisitis conscriptum.' This is, doubtless, the MS. of the Book of Proverbs, dated 1599, in which every chapter, as well as the dedication to the Earl of Essex, is written in a different style of caligraphy,

---

2 Letter from J. Chamberlain to Sir D. Carleton, June 28, 1630: Calendar of State Papers, 1619-23, p. 157.
which is now exhibited in the glass case nearest the entrance to the Library. It is an extremely beautiful specimen of the handiwork of Mrs. Esther Inglis, of whose skill the Library possesses another and smaller specimen (Bodl. 987), consisting of some French verses by Guy de Faur, Sieur de Pybrac, written for Dr. Joseph Hall (afterwards the Bishop of Norwich), in 1617. These are described in the account of Mrs. Inglis, in Ballard's Memoirs of British Ladies. A third specimen of her work is in the Library of Ch. Ch.: it is a Psalter in French, presented to Queen Elizabeth in 1599, bound in embroidered crimson velvet, set with pearls.¹

The Douay Bible of 1609 was presented by Sir Rich. Anderson, and a Persian MS. of the Liturgy of the Greek Church by Sir Thos. Roe. The first architectural model also was given in this year; but unfortunately it is not now extant. Its description is as follows: 'Clemens Edmonds, eques auratus, consilio Regis ab epistolis, donavit egregium παράδειγμα quinque columnarum, nunc primum inventum, secundum formam rusticam, ex alabastrine singulari artificio confectum.'

A.D. 1621.

A gift of £5 is noticeable as coming from the Girdlers' Company, 'Societas Zonianorum.' Sir Francis Bacon occurs as a donor of books.

A.D. 1623.

Delegates were appointed by Convocation to consider 'de modulo frontispicii Bibliothecae publicae in parte occidentali versus collegium Exon².'

¹ An account of Mrs. Esther Inglis, and of all her known existing MSS., is preparing for publication by David Laing, Esq., LL.D., of Edinburgh.
A.D. 1624.

'William, Bishop of Lincoln, and then Lord Chancellor of England, would have borrowed Paulus Benius Eugubinus De dirimend. Controvers. de Grat. et Lib. Arb., but was deny'd.'

The first theft of a book from the Library occurred in this year. An account of it, with several others, will be found in a note to the year 1654.

A.D. 1627.

Andrew James, of Newport, Isle of Wight, is recorded to have given 'duas capsulas in quibus asservantur scripta vetustissima, exotici et ignoti characteris, alia stylo, calamo alia, in corticibus exarata, ex orientalis Indiæ partibus allata.' An East India merchant, John Jourdain, gave four Arabic MSS., and Bacon's Works were presented by Peter Ince, a bookseller at Chester. It appears from the Register that Joseph Barnes, the Oxford printer and publisher, died in this year, as he bequeathed a legacy of £5.

A.D. 1628.

Twenty-nine MSS., all of which, except three, are Greek, were given by Sir Thomas Roe, who had previously been ambassador in Turkey, and who afterwards sat, at the commencement of the Long Parliament, as Burgess for the University, in company with Selden. One of the three exceptions is an original copy of the 1 Barlow's MS. Arg. against lending books out of the Library; see post, anno 1659.

2 At the end of the Barocci collection (numbered 245, 246, in the Catalogue of 1697) are two Javanese MSS., written on palm-leaves: the one written with a reed in the sacred or Pali character, preserved in a box; the other written with a style in the common character, and having the leaves tied together in the usual manner between two boards. As there does not seem to be any evidence for supposing that Barocci's collection included any Oriental MSS., it is possible that these were the writings 'ignoti characteris' given two years previously by Andr. James.
Synodal Epistles of the Council of Basle, with the leaden seal attached; and another, a valuable Arabic MS. of the Apostolic Canons, &c, which is noticed at length by Selden in the second book of his treatise, De Synedriis Hebraorum. Roe proposed that his books should be permitted to be lent out for purposes of printing, on proper security being given; a proposition which was accepted by Convocation. Special licence of borrowing Lord Pembroke's (the Barocci) and Roe's MSS. was granted by the donors themselves to Dr. Lindsell (afterwards Bishop of Peterborough and Hereford) and Patrick Young, the keeper of the King's Library at St. James's. The latter is found, from the Register of Readers, to have used his privilege as late as Feb. and March, 1647-8, various volumes of Pembroke's MSS. being then lent to him, together with some marked 'Archbp.', which were doubtless Laud's.

The copy of Bacon's Essays (1625) which was presented by the author to the Duke of Buckingham, was given to the Library by Lewis Roberts, a merchant of London. It is now exhibited among the curiosities in the first glass case, as a specimen of binding, being clad in green velvet, embroidered with gold and silver thread, with the head of the duke worked in silk. The same donor also presented the copy of Bishop Williams' Funeral Sermon on James I, which had been given to the same duke by the author. Several other specimens of embroidered bindings are preserved in the Library, which are all, it is believed, comprehended in the following list:

1 'Reg. Conv. R. 1628. f. 6.' MS. note by Dr. P. Bliss.
2 See add anno 1635.
3 A lady, whose name is not mentioned, but who is graced with the appellation of 'heroins,' is recorded to have given to the University the Life of our Blessed Lord depicted in needle-work, 'byssina et aurata textura,' which was duly presented in Convocation on July 9, 1636. [Reg. Conv. R. 24.] It is not now preserved in the Library.
1. A part of L. Tomson's version of the New Test., printed by Barker, in 160 (in 1578?), now marked MS. e Musæo, 242. This belonged to Queen Elizabeth, and is bound in a covering worked by herself, with various mottos, e.g. 'Celum patria,' 'Scopus vitæ Xpūs,' &c. And on a fly-leaf occurs this note in her handwriting: 'August[ine?]. I walke manie times into the pleasant fieldes of the Holye Scriptures, where I plucke up the goodlie greene herbes of sentences by pruning, eate them by reading, chawe them by musing, and laie them up at length in the hie seate of memorie by gathering them together; that so hauing tasted thy sweetenes I may the lesse perceave the bitternes of this miserable life.'

2. Another of Elizabeth's bibliopegeic achievements is the cover of her own translation from the French of The Miroir or Glasse of the synnefull Soule, executed when only eleven years old. She says that she translated it 'out of frenche ryme into englishe prose, joyning the sentences together as well as the capacitie of my symple witte and small lerning coulde extende themselves;' and prefixs a dedication, dated 'from Assherige, the laste daye of the yeare of our Lord God, 1544,' in which, 'to our moste noble and vertuous quene Katherin, Elizabeth her humble daughter wisbeth perpetuall felicitie and everlasting ioye.' The volume consists of 63 small quarto leaves, and has the queen's initials K. P. embroidered within an ornamental border of gold and silver thread, on a ground of blue corded silk. It is numbered Cherry MS. 38.

1 This note is printed and the book described in Hearne's Appendix to Titus Livii Paroja, Vit. Hen. V, and, from thence, in Ballard's Lives; but not very correctly in either case. Also in Bliss' Reliqu. Hearne, i. 104.
4. A Testament in 16th, printed by Norton and Bill in 1625. Very thick and clumsy embroidery: on one side, David, in a flowing wig, playing on the harp, with a dog, dragon-fly, &c; on the other, Abraham, in a similar wig and with a falling collar, stopped in the sacrifice of his son. There is a tradition that this formed part of a waistcoat of Charles I; but it is not known on what evidence it rests, nor does the material seem likely to have been so employed. In the Douce collection. Exhibited in the glass case at the entrance of the Library.

5. Bible, 8vo Lond. 1639. Landscape, &c, worked in silk, with embroidery in gold and silver thread. Arch Bodl. D subt. 75.

7. New Testament, printed at Cambridge in 1628, in 16mo. This was the first edition printed there of any portion of the Authorized Version, and only the second of any English translation 2. The binding of the Library copy (which was bought, in 1859, for five guineas) is covered with silver filigree work.

Among Dr. Rawlinson’s multifarious collections is a volume of curious early specimens of worked samplers, humorously lettered on the back, ‘Works of Learned Ladies.’

A.D. 1629.

The extremely valuable series of Greek MSS., called from its collector the Barocci Collection, comprising 242 volumes, was

---

1 In the life of Rich. Ferrar, junior, in Wordsworth’s Eccl. Biogr. (third edit. vol. iv. p. 232) a note is quoted from a MS. stating that a copy of Ferrar’s Whole Law of God, bound by the nuns of Gidding in green velvet, was given to the University Library by Archbp. Laud. This is a mistake; the book in question was given by the Archbishop to the library of his own college, St. John’s, where it still remains.

2 The first was the Genevan Version, printed in 1591.
presented by Will. Herbert, Earl of Pembroke, and Chancellor of the University. The manner of its acquisition is recorded in Archbp. Usher's correspondence. In a letter from Dublin of Jan. 22, 1628–9, Usher says: 'That famous library of Giacomo Barocci, a gentleman of Venice, consisting of 242 manuscript volumes, is now brought into England by Mr. Featherstone the stationer.' He recommended that the King should buy it, and add to it the collection of Arabic MSS. which the Duke of Buckingham had bought of the heirs of Erpenius. On April 13, 1629, Sir H. Bourgchier writing to Usher, tells him that the Earl of Pembroke has bought the collection, for the University of Oxford, at the price of £700, and that it consists of 250 volumes. It was forwarded to the University with the following letter, which is here copied from the Convocation Register, R. 24 (f. 9v.)—

'Good Mr. Vice-Chancellor,

'Understanding of an excellent collection of Greke manuscripts brought from Venice, and thincking that they would bee of more use to the Church in being kept united in some publick Librarye then scattered in particular hands; remembring the obligation I had to my mother the Universitie, first for breeding mee, after for the honor they did mee in making mee their Chancelor, I was glad of this occasion to repay some part of that great debt I owe her. And therefore I sent you downe the collection entire, which I pray present with my beste love to the Convocation house. And I shall unpaynedly remaine,

'Your most assured freind,

'Greenewich, the 25th of May, 1629.'

PEMBROKE.

The Earl was willing that the MSS. should, if necessary, be allowed to be borrowed. And, in pursuance of this expressed wish, Patrick Young had, in 1648, the use of various MSS. from this collection, as we find from a memorandum at the end of the Register of Readers in 1648–9. But one MS. suffered in consequence considerable injury. A further portion of the collection (consisting of 22 Greek MSS. and 2 Russian), which had been retained by the Earl, was subsequently purchased by Oliver Cromwell, and given by him to the Library in 1654. There they still bear the Protector’s name; but, strange to say, no entry of the gift appears in the Benefaction Book. These are all fully described in the first volume of the general Catalogue of MSS., published by Rev. H. O. Coxe in 1853. A Catalogue of the Barocci and Roe MSS., by Dr. Peter Turner, of Merton College, beautifully written, filling 38 folio leaves, is bound up among Selden’s printed books, marked AA. 1. Med. Seld.

1 In the following year Mr. Henry Featherstone, bookseller in London, gave to the Library a number of Hebrew books.
2 Part's Life of Usher, Letters, p. 400.

On Aug. 27, the Library was visited for the first time by King Charles and his Queen, little anticipating under what circumstances that visit would be repeated. He was received with an oration by the Public Orator, Strode, a copy of which is preserved in Smith MS. xxvi. 26, and which, in the exaggerated style of the Court-adulation of the time, began with words that sound blasphemously in our ears, ‘Excellentissime Vice-Deus.’ From the Library the King ascended to the leads of the Schools; and there discussed the proposed removal of some mean houses in Cat Street, which then intervened between the Schools and St. Mary’s Church. A plan of the ground and buildings was made at his desire, which was sent up to him at London.

1 See sub anno 1654.
2 Richard Cromwell proposed at one time to perpetuate his own name in the Library, together with his father’s, by sending a collection of the addresses which had been made to him, in order to show the temper of the nation, and the readiness of the greatest persons ‘to compliment people on purpose for secular interest.’ Reliquie Hearn. i. 263.
A.D. 1631.

Charles Robson, B.D., of Queen's College, who had been Chaplain to the Merchants at Aleppo, gave a fine Syriac MS. of the Four Gospels, which he had brought from the East; it is now numbered Bodl. Orient. 361. Another MS. of his gift has been by some mistake placed amongst the Thurston MSS., No. 13.

A.D. 1632.

William Burton, the historian of Leicestershire, gave the original MSS. of Leland's Itinerary (together with a transcript of some parts) and of his Collectanea; the former filling seven volumes in quarto\(^1\), and the latter (including the book De Scriptoribus Britannicis) four in folio. The Collectanea, after the death of Leland, had been in the possession of Sir John Cheke, to whom Edward VI entrusted the custody of Leland's papers; on his going into exile in the reign of Queen Mary, he gave them to Humphrey Purefoy, Esq., whose son, Thomas Purefoy, presented them to Burton in the year 1612. The Itinerary was first published by Hearne in 1710, in 9 vols.; the Collectanea in 1715, in 6 vols.; the De Scriptoribus, by Ant. Hall, in 1709. The MS. of the Itinerary is much stained and injured by damp; but it is no longer in the perishable condition described by Hearne. There are, besides, three transcripts of it in the Library; one, of part of the book (Bodl. 470) is a copy (mentioned above) which was made for Burton, and sent by him to Rouse, with a letter dated 'Lindley, Leic. 17 July, 1632,' in which he describes it as being 'written, though not with so fine a letter, yet with a judicious hand.' He says that another part is 'now (as I heere) in the hands of Doctor Burton, Archdeacon of Gloucester, which he received by loane from a freind of mine, but never yet restored; the which, I thinke, upon request he will impart unto you;' and adds, 'Some more partes there were of this Itinerary, but through the negligence of him to whom they were first lent, are embesiled and gone.' He undertakes to send the three parts of the Collectanea and the book De Scriptt. Angliae, according to promise, as soon as he has done using them. Another copy, made by Burton himself in 1628, was given to Dr. W. Stukeley by Thomas Allen, Esq., lord of Finchley, in June, 1758, and finally came to the Library with Gough's collection. It is now numbered Gough, General Topog. 2. It is injured by damp at the beginning, but has been repaired by Stukeley. The third copy is a later transcript, also in Gough's collection, and numbered General Topog. 1.

\(^1\) An eighth volume of the Itinerary was given by Charles King, M.A. of Ch. Ch. some time subsequently, having been lent by Burton and not recovered at the time of his own gift.

A.D. 1633.

A singular motto stamped upon the binding of two books, and it may be of more, within a border of cornucopise, &c., attracts the attention of the reader. The books are, vols. i. ii. of Du Chesne's Historia Francorum Scriptores, 1636 (A. 2. 9. 10. Jur.), and Halloix's Ecclesiae Orientalis Scriptores, 1633 (G. 2. 3. Th.); the motto is, 'Coronasti annum bonitatis Tuae, Ps. 65. 'Annuo redivit quinque librarum Margaretae Brooke.' An explanation is found in an entry in the Benefaction-Register under the year 1632 or 1633, where we read as follows: 'D. Margareta Brooke, vidua, quondam uxor Ducis Brooke, de Temple-Combe in comitatu Somerset, armigeri defuncti, donavit centum libras, quibus perquisitus est annuus redivitus quinque librarum ad coemendos libros in usum bibliothecae in perpetuum.' Probably the books thus stamped were the first that were bought after the final settlement of the gift. The rent arises from land at Wick-Risington, in Gloucestershire, and the sum duly appears to this day in the annual accounts of the Library. In 1655, the then Librarian, Barlow, makes a memorandum in his accounts that the University had not paid over this rent for several years; in consequence of his calling attention to this neglect, the arrears were paid up in 1658. At the same time the rents of the houses in Distaff Lane were heavily in arrear.
ANNALS OF THE 1633-

A (second) gift from Sir Henry Wotton consisted of the copy of Tycho Brahe’s Astronomiae instaurandae mechanica, 1598, which the author gave to Grimani, Doge of Venice, containing several additional pages in MS. with two autograph epigrams; and also of a MS. of the Acta Concilii Constantiensis, which had formerly belonged to Card. Bembi, now numbered e Musæo, 25.

A.D. 1634.

In this year Sir Kenelm Digby gave a collection of 238 MSS. (including five rolls) all on vellum, uniformly bound, and stamped with his arms, which still form a distinct series. They are, for the most part, of the highest interest and importance, especially with reference to the early history of science in England. Amongst them are works by Roger Bacon, Grosteste, Will. Reade, John Eschyndon or Ashton, Roger of Hereford, Richard Wallingford, Simon Bredon, Thomas of New-market, and many others. They also comprise much relating to the general history of England, and are almost entirely the work of English scribes. Many of them had previously belonged to Thomas Allen, of Gloucester Hall, who himself was a liberal donor to the Library. [See p. 19.] Two additional MSS., which formerly belonged to Digby, and which each contain his inscription, ‘Hic est liber publicæ Bibliothecæ academiae Oxoniensis, K.D.,’ were purchased in 1825. One of these, R. Baconis opuscula, was bought for £51; the other, a Latin translation, by W. de Morbeck, of Proclus' Commentary on Plato, for £31 10s. They are uniformly bound with the rest of the series, and are numbered 235 and 236 respectively.

The donor stipulated that his MSS. should not be strictly confined to use within the walls of the Library. Archbishop Laud says, in the letter in which, as Chancellor, he announced the gift to the University, 'hee will not subiect these manuscripts to the strictnes of Sir Thomas Bodley's statutes', but will haue libertie given for any man of woorth, that wilbee at the paines and charge to print any of these bookes, to haue them oute of the Librarye vpon good caution giuen; but to that purpose and noe other.' But he afterwards left the University at liberty to deal as it pleased with his MSS. in this particular, as well as in all other questions that might arise concerning his books. In a letter to Dr. Langbaine, dated Nov. 7, 1654, he says: 'The absolute disposition of them in all occurences dependeth wholly and singly of the University; for she knoweth best what will be most for her service and advantage, and she is absolute mistress to dispose of them as she pleaseth.' He mentions in the same letter two trunks of Arabic MSS. which he gave to Archbp. Laud to send to the University or to St. John's College, but he never heard whether they reached their destination or no. He promises also to send over some more MSS. from France when he has returned thither; since, when the troubles of the Rebellion drove him into exile, he had carried his library with him. Upon the Restoration, however, and his own return to England, he unfortunately left his books behind; and after his death they were confiscated by the French King as belonging to an alien, and subsequently sold. Doubtless the two MSS. acquired in 1825 were among those to which his letter refers.

The first stone of the western end of the Library, with the Convocation House beneath, was laid on May 13, 1634; it was fitted up with shelves and ready for use by 1640. Selden's books were placed here in 1659. The hideous great west window is a monument of the bad taste of the time; it is much to be hoped that it may some day be replaced by a window more worthy of its conspicuous position, and affording a less marked contrast with its opposite neighbour, the noble east window erected by Bodley himself.

A.D. 1635.

In this year Rouse issued an Appendix to the Catalogue published in 1620, consisting of 208 pages in quarto, in double columns, and containing, as he says, about 1500 authors. James, on the title-page of his Catalogue in 1620, speaks of an Appendix accompanying that issue; hence, probably, it is that the words 'Editio secunda' are placed on the title of the Appendix of 1635. But, strange to say, no copy of the earlier Appendix can now be found existing in the Library. At the end of the later one is added [by John Verneuil, then Sub-Librarian,] an anonymous enlarged edition (which was also sold separately) of James' Catalogus interpretum S. Script. in Bibl. Bodl., with an Appendix of authors who had written on the Sentences and the Summa, on the Sunday-Gospels, on Cases of Conscience, on the Lord's Prayer, the Apostles' Creed, and the Decalogue. A book giving an account of all the copies of the Catalogue sold between 1620-47, with the names of the purchasers, still exists, the latter part being in the handwriting of Verneuil; but some leaves have been torn out at the year 1635. It appears from this book that the price of James' Catalogue was 2s. 8d., that of the Catalogue of Interpreters 6d., of the Appendix 2s., and of the whole series complete 5s.
A.D. 1635–1640.

The Register for these years presents a connected series of benefactions on the part of Archbishop Laud.

On May 22, 1635, he sent to the Library the first instalment of his magnificent gifts of MSS. which consisted of 462 volumes and five rolls. Among these were 46 Latin MSS., "e Collegio Herbpologisi [Würzburg] in Germania sumpti A.D. 1631, cum Suecorum Regis exercitus per universam fere Germaniam grassarentur." Laud directs, in his letter of gift, that none of the books shall on any account be taken out of the Library, "nisi solum ut typis mandentur, et sic publici et juris et utilitatis siant," upon sufficient security, to be approved by the Vice-Chancellor and Proctors; the MS., in such cases, being immediately after printing restored to its place in the Library. This permission was acted upon in the year 1647–8, when Patrick Young, the Librarian of the Royal Library at St. James's, was allowed to have the use of several volumes.

In 1636, 181 MSS. formed the Archbishop's second gift, which were accompanied by five cabinets of coins in gold, silver, and brass, with a list arranged chronologically; an Arabic astrolabe, of brass; two idols, one Egyptian, the other from the West Indies; and the fine bust of King Charles I, "singulari artificio ex purissimo ære conflatam," which is now placed under the arch opening into the central portion of the Library. This beautiful work of art is believed by Mr. John Bruce, the learned Vice-President of the Society of Antiquaries, who is engaged in researches into the life and productions of Hubert Le Sœur, the artist of the statue at Charing Cross, to be, (as well as the bust given by Laud

2 Entry at the end of the Register of Readers, 1648–9.
3 This was given to Laud by Selden, "vir omni eruditionis genere instructissimus," as Laud styles him in his letter of gift on June 16. Reg. Conv. R. 24. f. 128. to St. John's College,) a specimen of the skill of that famous craftsman. The existing arrangements of the Library being found insufficient for such large accessions, the lower end was fitted up in 1638-9 for the reception of Laud's books, for the cost of which £300 was voted by Convocation¹. In the following year, 555 more MSS. were received, together with a magical wand or staff, and some additional coins. The wand is of dark polished wood, a feet 9 inches long, with a grotesquely-carved figure at the head, apparently of Mexican workmanship: it is now kept in one of the Sub-Librarians' studies. The last gift from the munis-cient Chancellor of the University came in the next year, 1640, and consisted of no more than 81 MSS.; for troubles were beginning to gather now around the head of the Archbishop, and the Library at Oxford felt the blows which were levelled at Lambeth. This was accompanied with the following touching letter:—

'Viris mihi amicissimis Doctori Potter, Vice-Cancellario, reliquis-que Doctoribus, Procuratoribus, necon singulis in domo Convocationis intra alamam Universitatem Oxon. congregatis.
'Non datur scribendi otium. Hoc tamen quale quale est arripio lubens, ut paucta ad vos transmittam, adhuc florentes Academi. Tempora adsunt plusquam difficillima, nec negotia qua undique urgent facilliora sunt. Quin et quo loco res Ecclesia:
sint nemo non videt. Horum malorum fons non unus est; unus tamen, inter alios, furor est corum qui sanam doctrinam non sustinentes (quod olim observavit S. Hilarius) corruptam desiderant. Inter eos qui hoc estro perciti sunt quam difficile sit vivere, mihi plus satis innotescit, cui (Deo gratias!) idem est vivere et officium facere.
'Sed mittenda haec sunt, nec enim quo fata ducunt datur scire.
Nec mitiora redduntur tempora aut tutoria querimonii. Interim

¹ Reg. Conv. R. 24. 156b. 169b. The agreements with one Thomas Richardson for the work are found there.
velim scias me omnia vobis fausta et felicia precari, quo tuti sitis felicesque, dum hic inter sphæras superiores stellæ cujuslibet magnitudinis vix motum suum tenent, aut præ nubium crassitie debile lumen emitunt.

'Dum sic fluctuant omnia, statui apud me in tuto (id est, apud vos spero) MS. quedam, temporum priorum monumenta, deponere. Pauca sunt, sed prioribus similia, si non æqualia, et talia quæ, non obstantibus temporum difficultatibus, in usum vestrum parare non destitii. Sunt vero inter hæc Hebraica sex, Graeca undecim, Arabica tringinta quatuor, Latina viginti et unum, Italica duo, Anglica totidem, Persica quinque, quorum unum, folio digestum ampliori, historiam continet ab orbe condito ad finem imperii Saracениci, et est procul dubio magni valoris. Hæc per vos in Bibliothecam Bodleianam (nomen veneror, nec super-stitiose) reponenda, et cæteris olim meis apponenda, cupio, et sub eisdem legibus quibus priora dedi. Non opus est multis donum hoc nostrum nimis exile ornare, nec id in votis meis unquam fuit. Hoc obnixe et quotidie a Deo Opt. Max. summis votis peto, ut academia semper floreat, in ea Religio et Pictas et quicquid doctrinae decorare potest in altum crescat, ut tempestatibus quaæ nunc omnia perflant sedatis, tuto possitis et vobis et studiis et, præ omnibus, Deo frui. Quæ vœta semper erunt

'fidelissimi et amantissimi Cancellarii vestri,

'W. CANT.'

'Dat. ex ædibus meis
'Lambethani, 6° Nov. 1640.'

The collection, which contains in the whole nearly 1300 MSS., comprises works in very many languages: Hebrew, Chaldee, Syriac, Arabic, Persian, Turkish, Armenian, Ethiopic, Chinese, Russian, Greek, Latin, French, German, Italian, Irish, Anglo-Saxon, and English are all represented. It is impossible, in the limits of this survey, to point out many of the treasures with which the collection abounds; but that which is pre-eminently styled 'Codex Laudianus' (numbered Laud, Gr. 35) must not, of course, be omitted. It is a MS. of the Acts of the Apostles, in quarto, consisting of 227 leaves, and containing the text in both Greek and Latin, in parallel columns. Its date has been variously fixed by critics, from the sixth to the eighth century; Mr. Coxe places it towards the end of the seventh century, with whom Dr. Tischendorf, who examined it in 1865, and for whom some photographs of portions were executed, is believed to coincide. Some leaves are wanting at the end, commencing at chap. xxi. 29. It is the only MS. known to be extant which contains the peculiar readings (in number 74) cited by Bede in his Commentary as existing in the copy which he used; it has consequently been conjectured, with much reason, that this was the very MS. which he possessed. It was published by Thomas Hearne in 1715, printed in capitals corresponding line for line with the MS., but not with entire correctness; only 120 copies were printed, and it is therefore one of the rarest in the series of his works. A very fairly engraved facsimile of one verse (vii. 2) is to be found in Horne's Introduction.

¹ Reg. Conv. R. 24°, 182°.

Another famous MS. (No. 636) is a copy of the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle, which ends at the year 1154, and appears to have been written in, and to have belonged to, the abbey of Peterborough, from its containing many additions relating thereto. And a third treasure calling for special mention is an Irish vellum MS. (No. 610), which contains the Psalter of Cashel, Cormac's Glossary, Poems attributed to SS. Columb-kill and Patrick, &c.¹ The Greek MSS. of the collection are fully described in vol. i. of the ¹ Four volumes of the miscellaneous collection on Irish affairs made by Sir G. Carew, afterwards Earl of Totness, are also to be found here. A list of their contents, as of those of the other volumes preserved at Lambeth and in University College, is printed in Mr. T. Duffus Hardy's Report to the Master of the Rolls on the Carte and Carew Papers, 8vo, Lond. 1864.

One of the Würtzburg books rescued from the Swedish soldiery is a magnificent Missal printed on vellum by Jeorius Ryser in 1481, with illuminated initials. On a fly-leaf is the following note: '1481, Johannes Kewsch, vicarius in ecclesia Herb[polensi] hunc librum comparavit propris expensis, et pro omnibus, scil. pergameno, impressura, rubricatione, illinatura, et ligatione, xviiii. flor.' Then follows a bequest, in his own hand, in 1486, of the book to the successive vicars of St. Bartholomew, which is repeated at the end of the 'Canon Missæ.' In the latter place four subsequent possessors, from 1565 to 1580, have written their names, the last of them adding, 'Omnis arbor qui non facit fructum bonum excidetur et in ignem mittetur.' The Library reference is now Auct. i. Q. i. 7.

A.D. 1637.

A Bachelor of Arts and Fellow of St. John's College, one Abraham Wright, published the results of his lighter reading in the Bodelian in a little volume printed by Leonard Lichfield, which he entitled, Delitiae Delitiarum, sive Epigrammatum ex optimis quibusque hujus et novissimi seculi Poëtis in amplissima illa Bibliotheca Bodeliana, et pene omnino alibi extantibus, Ætologia.

A.D. 1640.

On Jan. 25, 1639-40, died Robert Burton, of Ch. Ch., 'Demo-critus junior,' and bequeathed out of his large library whatever he possessed which was wanting in the Bodelian. A list of the Latin books thus acquired is given in the Benefaction Book, followed by this sentence: ‘Porro [d. d.] comœdiarum, trage-diarum, et schediasmatum ludicrorum (præsertim idiomate vernacuculo) aliquot centurias, quas propter multitudo non adjectumus.’ These latter were just the classes of books the admission of which the Founder had almost prohibited, viz., ‘almanacks, plays, and an infinite number that are daily printed.’ Even if ‘some little profit might be reaped (which God knows is very little) out of some of our play-books, the benefit thereof,’ said he, ‘will nothing near countervail the harm that the scandal will bring upon the Library, when it shall be given out that we stuffed it full of baggage books.’ In consequence of this well-meant but mistaken resolution, the Library was bare of just those books which Burton’s collection could afford, and which now form some of its rarest and most curious divisions. In his own address ‘To the Reader’ of his Anatomy of Melancholy he very fully describes the nature of his own gatherings. ‘I hear new news every day; and those ordinary rumours of war, plagues, fires, inundations, thefts, murders, massacres, meteors, comets, spectrums, prodigies, apparitions, of towns taken, cities besieged in France, Germany, Turkey, Persia, Poland, &c. * * * * are daily brought to our ears; new books every day, pamphlets, currantoes, stories (&c.). Now come tidings of weddings, maskings, mummeries, entertainments, jubilees, embassies, tilts and tournaments, trophys, triumphs, revels, sports, plays; then again, as in a new shifted scene, treasons, cheating tricks, robberies, enormous villainies, in all kinds, funerals, burials, death of princes, new discoveries, expeditions; now comical, then tragical matters.’ His books are chiefly to be found in the classes marked 40 Art. (particularly under letter L), Theol., and Art. BS. Amongst his smaller books is one of the only two known copies of the edition of Venus and Adonis in 1602. He is specially mentioned also in the preface to Verneuil’s Nomenclator, 1642, as being (together with Mr. Kilby of Linc. Coll., Mr. Prestwich, of All Souls’, and Mr. Francis Wright, of Merton) a donor of Commentaries and Sermons. Besides his books, he bequeathed £100, with which an annual payment of £5 was obtained. For some time, however, this payment was subsequently lost; for in Barlow’s Accounts for 1655, after mentioning the receipt of £40 paid by one Mr. Thomas Smith, occurs this ‘Memorandum’—that the £40 above mentioned amongst the Recepta is a part of an £100 given to the Library by Mr. Rob. Burton of Ch. Ch. It was first lent to Mr. Thomas Smith, and he (by bond) was to pay to the Library £5 per annum. He breaking, or very much decay’d in his estate, and deade, this £40 was payd in by his executors, £50 more is to be payd us by University Coll. (it was owinge to Mr. Smith, and his executors assigned it over to us), and Dr. Langbaine hath in his keepinge a bond of one Spencer for £10 more.’ The latter was paid in 1658, as appears from an entry, ‘Recept. a Dno. Spicer (sic) et Hopkins, ex syngrapha;’ but the former was still unpaid in 1660.

1 Reliquiae Bodl. p. 278.

A.D. 1641.

The famous ‘Guy Fawkes’ Lantern,’ which is to this day such an object of interest in the Picture Gallery to most sight-seers, was presented to the University by Robert Heywood, M.A., Brasenose College, who had been Proctor in 1639. It came into his possession from his being the son of a Justice of the Peace who assisted in searching the cellars of the Parliament House, and arrested Fawkes with the lantern in his hand. In 1640 this Justice Heywood was wounded by a Roman Catholic when, while still holding office as a Justice for Westminster, he was engaged in proposing the oaths to the recusants of that city. The following inscription is attached to it, engraved upon a brass plate: 'Laterna illa ipsa, qua usus est et cum qua deprehensus Guido Faux in crypta subterranea, ubi domo Parlamenti difflandae operam dabat. Ex dono Rob. Heywood, nuper Academiæ Procuratoris, Apr. 4, 1641.' From being for many years exposed to the handling of every visitor, it became much broken; but it has now for a long time been secured from further injury by being enclosed in a glass case.

In May an order was made by the Curators that no strangers should have the use of any MSS. without finding sureties for the safety of the same, in consequence of a suspicion that whole pages had been in some cases abstracted. Hereupon a very earnest, and, in sooth, indignant, remonstrance was presented to the 'Curatores vigilantissimi' by the strangers then residing in Oxford 'studiorum causa.' The original document is preserved in Wood MS. F. 27, and is signed by eleven persons from Prussia and other parts of Germany, six Danes, and one Englishman (John Wyberd), a medical student. Some of these visitors are found, by reference to the Register of Readers, to have been students for a considerable time; the Baron ab Eulemburg, for instance, having been admitted on Jan. 18, 1638–9, and one Ven, a Dane, in 1633. The memorialists say that there is not even the very slightest ground for attributing such an offence to any of them, and that the Librarian himself candidly confesses that it has never been proved to him that strangers have ever done anything of the kind; they urge the difficulty of their finding sponsors for their honesty when they themselves are strangers and foreigners; they appeal to Bodley's own statutes as providing sufficiently for the contingency by ordering the Librarian to number the pages of a MS. before giving it out, and to examine it when returned; they fortify their arguments by abundant references to the civil law; they upbraid those who,—‘inter necino exterorum atque advenarum odio aestuantes (O celebratam Britanniae hospitalitatem!),’—have originated the calumny; and, finally, warn the Curators against giving occasion for suspicion to the learned men of the whole world that ‘doctos Angliae viros, priscæ hospitalitatis immemores, majori exterorum quam Athenienses Megarensium odio flagrare.’ The memorial is endorsed: ‘De hac re amplius deliberandum censebant Praefecti ult. Maii, 1641;’ and no doubt the obnoxious order was soon repealed. Half a century later, on Nov. 8, 1693, the order was in a certain degree renewed: it was then enjoined ‘that no one be permitted to transcribe any manuscript, but such as have a right to study in the Library.’ The revival, however, was not due to any revived fear of foreigners; the following reason is given in a letter of information on Library matters from Dr. Hyde to Hudson, his successor, written on the latter’s appointment in 1701:—‘Some in the University have been very troublesome in pressing that their Servitors may transcribe manuscripts for them, though not sworn to the Library, nor yet capable of being sworn; wherefore the Curators made an order (as you will find in the Book of Orders in the Archives) ‘that none were capable of transcribing, except those who had the right of studying in the Library,” viz. Batchelors1.’ But no doubt this order also soon became dormant, even if it were not definitely repealed.

1 Neal's History of the Puritans, i. 688.

A.D. 1642.

‘The Kinge, Jul. 11, 1642, had £500 out of Sir Th. Bodlyes Chest, as appears by Dr. Chaworthes acquittance in the same box.’ (Barlow’s Library Accounts for 1657. MS.) This loan was,

1 Walker’s Letters of Eminent Men, 1813, vol. i. p. 175.
of course, never repaid. It is regularly carried on in the Anna Accounts up to the year 1782.

Nov. 30. 'At night the Library doore was almose broken opet Suspetio de incendio, &c.' (Brian Twyne's Masterings of the Uni in Hearne's Chron. Dunst. p. 757.)

It must have been about the close of this year or beginning of the next, while the king was in winter quarters at Oxford that the visit was paid to the Library, which is the subject of the following well-known anecdote. It is here quoted from the earliest authority in which it is found, viz. Welwood's Memoir, Lond. 1700. pp. 105-107:—

'The King being at Oxford during the Civil Wars, went one day to see the Publick Library, where he was show'd among other Books, a Virgil nobly printed and exquisitely bound. The Lord Falkland, to divert the King, would have his Majesty make a tri of his fortune by the Sortes Virgiliana, which everybody knew was an usual kind of augury some ages past. Whereupon the King opening the book, the period which happen'd to come was that part of Dido's imprecation against Æneas, which M Dryden translates thus:—

"Yet let a race untam'd, and haughty foes,
His peaceful entrance with dire arts oppose,
Oppress'd with numbers in th' unequal field,
His men discourag'd, and himself expell'd,
Let him for succour sue from place to place,
Torn from his subjects, and his son's embrace,
First let him see his friends in battle slain,
And their untimely fate lament in vain:
And when at length the cruel war shall cease,
On hard conditions may he buy his peace.
Nor let him then enjoy supreme command,
But fall untimely by some hostile hand,
And lye unburi'd in the common sand."

(Æneid, iv. 88.)

It is said K. Charles seem'd concerned at this accident, as that the Lord Falkland observing it, would likewise try his ov fortune in the same manner; hoping he might fall upon some passage that could have no relation to his case, and thereby divert the King's thoughts from any impression the other might have upon him. But the place that Falkland stumbled upon was yet more suited to his destiny than the other had been to the King's, being the following expressions of Evander upon the untimely death of his son Pallas, as they are translated by the same hand:

"O Pallas, thou hast fail'd thy plighted word,
To fight with reason, not to tempt the sword.
I warned thee, but in vain, for well I knew
What perils youthful ardor would pursue;
That boiling blood would carry thee too far,
Young as thou wert in dangers, raw to war.
Oh! curst essay of arms, disastrous doom,
Prelude of bloody fields and fights to come."

(Eneid, xi. 220.)

There is no copy of Virgil now in the Library amongst those which it possessed previously to 1642, which is 'exquisitely bound' as well as 'nobly printed;' it is not therefore possible to fix on the particular volume which the King consulted.

A.D. 1645.

A small slip of paper, carefully preserved, is the memorial of an interesting incident connected with the last days in Oxford of the Martyr-King whose history is so indissolubly united with that of the place. Amidst all the darkening anxieties which filled the three or four months preceding the surrender of himself to the Scots, King Charles appears to have snatched some leisure moments for refreshment in quiet reading. His own library was no longer his; but there was one close at hand which could more than supply it. So, to the Librarian Rous, (the friend of Milton, but whose anti-monarchical tendencies, we may be sure, had always hitherto been carefully concealed) there came, on Dec. 30, an order. "To the Keeper of the University Library, or to his deputy," worded in the following terms: "Deliver unto the bearer hereof, for the present use of his Majesty, a book intituled, Histoire universelle du Siècle D'Anjou, and this shall be your warrant;" and the order was one which the Vice-Chancellor had subscribed with his special authorization. "His Majesty's use is in command to us. S. Fell, Vice Can." But the Librarian had sworn to observe the Statutes which, with no respect of persons, forbad such a removal of a book: and so, on the reception of Fell's order, Rous goes to the King; and shews him the Statutes, which being read, the King would not have the booke. nor permit it to be taken out of the Library, saying it was fit that the will and statutes of the pious founder should be religiously observed!"

Perhaps a little of the hitherto undeveloped Puritan spirit may have helped to enliven the conscience of the Librarian, who, had he been a Cavalier, might have possibly found something in the exceptional circumstances of the case, to excuse a violation of the rule; but, as the matter stood, it reflects, on the one hand, the highest credit both on Rous's honesty and courage, and shows him to have been fit for the place he held, while, on the other hand, the King's acquiescence in the refusal does equal credit to his good-sense and good-temper. We shall see that this occurrence formed a precedent for a like refusal to the Protector in 1654 by Rous's successor, when Cromwell showed equal good feeling and equal respect for law.

A.D. 1646.

'When Oxford was surrendered (24th Junii, 1646) the first thing Generall Fairfax did was to set a good guard of soldiers to preserve the Bodleian Library. 'Tis said there was more hurt donne by the Cavaliers (during their garrison) by way of embezziling and cutting off chaines of bookes then there was since. He was a lover of learning, and had he not taken this special care, that noble library had been utterly destroyed, for there were ignorant senators enough who would have been contented to have had it so. This I doe assure you from an ocular witnesse, E. W. esq1.

1 Bp. Barlow's Argument against Lending Books. MS.

A.D. 1647.

John Verneuil, M.A., Sub-librarian, died about the end of September. He was a native of Bordeaux, and came into England as a Protestant refugee shortly before 1608. In that year he entered at Magdalene College, and was incorporated M.A. from his own University of Montauban in 1625. Besides his share in the Appendix to the Catalogue noticed under the year 1635, the following small book of a similar kind in English was issued by him:

A Nomenclator of such Tracts and Sermons as have beene printed, or translated into English upon any place or booke of Holy Scripture; now to be had in the most famous and publique Library of Sir Thomas Bodley in Oxford. This is the title of the second and enlarged edition, which appeared in 1642 in a small duodecimo volume, printed at Oxford, by Henry Hall. The first edition (which was not entirely confined to books in the Library) was printed under the author's initials by William Turner in 1637. Some books communicated by friends are here cited, which would, says Verneuil, have been accessible in the Bodleian, 'had the Company of Stationers beene as mindfull of their covenant as my selfe have beene zealous for the good of this our Library.' In an interesting undated letter from Sir Richard Napier, Knt. (while apparently an undergraduate of Wadham College, before 1630) to his uncle the

1 Aubrey's Lives; in Letters by Eminent Persons, ii. 346.
Rev. Richard Napier, which is preserved in Ashmole MS. 1730, fol. 168, is the following curious passage relating to the facilities for studying in the Library, which were afforded to him by Verneuil:—

'I have made a faire way to goe into the Library privately when I please, and there to sitt from 6 of the clocke in the morneing to 5 at night. I have a private place in the Library to lay those bookes and to write out what I list, without being seene by any, or any comeing to me. I have made the second Keeper of the Library [i.e. Verneuil] my friend and servant, who promised me his key at all tymes to goe in privately, when as otherwise it is not opened above 4 hours a day, and some days not at all, as on Hollidays, and their eyes in the afternoone, yet then by his meanes I shall [have] free acces and recess at all tymes. He hath pleased me so far as to let me write in his counting house, or his little private study in the great publick library, where I may very privately write, and locke up all safely when I depart thence; he will write for me when I have not the leisure, or will transcribe any thinge I shall desire him, and if it be French translate it, for that is his mother tongue.'

Probably the practice here mentioned of admitting readers by favour into the Library at unstatutable times grew in the course of years to a considerable height, or was found (as might naturally be expected) productive of mischievous consequences, for on Nov. 8, 1722, it was 'ordered by the Curators that no person under any pretence whatsoever be permitted to study in the said Library at any other time than what is prescribed and limited by the Bodleian Statutes.'

Verneuil was succeeded in his office in the Library by Francis Yonge, M.A., of Oriel College.

Milton's gift of his Poems. See under 1620.

A.D. 1648.

At the end of the Readers' Register for 1647-8, 1648-9, is a list of nine volumes 'olim surrepti,' of which five had been replaced by other copies. Entries are made in the same place of some coins which were given in 1648-50. At this period the Library appears to have been well attended by readers; about twelve or fifteen quarto and octavo volumes being daily entered, those of folio size being accessible (as, in regard to a portion of the Library, is still the case) by the readers themselves, and not registered because at that time chained to their shelves. The register for the next years (as well as those which followed, up to the year 1708) appears to be lost, so that it cannot be ascertained whether this daily average continued during the Usurpation; but thus far it seems that Dr. John Allibond's description of the state of the Library as consequent on the Puritan visitation of the University in 1648, is not borne out by facts. For that loyal humourist, in his Rustica Academica Oxoniensis super reformata Descriptio, which is supposed to commemorate the condition of Oxford in Oct. 1648, writes thus of our Library:—

\[\text{'Conscendo orbis illud decus}
\text{Bodleio fundatore:}
\text{Sed intus erat nullem pecus,}
\text{Excepto janitore.}
\text{Neglectos vidi libros multos,}
\text{Quod mimime mirandum:}
\text{Nam inter barios tot et stultos}
\text{There's few could understand 'em.'}\]

A.D. 1649.

'The Jews proffer £600,000 for Paul's, and Oxford Library, and may have them for £200,000 more.' They wished to obtain the first for a synagogue, and to do a little commercial business with the second. It is said in Monteith's History of the Troubles (translated by Ogilvie, 1735, p. 473) that the sum they offered was

\[
1\text{ London News-letter of April 7; printed in Carte's Collection of Letters, vol. i. p. 275.}\]
£500,000, but that the Council of War refused to take less than £800,000: probably they afterwards increased this their original bid to £600,000.

Philip, Earl of Pembroke, the Puritan Chancellor of the University, gave a splendidly bound copy of the Paris Polyglott, printed in 1645 in 10 vols.

A.D. 1652.

John Rous, the Librarian, died in the beginning of April, probably on April 3, as, the Statutes requiring the election of Librarian to take place within three days of a vacancy, it was on the 6th of that month that Thomas Barlow, M.A., Fellow of Queen's College, was unanimously elected to be Rous's successor. At the same time certain orders were read in Convocation which the Curators had made, for the formation by the Librarian of a Catalogue of the coins and other rarities, providing also that they should be regularly visited and verified by the Curators every November.¹

A legacy of £20 from Rous to the Library is entered in the Benefaction Register, under the year 1661, probably because it may not have been actually received until that year.

A.D. 1653.

Fifteen MSS., by Spanish authors, were given by Peter Pett, L.L.B., Fellow of All Souls' College; and a sacred Turkish vestment of linen (e Mus. 45) on which the whole of the Koran is written in Arabic, by Richard Davydge, an East Indian merchant.

A.D. 1654.

'April last, 1654, my Lord Protector sent his letter to Mr. Vice-Chancellor to borrow a MS. (Joh. de Muris) for the Portugal

¹ Reg. 'T. 158-9.' MS. Note by Dr. P. Bliss.
Ambassador. A copy of the Statute was sent (but not the book), which when his Highness had read, he was satisfy'd, and commended the prudence of the Founder, who had made the place so sacred 1.

Cromwell's gift of MSS. See under 1629.

A.D. 1654-1659.

The death of John Selden occurred on Nov. 30 2. By his will the Library became possessed at once of his collection of Oriental and Greek MSS., together with a few Latin MSS. specially designated, as well as of such of his Talmudical and Rabbinical books as were not already to be found there. It has generally been supposed that no part of his library was received before the year 1659, and that none at all was actually bequeathed by Selden. The account usually given (taken from Burnet's Life of Sir M. Hales, p. 156) is that Selden was so offended with the University for refusing the loan of a MS., except upon a bond for £1000, that he revoked that part of his will which left his library to the Bodleian, and put it entirely at the free disposal of his executors, and that they, when five years had passed, during which the Society of the Inner Temple (to whom it was first offered) had

1 Barlow's Argument against Lending Books out.
2 As Aubrey (Lives, with Letters by Eminent Persons, ii. 533) has preserved a story that Selden on his death-bed refused, through Hobbes' persuasion, to see a clergyman (Mr. Johnson) who was coming 'to assiole him,' it is worth while to print the following notice of his death from Rawlinson MS. B. civiii. fol. 75, a volume containing a collection of biographical anecdotes, &c., written in a rather clumsy copyist's hand, about the beginning of the last century: 'Mr. Selden upon his death-bed disclaimed all Hobisme and the like wicked and Atheistical opinions, commanded that neither Mr. Hobbs nor Capt. Rossingham should be admitted to him, confessed his sins, and desired absolution, which was given him by Archbp. Usher; but amongst other things he much deplored the loss of his time in studying of things more curious than useful, and wished that he [had] rather executed the office of a justice of peace than spent his time in that which the world calls learning.'
3 See also Aubrey's Lives, ut supra, ii. 536.
taken no steps to provide a building for its reception, conceiving themselves to be executors not of Selden's passion but of his will, sent it in 1659 to its original destination. But it is clear from Selden's will (as printed by Wilkins in his Works, vol. i. p. iv.) that the books mentioned above were really bequeathed by him to Oxford; a line or two appears to be somehow omitted, by which the sense of the passage is lost, and in consequence of which the name of the Library does not appear, but there is a general reference to it both in the specification of such Hebrew books as are 'not already in the Library,' and in the mention of the 'said Chancellor, Masters, and Scholars' of the University (although no previous mention of them occurs); while all other books not thus conveyed are left to the disposal of his executors. But a letter from Langbaine to Pococke, written from London only three days after Selden's death, furnishes proof positive; for there the former writes, as executor, that all the Oriental MSS., with such Rabbinical and Talmudical printed books as were not already in the Library, and the Greek MSS. not otherwise disposed of, are left to Oxford. And in the Annual Accounts, under the year 1655, we find the following entries:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Description</th>
<th>Cost</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Pro vectura codicum MSS. a Londino Oxoniam</td>
<td>£0 9s. 0d.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>D. Langbaine pro expensis cum Londinum petit, libros a Seleno legatos repetitur</td>
<td>5 0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>D. Ed. Pococke eodem tempore in rem eandem Londinum miss.</td>
<td>7 0</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

It is clear, therefore, that a portion of Selden's collection came to the Library by his bequest immediately after his death. And the reason why the whole was not bequeathed is

---

1 Nichols (Lit. Anecd. i. 333) gives another and very different story, for which he produces no authority. He says that Selden had actually sent his library to Oxford during his lifetime, but hearing that they had lent out a book without sufficient caution, he sent for it back again.

certainly not correctly stated by Burnet, nor even by Wood, who says that he had been informed that it was because the borrowing of certain MSS. had been refused. For the Convocation Register shows that a grace was passed in Convocation, on Aug. 29, 1654, which sanctioned the giving leave to Selden to have MSS. from the collections of Barocci, Roe, and Digby (these donors having either expressed an opinion, or distinctly stipulated, that the rigour of the Library Statutes should sometimes be relaxed), provided he did not have more than three at a time, and that he gave bond in £100 (not £1000) for the return of each of them within a year\(^1\). Had these conditions been really the cause of Selden's taking offence, his executors would hardly have stipulated, as they actually did, in their own conditions of gift, that no book from his collection should hereafter be lent to any person upon any condition whatsoever. But there is certainly some obscurity hanging over the matter, which probably may be dispersed by further investigation. The writer of the sketch of the history of the Bodleian prefixed to Bernard's Cat. MSS., after quoting Wood's account, only says, when barely more than forty years had elapsed, that he will not venture to speak rashly about the case of the lending of books; as if it were already forgotten how the facts stood. On the proposal to lend being first mooted, Barlow, the Librarian, drew up a paper on the general question, in which he opposed it both on the grounds of Statute and expediency; the original MS. of which still exists in the Library. Selden was at first mentioned in this paper by name, with distinct reference to his application; but the name was subsequently crossed out wherever it thus occurred, and the subject treated without any

\(^1\) Reg. Conv. T. p. 251. It is added, as an additional reason for the concession, 'porro apes sit virum in rem nostram academicam optime affectum, hanc ei extra ordinem gratiam factam abunde olim compensaturum.'
never thought fit to do so, except with regard to Lord Pembroke's MSS.; secondly, on the ground that if the rule were once broken, it would be impossible to refuse any person, without incurring great odium, while the gratifying all applicants would contemptibilibs acquisitionem ut animam pro qua mortuus est Christus inemptissime periclitari sitat.

JO. PRIDEAUX, Vice-Canc. et S. Theol. Professor Regius.
THO. CLAYTON, Medic. Professor Regius.
DANIEL EASTCOT, Procurator Sen.
RICARDUS HILL, Procurator Jun.
JOHANNES SOUTH, Graece Lingue Protector Regius.'

More serious abstractions, however, than such as these, have lately (i.e. within the last twenty or thirty years) been practised. It has recently been discovered that two extremely rare tracts by Thomas Churchyard, his Epitaph of Sir P. Sidney, and Feast full of sad Chere, have been cut out of the volume of tracts in which they were bound up. May it be hoped that Book-lovers, as well as lovers of honesty, will remember this, should unknown copies suddenly come to light? Another book, mentioned by Wharton as being in Tanner's collection, The Children of the Chapel Stript and Whipe, is also not forthcoming; but no trace of its actual existence at any time within the walls of the Library has, as yet, been found. As in the course of making a new General Catalogue of the whole library, every separate volume and tract is now conspicuously stamped with the name of its locusale, it is hoped that depredations of this character will be entirely checked.

Two instances, however, in which 'consciences' have been sufficiently awakened to make restitution of stolen goods, have occurred within the last twenty years. In 185— (exact year forgotten), on a day on which a Convocation had been held on some exciting subject, which had consequently brought up country voters from all parts, the present writer happened to notice that a small book had been laid in a shelf of folios near the Library door. Taking it up, he found it to be a rare volume of tracts by J. Preston and T. Goodwin, printed at Amsterdam, and bearing a Library reference. On proceeding to restore it to its place, that place was found to be occupied by another book; this, of course, led to further examination, and it was then discovered that the former volume had been missing for so many years, that at last, all hope of its recovery being abandoned, its place had been filled up. The old register-books of readers were then ransacked, and at length an entry was found of the delivery of this book to a reader, who was still living at the time of this Convocation, on Feb. 14, 1807. A quarto volume was also found about the same time thrust in amongst other quartos in a shelf near the door, but the particulars of this case have been forgotten.

A third case of recovery, but of a different kind, occurred in 1851. In the year 1789 the Library was visited by Hen. E. G. Paulus, of Jena, afterwards the too-well-known author of the Leben Jesu, who copied from Pococke MS. 32 (a small octavo ...works attended for the public.

...in any private man...

...to the prejudice of...

...while he has the...

...an anxious desire to...

...are disappoint...

...University, in the...

...books to the other.

...and the public g...

...our present: and pi...

...have been in the Library: for by... lending, private persons only want the use of those books which are another's, whereas by lending, the University wants the use of those books which are her own. Sure no prudent man can think it fit to gratify particular persons with the publick detriment.

'4. The Library is a magazine which the pious Founder hath fix'd in a publick place for a publick use; and though his charity to private persons is such that he will hinder none (who is justly qualify'd and worthy) to come to it, yet his charity to the publick is such that he would not have it ambulatory, to goe to any private person. And sure 'tis more rational that Mahomet should go to the mountaine, than that the mountaine should come to Mahomet.

'5. Lending of books makes them lyable to many casualties, as, I. absolute losse, either 1. in via, by the carrier's negligence, or violence offer'd him, or, 2. in termino, they may be lost by the person that borrows them; for (presuming the person noble, and carefull for their preservation, yet) his house may be burn'd, or (by robbers) broken open (as Mr. Selden's unhappily was not long since): or, (in case they scape these casualties) they may be spoyl'd in the carriage, as by sad experience we find, for above 60 or 100 leaves of a Greek MS.\(^1\) lent out of Archiva Pembro- chiana to Mr. Pat. Younge were irrecoverably defaced. Now what has happen'd heretofore may happen hereafter; and therefore to keep them sacredly (and without any lending) in the Library (according to our good Founder's will and statute) will be the best way for their preservation.'

Barlow adds finally, in the sixth and seventh places, that if all lending were declared unlawful, it would greatly encourage others to give more to the Library when they saw how religiously their gifts would be preserved, and that if no exceptions were made

Wood says) than from regard to the rules of the Library (Huber's English Universities, by F. Newman, vol. ii. p. 45.) However, the book was at last produced before the Council. (Wood's Hist. and Antiq., by Gutch, vol. ii. p. 403.)

\(^1\) 'Μεταφυσία, num. 131' [Barocci].
bringing the books from London cost about £34, and the providing chains for them £25 10s. ¹ Unfortunately, during the interval, many books had been lost which had been borrowed in London, and were never returned. (Life, in Works, I. lii.) And a part, which somehow was not sent to Oxford, afterwards altogether perished, 'for the fire of the Temple destroyed in one of their chambers eight chests full of the registers of abbeyes, and other manuscripts relating to the history of England; tho' most of his law-books are still safe in Lincoln's Inn.' Some medical books were bequeathed to the College of Physicians. Some of the original deeds relating to the gift were bought for the Library in 1837 for £1 1s.

About 8000 volumes were, in all, added to the Library by this gift, most of which bear Selden's well-known motto: ἀπὸ πάντων τὴν Διεθνησίαν.' Amongst them are some which belonged to Ben Jonson, Dr. Donne, and Sir Robert Cotton. The number of miscellaneous foreign works, in several European languages, is noticeable, many of which had been published but a short time before Selden's death. In curious contrast to the character of the greater part of his collection (rich in classics and science, theology and history, law and Hebrew literature) there occurs one Fuller, whose Church History was published in the year following Selden's death, after telling this scandalous story, proceeds thus (book ix. p. 234):—'Sure I am, a great antiquarie lately deceased (rich as well in his state as learning) at the hearing hereof quitted all his intention of benefaction to Oxford or any place else, on suspicion it would be diverted to other uses, on the same token that he merrily said, I think the best way for a man to perpetuate his memory is to procure the Pope to canonize him for a saint, for then he shall be sure to be remembred in their Calender; whereas otherwise I see all Protestant charity subject to the covetousness of posterity to devour it, and bury the donor thereof in oblivion.' And the name of this 'great antiquarie' was supplied in 1659 by the Puritan writer Henry Hickman, who, as a Demy of Magdalene College, had shared in the spoils. He, in the Appendix to his Justification of the Fathers and Schoolmen, gives (in answer to a passage in Heylin's Examen Historicum) a full account of the dividing of the gold, adding, 'which, as is said, did hinder Mr. John Selden from bestowing his library on the University.' And Wood (Hist. and Antiq. by Gutch, ii. 943) says that he had been told that this misappropriation was one reason of Selden's distaste at Oxford. From all this it is clear that Burnet's narrative gives a very inaccurate account of the matter.

It was in the year 1659 that the great mass of Selden's collection was forwarded by his executors. In the accounts for 1660 appear payments to Barlow of £20 'for his paines in procuring Mr. Selden's books,' and of £51 for his expenses thereon. The where they were of old deposited. Here is also carefully preserved a very large and valuable collection of early charters, including all which belonged to the Hospital of St. John Baptist, upon the site of which the College was built, and to several suppressed priories which were annexed to the College, reaching back to the twelfth century. Of these the author of this volume is engaged in preparing a MS. catalogue, for the use of the College.
1855

[Text not legible]
-1658

BODLEIAN LIBRARY.

academiae et rempubl. literariam benevolentia, codices insequentes Bibl. Bodleianæ dono dedit Maii iii, Anno Cl. IOC. LVII; viz. the great Dutch Bible with annotations, 'edit. ult. [scil. Hague, 1637] auro sericoque compacta,' and the Æthiopic Psalter of 1513. A leaf which followed this entry has been removed from the Register, probably because it contained some further particulars of Peters' gift, or possibly the record of the MSS. presented by the Protector himself in 1654. The binding of silk and gold has now altogether disappeared, and the Bible is clad in a plain calf coat, with no note of its former condition or of its donor.

Francis Yonge, M.A. of Oriel College, the Sub-librarian, died in this year. In his place succeeded, through the influence of Dr. Owen, Dean of Ch. Ch., Henry Stubbe, M.A., the well-known violent and varying political writer, then a Student of that House. From the posts, however, of both Librarian and Student Stubbe was ejected in March, 1659, on account of the publication of his book entitled, A Light Shining out of Darkness, which was supposed to attack the Universities and clergy.

A.D. 1658.

Gerard Langbaine, D.D., the learned Provost of Queen's College, died on Feb. 10 in this year. Twenty-one vols. of his Adversaria, consisting chiefly of extracts from Bodleian MSS. and of notes concerning the arrangement of the books in the Library, were bought for £11. Nine other volumes were bequeathed by Ant. à Wood in 1695. They are all fully described by Mr. Coxe in vol. i. [cols. 877–888] of the General Catalogue of the MSS. of the Library, which appeared in 1853, as well as more briefly in Bernard's Catalogue. Besides obtaining his own autograph collections by purchase, the Library became possessed by bequest from him of the very valuable MS. (e Mus. 86) on the history of Wickliffe and his followers, entitled Fasciculi Zisaniorum, written by Thomas Walden. This was edited by the late Dr. Shirley in 1858, as part of the Master of the Rolls' Series of Chronicles. Dr. Shirley traced the volume to the hands of Bale and Usher, but was not aware of the way in which it came to the Library.

1 See p. 55.

The effect which civil war and confusion had had upon literature may be commercially estimated by the fact that a gift of £5 from Joseph Maynard, B.D., of Exeter College, proved sufficient for the purchase of 28 printed volumes and 11 MSS., many of which were curious.

A crocodile, from Jamaica, was given by John Desborow, the republican Major-General, and brother-in-law to the Protector.

A.D. 1659.

Thomas Hyde, M.A., of Queen's College, was appointed Under-keeper on the expulsion of Henry Stubbe.

A.D. 1660.

Thomas Barlow, D.D. (who had been elected Provost of Queen's College in 1658), resigned the Librarianship on Sept. 25, in consequence of his appointment to the Margaret Professorship of Divinity. Thomas Lockey, B.D., Student of Ch. Ch., was elected in his place, on Sept. 28, by 102 votes to 80, over Mr. [John] Good, M.A., Balliol College.

A curious story is preserved by Wanley and Dr. Wallis, in memoranda, dated 1698–1701, on the fly-leaves of a copy of the rare Index Librorum prohibitorum printed at Madrid in 1612—

---

1 Reg. Convoc. Tr. 27, p. 57.
(4° U. 46. Th.), respecting the visit of a Roman Catholic priest to the Library during the period of Barlow's headship. In the course of conversation with Barlow, the priest denied that such a book as this Index had ever been printed at Madrid (there being various discrepancies between it and the Roman Index), whereupon this copy was produced, bearing the names of several inquisitors who had from time to time possessed it. The visitor was extremely surprised, and, being very desirous of purchasing it, offered any sum for it that might be demanded, with the intent (as the somewhat suspicious tellers of the tale suggest) to destroy it; but the Doctor was above corruption. The vigilance of the Librarians being aroused, the book was removed from an exposed place where it had formerly been kept, to a less accessible situation in the gallery, and securely chained. Wallis adds that one fly-leaf, containing some of the previous owners' names, had since then been torn out.

A. D. 1662.

A legacy of £50 was paid which had been bequeathed some time previously by Alex. Ross, now-a-days best known as the Ross of Hudibrastic memory. It is singular that a copy of the old printed quarto catalogue of the Library was amongst the books purchased with this gift; which shows that, within forty years after publication, it had become scarce even in the Library itself.

Five Arabic and eight Chinese MSS. were given by William Thurston, a London merchant. By a mistaken arrangement of various other small gifts, Thurston now passes as the donor of forty Arabic, Persian, and Syriac MSS., instead of five. Several of these, at present all numbered alike as Thurston MSS., were

1 The memoranda are printed in Mendham's Lit. Policy of the Church of Rome.
  Second edit., pp. 153-4, and in Bliss' Reliquiae Hebramiae, i. 13-14.
given in 1684 by Jos. Taylor, LL.D., of St. John's College, one by Crewe, Bishop of Durham, in 1680, one by Benj. Polsted, a London African merchant, in 1678, one by Charles Robson, B.D., Queen's College, about 1630, and one is an Armenian poem of thanks for benefits received from the University, presented by the author, Jac. de Gregoriis, an Armenian priest, in 1674. One other volume (a mathematical MS. bought at Constantinople, by Const. Ravius, in 1641) was at one time, as it appears, abstracted from the Library, and was restored by means of Dr. Marshall, who, after the words 'Liber Bibliothecæ Bodleianæ Oxon.' has added the following note: 'quem ex Ratelbandi cujusdam bibliopolæ officina libraria, prope novum templum Amstelodami, redimendum pretio persoluto curavit Tho. Mareschallus, e Collegio Lincolniensi apud Oxonienses.'

The first statutory obligation upon the Stationers' Company to deliver a copy of each book printed by them to this Library, together with that of Cambridge and the Royal Library, was imposed by the act of 14 Chas. II. c. 33, for two years, which was renewed from time to time until the passing of the Copyright Act of 8 Q. Anne.

A.D. 1663.

The University was visited in September by Charles II and his Queen. And 'on Monday, September 28, about four in the afternoon, the University, being in their Formalities placed from Christ Church east-gate to the south gate of the publique Schooles, the King and Queen, the Duke and Dutches of Yorke, with the nobility and gentry attending, went to the Schooles, where the Chancellor, Vice-Chancellor and Heads of Houses received them and invited them up to the Library; and Mr. Crew, the Senio Proctor, placed neer the globes, addrest himselfe to their Majestie in an oration upon his knees; which being ended, the King an Royal Family and nobility, were by our Chancellor, and the Heads of Houses, conducted to and there entertained with a very sumptuous

A.D. 1664.

... of St. Mary Hall, D.D. and Canon of Westminster this year. Nine MSS. volumes, written by him, collections for an Arabic Lexicon and Grammar, the book of Daniel, in Syriac, are preserved in the form a small separate collection under his name.

A.D. 1665.

Lockey, D.D., resigned the Librarianship, on Nov. 29, consequence of his appointment to a canonry of Ch. Ch.
following year he gave some coins and the sum of £6 16s.
ance was elected, on Dec. 2, Thomas Hyde, M.A., of Queen's then Under-keeper. Upon Lockey's death, in 1680, books value of £16 15s. were bought out of his study.

A.D. 1666.

... MSS. were given by Sir Thos. Herbert, Bart. of East India merchant of London, one John Kerr, gave (with MSS.) the first Gentoo book which the Library possessed.

noticeable what a real, although somewhat indiscriminating, the London merchants appear to have taken in the Continual mention occurs not merely of books but of kinds, natural and artificial, which persons engaged in commerce, chiefly with the East Indies, sent as for a general repository. Most of these curiosities are now to be found, it is believed, in the Ashmolean Museum.

1 Reg. Convoc. Tr. 27, p. 173.

At some period between 1660 and 1667, i.e. during Clarendon's Chancellorship of the University, two volumes of MSS. notes and observations upon Josephus, by Sam. Petit, the Professor of Greek at Nismes (who died in 1643), are said by Moreri to have been purchased by Clarendon, for 150 louis d'or, and given to the University. But in Bernard's Catalogue the volumes are said to have been bought by the University 'sere suo.' Dr. T. Smith remarks, in his life of Bernard, that when the latter was preparing to edit Josephus, he used 'Sam. Petiti largis commentariis, longe antea in bibliothecae Bodleianae gazophylacium ex Gallia transvectis,' but found that they were filled only with notes from Rabbinical writers. They are now numbered Auct. F. infra, I. 1, 2. One other MS. was certainly given by Clarendon, during his Chancellorship. It is a Greek Evangelistarum of the fourteenth century, formerly the property of a monastery described as 'τῆς παναγίας τῆς ἁγιοποιητῆς,' which was given by Parthenius Patriarch of Constantinople, to Heneage Finch, Earl of Winchelsea, when in Turkey, in 1661, as Ambassador from England and subsequently given by Clarendon to the University. On the cover is a silver crucifix, of Byzantine work. It is now numbered Auct. D. infra II. 12.

A.D. 1668.

John Davies, of Camberwell, the storekeeper at Deptford dockyard, caused a chair to be made out of the remains of the ship, 'The Golden Hind,' in which Sir F. Drake accomplished his voyage round the world, which had been kept at Deptford until the timber decayed, and presented it to the Library. It stands now in the Picture Gallery, beside a chair which is said (but on what
The style of moulding on the back seems to point to a somewhat later date.

A description, including a copy of the verses, and illustrated by a woodcut, is to be found in vol. xxix. (1837) of the Mirror, p. 8, copied from the Nautical Magazine.
In November, 1673, a twenty-eighth very valuable MSS., including several rare English books (Chaucer, Gower, Wicliffe’s Bible, &c.) and works relating to the history of England, Scotland (Elphinston’s), and Ireland (Reynolds). But besides these, he gave that invaluable collection of genealogical MSS. known to all pedigree-numbers by the name of their indefatigable compiler, Roger Dodsworth, at whom he had allowed an annuity of £40 during his life, in order to enable him the better to prosecute his researches. This collection numbers 171 volumes (bound in 86) in folio and quarto, and consists of extracts bearing chiefly on the family and ecclesiastical history of Yorkshire and the North of England, with an innumerable mass of pedigrees from all the authentic records within Dodsworth’s reach, including many which were destroyed when the Tower of St. Mary, at York, was blown up during the siege of that city in June, 1644. He appears to have commenced this wonderful series of notes about the year 1618, and not to have ceased before 1652, dying, in the seventieth year of his age, in August, 1654. Besides the very full catalogue of his MSS., which is given by Bernard (pp. 187-233), an extremely useful and original synopsis of their contents, prefaced with an account of Dodsworth’s life and labours, and drawn up by Mr. Joseph Hunter, is to be found in the Report of the Record Commission for 1837; which was reprinted by Mr. Hunter, in an octavo volume, in 1838, together with a list of the contents of the Red Book of the Exchequer, and a Catalogue of the MSS. in Lincoln’s Inn. After the MSS. were brought to the Library, they became in some way exposed to the damp, and

1 A transcript of Elphinston’s Chronicle is to be found among the Jones MSS.
2 No. 20 is a volume of Camden’s Collections, formerly in the Cotton Library, Julius B. x., from whence Dodsworth must have borrowed it, and whither, with an obliterousness too common in book-borrowers, he must have forgotten to return it. And No. 161 was given to the Library by Mr. Fras. Drake, the historian of York, in 1736.
were in danger of being spoiled by a wet season.' Fortunately the danger was perceived by Ant. à Wood, who obtained leave of the Vice-Chancellor to dry them, which he accomplished by spreading them out in the sun upon the leads of the Schools' quadrangle. This cost him a month's labour, which, he says, he underwent with pleasure out of respect to the memory of Dodsworth, and care to preserve whatever might advantage the commonwealth of learning. The MSS. to this day give abundant proof, by their stains and tender condition, that, had it not been for Wood's unselfish labour, they would probably soon have perished.
Some part of the collection appears to have been sent to the Library as late as 1684, for in the accounts of that year there is an entry of 45. 10d. as having been paid for the 'carriage of Dodsworth's MSS.'

An interesting volume, written by the donor of these MSS., Fairfax, and entitled by him 'The Employment of my Solitude,' being metrical versions of the Psalms, with other poems, was bought, in 1858, for £36 10s., at the sale of the library of Dr. Bliss, who had purchased it at the Duke of Sussex's sale. It is described in Archdeacon Cotton's List of Bibles.

A.D. 1674.

In this year appeared the third Catalogus impressorum Librorum Bibliotheca Bodleiana, in one folio volume, divided into two parts of 478 and 272 pages respectively. It is dedicated to Archbishop Sheldon, by Hyde the Librarian, not without reason, as being printed in that Theatre which the Archbishop had so lately built. The Keeper, in this dedication, speaks very feelingly of the daily weariness of mind and body which the compilation of the Catalogue had cost him, and tells how his very hours for refreshment had been spent among books alone, and how (mirabile dictu/) he actually had not shrunk even from the inclemency of winter¹. In his preface he says that, on his entrance into office, he reckoned that the work of a new catalogue would occupy him for two, or at most three, years; six, however, had been spent in compilation and transcription, one in revision and enlargement, and, lastly, two in the actual printing. Yet, says he, he never withdrew his neck from the yoke, and postponed all considerations of bodily health. People little know, he proceeds what it is to accomplish a work of this kind. What is easier say they, than to look at the beginning of a book and to copy out its title? They judge only from one or two weeks' work in some little library of their own. But, what with careful examining of volumes of pamphlets (which of itself was labor perfectly exhausting), what with distinguishing synonymous authors and works, and identifying metonymous ones, unravelling grammatical names and those derived from places, and the like the poor man declares he endured the greatest torment of mind (‘maximo animi cruciato’) as well as waste of precious time. It is clear, from these pathetic lamentations, that Hyde had no great love for Bibliography for its own sake. But, after all his complaints, it is actually asserted by Hearne that he 'did not do much in the work besides writing the dedication and preface'²! Hearne attributes the real compilation of the Catalogue to Emmanuel Prichard, or Pritchard, of Hart Hall, the janitor, who examined every book in the whole library, and wrote out the Catalogue, in two volumes, with his own hand. Hearne repeats this assertion frequently; it is found, e.g., in his preface to the Chronicon

¹ Of the 'hyemis inclementia' before the present system of warming the Library was introduced, several of the present staff of officers can speak as feelingly as Hyde. The writer remembers, in particular, one winter when, in consequence of the roof being under repair, the thermometer fell some eleven degrees below freezing point.

Dunstap. p. xii., and in his Autobiography (1772, p. 11), where he adds that he was well informed of this by Dr. Mill and others. If this be true, the inditing such a preface, while totally suppressing Prichard's name, does little credit to Hyde.

Frequent mention of this Emmanuel Prichard is found between 1686 and 1699 as being employed upon the MSS., and as engaged in taking an account of duplicates and arranging Bishop Barlow's books. In 1687, £20 were paid him for 'writing a Catalogue of MSS.' Probably this was the list upon which Hearne asserts that the index to the Bodleian MSS., in Bernard's Catalogue, was founded. Hearne describes him as being 'a very industrious, useful man.' Although a member of Hart Hall, he never took any degree; but wore a civilian's gown. He died in the Hall about 1704, aged upwards of 70, and was buried in St. Peter's-in-the-East. He left £200 to the Vice-Principal of Hart Hall, which was partly spent in building a library-room. 9.

A.D. 1675.

In the Register of Benefactions, on a page faintly headed in pencil with this date, is entered a gift from Christopher, Lord Hatton, 'Homiliarum Saxoniarum 4 volumina antiqua.' The donor was consequently the second baron, and first viscount, Hatton, who succeeded his father Christopher (a firm royalist, and close friend of Clarendon, as well as antiquarian, and friend of Dodsworth) in 1670, and died in 1706. Possibly this gift may have been made through the influence of his uncle, Capt. Charles Hatton, who appears to have been much interested in Anglo-Saxon studies, who himself gave three MSS. to the Library, and several of whose letters to Dr. Charlett in 1694-1707 are preserved in vol. xxxiii. of Ballard's MSS. Strange to say, these volumes \[1\] Reliquiae Hearne, ii. 591. But see p. 116, infra. \[9\] MS. Diary, li. 193. \[2\] Hearne's MS. Diary, ciii. 38.

...
at the same time are preserved in the same series. In return for this valuable gift Justell was created D.C.L. by diploma.

A.D. 1677.

The wonderful collection of Early English poetry known as 'the Vernon MS.,' was presented 'soon after the Civil Wars' by Col. Edward Vernon, of Trinity College, who had been an officer in the royal army. One who bore the same name, doubtless the same person, of North Aston, Oxon, was created D.C.L. Aug. 6, 1677; it was probably therefore about that time that the MS. was presented. The volume is described in Bernard's Catalogue, 1697, p. 181, as being a 'vast massy manuscript;' and very correctly. Its measurements are these: length of page, 22\(\frac{1}{2}\) inches; length of written text, 17\(\frac{1}{2}\) inches; breadth of page, 15 inches; breadth of written text, 12\(\frac{1}{2}\) inches. It is written in triple columns, on 412 leaves of stout vellum; and having been clad of late years in a proportionate Russia binding, is altogether a Goliath among books. In date it is of the early part of the fourteenth century. Its first article bears the titles of 'Salus Anima' and 'Sowle-Hele,' and its chief contents are Lives of the Saints, Hampole's Prick of Conscience, Grosteste's Castle of Love, Hampole's Perfect Living, the treatise on Contemplative Life, the Mirror of S. Edmund, the Abbey of the Holy Ghost, and Piers Plowman; besides a multitude of smaller pieces, several of which have been recently copied with a view to publication by the Early English Text Society. Fifty copies of a brief list of the contents (numbering altogether 161 articles) were printed by J. O. Halliwell, Esq., in 1848. A MS., similar in size and contents, was presented to the British Museum a few years ago by Sir John Simeon; it is, apparently, the work of the same scribe as the Bodleian book.

1 This Society has also just issued Part I. of Piers Plowman from this MS., edited by W. W. Skeat, M.A. (Oct. 1867).
A.D. 1673.

Parish James, born in Hertford in 1589, who had passed a large part of his life in England as librarian to that Howard Earl of Arundel, who collected the manuscripts which go under his name at Oxford as well as the MSS. similarly entitled, which are preserved in the British Museum and at Heralds' College, bequeathed to the Library on his decease at Windsor in this year, all his Anglo-Saxon MSS. and his own lifelong collections bearing on the chronology of the Northern races. Amongst these are some Anglo-Saxon texts of greatest value and importance. The book of notaries, History of the Peculiar Gospels, compiled by an Anglo-Saxon man named Óttar, who hence called his book Óttar's Notary, and not as commonly Ormulum. For Órrym Óttar's name is one of the chief of these. Its date is conjectured to be the 10th century. It is written on parchment, on folio leaves, not long and very narrow, averaging 20 inches by 8 in a very small and fine hand, with many additions inserted on extra manuscript leaves. Twenty-seven leaves appear to be wanting. The works were first published in 1874, at the University Press, at Edinburgh, under the superintendence of R. M. White, D.D., formerly Professor of Anglo-Saxon. Camden's metrical paraphrase of Genesis and other parts of Holy Scripture, illustrated with numerous curious engravings, is another of the gems of this collection. The MS. is in the end of the 10th century, but the work itself is not generally regarded to be, in the main, the production of the earliest English poet, the Camden, noticed by Bede (iii. 24), who died towards the close of the seventh century, and not as Hickes conjectured, of some later writer of the same name. The MS. first came to light in the hands of Archibp. Usher, by whom it was given to James. The latter published it at Amsterdam in 1655, and it was re-edited by Mr. Benj. Thorpe in 1672; several English and German translations have also appeared. Many of the drawings were engraved and published in 1754, as illustrations of the manners and buildings of the Anglo-Saxons; and the whole of them have been engraved in vol. xxiv. of the Archaeologia, with some remarks by Sir H. Ellis. MS. 121 is an extremely valuable collection of the Canons of the Anglo-Saxon Church, written in the tenth century, which belonged to Worcester Cathedral; and there are four valuable volumes of Homilies, which appear, however, to have been part of Lord Hatton’s gift to the Library. (See under 1675.) Besides books, Junius left to the University six fonts of Gothic, Saxon, and other types, together with the moulds and matrices.

Fifty-five MSS. and printed books, chiefly Oriental, were purchased in this year from the library of Dr. Thomas Greaves, Deputy-professor of Arabic, who died May 22, 1676. It appears from the list in Bernard’s Catalogue that sixty-five volumes were purchased, but that ten of these were never sent. With Greaves’ own books were obtained also the MSS. of Richard James, of Corpus Christi College, nephew of Thomas James, the first Librarian, which had come into the possession of his friend Greaves upon his death in Dec. 1638. These amount to forty-three volumes, entirely written by James himself, in a large bold hand; they consist chiefly of Collectanea bearing on the history of England from various MSS. Chronicles, Registers, and early writers, particularly with reference to the corruption of the Church and clergy before the Reformation, and in opposition to Becket. A full list of their contents, drawn up by Tanner, is given at pp. 248–253 of Bernard’s Catalogue. The price paid for the books bought out of Greaves’ library was £55.

---

1 Parts of MSS. 4 and 5, which had been stolen from the Library, were recovered, in 1730, in the manner recorded in the following entry in the Benefaction Book: Vir doctissimus Ioannes Georgius Eckardus, bibliothecae Brunsvicensis prefectus, pro singulari sua humanitate, folia quammulta MSS. Dictionarii Fr. Junii, continentia sc. litteras F. et S., a nequissimo quodam Dano jam olim surrepta, propriis sumptibus redemit et Bibl. Bodl. ulteri ostituit. Some further portions of Junius’ papers (including some which had formerly been in the Library) are recorded to have been given in 1753 by the Provost and Fellows of Queen’s College.

Fifteen shillings were paid, as appears from the accounts for the year, for the carriage of a whale from Lechlade, which, strange to say, had been caught in the Severn, and was presented by William Jordan, an apothecary at Gloucester. Ten shillings were also paid for a ‘sea elephant.’

A.D. 1680. [See A.D. 1666.]

Sir W. Dugdale gave copies of his own works. Two hundred coins were given by Dr. George Hickes.

A.D. 1681.

In this year John Rushworth, of Lincoln’s Inn, the historian of the Long Parliament, was a member of the Parliament held at Oxford. Probably it may have been at this time that he presented to the Library one of its most precious κεφάλαια, called, from its donor, ‘Codex Rushworthianus.’ (Auct. D. 2. 19.) In 1665, Junius mentions it in the Preface to his Glossarium Gothicum, as being then still in Rushworth’s own hands. It is a MS. of the Latin Gospels, written by an Irish scribe, Mac-Regol, (who records his name on the last leaf, ‘Macregol dipincxit hoc evangelium,’ &c.) and glossed with an interlinear Anglo-Saxon version by Owun and by Færmen, a priest at Harewood. The volume is traditionally reported to have been in Bede’s possession, but since the Irish annals record the death of Mac Riagoil, a scribe and abbot of Birr in 820, the volume must be about a century too late. It has been

1 In the Benefaction Book this gift is assigned to the year 1672.
2 It is strange that no entry of the gift of this priceless volume is found in the Register of Benefactions, any more than of that of the Vernon MS.
published in full, together with the Lindisfarne Gospels, by the Surtees Society in 3 vols., under the editorship of Rev. J. Stevenson and George Waring, Esq., M.A. A description is given in Prof.
Westwood's Paleographia Sacra Pictoria.

Nine shillings were paid for the carriage of a mummy from London, probably one of those which are now in the Ashmolean Museum. It was given by Aaron Goodyear, a Turkey merchant, who gave also a model of the Church of the Holy Sepulchre at Jerusalem, and various little images, and in 1684 more than forty coins.

A.D. 1682.

Richard Davis, M.A., of Sandford, Oxon, gave the portrait of Margaret, Countess of Richmond, a book of Russian laws, and the Runic Calendar or Clog Almanack, now exhibited in the glass case at the entrance of the Library. The latter is thus described in the Register: 'Calendarium ligneum, tam materia quam usu perpetuum, unius ligni quadrati angulis incisum, more antiquo.'

Dr. John Morris, Regius Professor of Hebrew, who died in 1648, bequeathed five pounds annually to the University, to be paid to some Master of Arts of Ch. Ch., chosen by the Dean, for a speech 'in Schola Linguarum,' in honour of Sir Thomas Bodley,
'and as a panegyric and encouragement of the Hebrew studies,' on Nov. 8, in the presence of the Visitors of the Library after the conclusion of the annual visitation. The bequest was to take effect after the death of his wife, which happened on Nov. 11, 1681; and on Oct. 6, 1682, Convocation fixed 3 p.m. as the hour for delivery of the Speech on the Visitation-day.

The Speeches are continued annually, although, probably for want of public notice, only scantily attended, none but those actually interested in the Visitation of the Library, together with the speaker's friends, being generally aware of it. If provision were made for the deposit of the Speeches in the Library after delivery, they would no doubt form an interesting and accurate record of its growth, and of many passing events which, for want of such a record, are soon forgotten. Only one speech appears to be preserved in the Library: it is that delivered on Nov. 8, 1701, by Edmund Smith, M.A., of Ch. Ch., and is very beautifully written in imitation of typography. But in this case nothing is recorded of the history of the preceding year, the speech being simply a panegyric of the Founder. It has been printed among Smith's Works, a pamphlet of 103 pages dignified with that name, of which the third edition appeared at London in 1719. Dr. Rawlinson appears to have endeavoured to compile a list of the Speakers; for Bishop Tanner, in a letter to him dated Oct. 11, 1735, from Ch. Ch., says he will enquire them out, if he can, but that they are not entered upon the Chapter books, since they are not appointed by the Chapter, but privately by the Dean or Hebrew Professor, and paid by the Vice-Chancellor, in whose accounts alone their names are probably entered.

The names of the Speakers up to the year 1690 are given in Wood's Athenae (ii. 127) as follows. They were all M.A., and Students of Ch. Ch.:—

1682 Thomas Sparke
1683 Zach. Isham
1684 Chas. Hickman
1685 Thos. Newey
1686 Thos. Burton
1687 Will. Bedford
1688 Rich. Blakeway
1689 Roger Altham, jun.
1690 Edward Wake

The following list from 1706 to 1734 has been gathered out of Hearne's MS. Diary:—

1706 Rich. Newton
1707 Thos. Terry

1 A long account of Smith is given in Johnson's Lives of the Poets.
2 Letters of Eminent Persons, &c, ii. 111.
1708 Will. Periam 1722 Hen. Shirman
1709 Rich. Sadlington 1723 Matthew Lee
1710 Richard Frewin 1724 Christopher Haslam
1711 — Aldred¹ 1725 Will. Davis
1712 Gilb. Lake 1726 Edw. Blakeway
1713 Hen. Cremer 1727 David Gregory
1714 Chas. Brent 1728 [Rob.?] Manaton
1715 John White 1729 [Hen.?] Jones
1716 Edw. Ivie 1730 John Fanshaw
1717 Hen. Gregory 1731 Oliver Battely
1718 Thos. Fenton 1732 Dan. Burton
1719 George Wiggan 1733 Fifield Allen
1730 Thos. Foulkes 1734 Pierce Manaton, M.D.
1721 Will. Le Hunt

A.D. 1683.

Three MSS., containing the Samaritan Pentateuch, the Syriac Pentateuch, and the Syriac Old Testament, were purchased at the cost of the University.

A.D. 1684.

Nine Oriental and Russian MSS. were given by Joseph Taylor, LL.D., of St. John's College. And Sir Rob. Viner, Bart., the loyal alderman of London, favoured the Library with a human skeleton, a tanned human skin, and the dried body of a negro boy!

A.D. 1685.

Thomas Marshall, or Mareschall, D.D., Rector of Lincoln College, and Dean of Gloucester, who died April 18, bequeathed his MSS., and all such among his printed books as were not already in the Library. The MSS. amounted to 159, chiefly Oriental, including some valuable Coptic copies of the Gospels,

¹ Doubtless an error for Chas. Aldrich
This must have been the number of times, as in 1697 the latter appear from have been about 6700.

A.D. 1691.

Thomas Barlow, Bishop of Lincoln, who, for the place over which he had presided equated to it seventy-eight MSS. (now times), and all the printed books in his library did not possess, the remainder going they appear to have been received in the payments for the carriage are found in the SS. are described in the old Catalogue of books, which are particularly rich in tracts of and the Usurpation, are still kept distinct, ing, in the 8° series, at about the middle of the letter C in that division. They are the left hand of the great central room. 1. copy of the famous Exposicio Sancti Jeronimi which was printed at Oxford in 1468, and upon states, on Dec. 17. This volume was notes at the beginning, by Bishop Juxon, exhibited in the glass case near the entrance. also seven other productions of the early ve as follow:—

de Peccato Originali, dated March 14, 1479. Burton's books. Qu. unique?
Aristotelis, per Leonardum Arretinum trans- alden's books.
ri [de Ales] super tertium librum [Arist.] De m is inscribed the motto, alle hraebe.

In 1847, a few years before his death, a few of the most valuable parts of his MSS. were sold at auction. Some of these MSS. have since been acquired by the British Museum and are now numbered in the list of the Library of the Society. The library was founded in 1831, and contains a great number of valuable MSS. and other manuscripts. The list of the library in 1847 was published without the knowledge of the librarian, and the library now consists of

In 1847, a few years before his death, a few of the most valuable parts of his MSS. were sold at auction. Some of these MSS. have since been acquired by the British Museum
and are now numbered in the list of the Library of the Society. The library was founded in 1831, and contains a great number of valuable MSS. and other manuscripts. The list of the library in 1847 was published without the knowledge of the librarian, and the library now consists of

Your Lordship's most humble servant,

N. I. 1746.

THOS. FRANKLAND.
1687

It appears, however, from the accounts, &c, that the MS. was not actually delivered until 1748 or 1749, when it was received through Dr. Hunt.

A few of Bishop Fell's MSS. came subsequently to the Library among those of Rev. Henry Jones¹, who succeeded Fell in his rectory of Sunningwell, Berks, in the church of which parish the Bishop's wife was buried.

At the Visitation on Nov. 8, it was ordered that notice be given that 'Nullus in posterum quemlibet librum aut volumen extra Bibliothecam asportet,' and that monition be sent to every College and Hall for the return of any books taken out within three days. Several books appear to have been reported in previous years as missing; hence, doubtless, the issue of this order.

A.D. 1687.

On the occasion of the visit of King James II to Oxford, chiefly, but unsuccessfully, made for the purpose of overawing the fellows of Magdalen College, who had refused to elect as president his nominee, Anth. Farmer, he was invited by the University to partake of a breakfast or collation in the Library. For this purpose he came hither on the morning of Sept. 5, between nine and ten, where, at the south part of the Selden end, a banquet was prepared which cost the University £160, consisting of 111 dishes of meat, sweetmeats, and fruit. The King sat here for about three quarters of an hour, and held some conversation with Hyde about a Chinese, 'a little blinking fellow,' who had recently visited the place, and about the religion of China; but asked no one to join him at the table. Upon rising to depart, a scene of strange indecorum, as it would now appear, ensued; the 'rabble' (as they are described) of courtiers and academics rushed upon the mass of untouched dainties, and began a disorderly

¹ Hearne's pref. to John Ross, p. 1.
ANNALS OF THE

1687

...annually in which they 'fung the wet sweetmeats on the ladies names and perquisites and stained them.' The King watched the ceremony for two or three minutes, and then departed, commencing at the West-Chancellor and doctors his chaplain, W. Beck, who had preached before him the day previous, and declared a most distressing sermon on the sin of pride, the virtue of humility; and the part of being as they would be done to. Good expressions: Mr. Wood gives in his Anecdotes a full account of the passages from which are taken the quotations made.

A.D. 1688.

The King went up to London in this year to demand personal acquaintance of Sackville the books which were due to the Parliment; James II. cap. 17. for several books, among which they had neglected to give him those very important.:

A.D. 1689

The King went up this year to Amory à Wood for MSS. and printed books. He saw volumes of great importance, 'The Monuments of the Abbots of Glastonbury and Malmesbury,' a register of lands in Leicester.

In 1689, Mr. Wood went to Sackville to inspect the number of MSS... in the Library at 10,141. This must have been the number of separate books, not volumes, as in 1697 the latter appear from Bernard’s Catalogue to have been about 6700.

A.D. 1691.

On Oct. 8, died Dr. Thomas Barlow, Bishop of Lincoln, who, retaining his attachment for the place over which he had presided from 1652 to 1660, bequeathed to it seventy-eight MSS. (now bound in fifty-four volumes), and all the printed books in his collection which the Library did not possess, the remainder going to Queen’s College. They appear to have been received in the years 1693-4, as large payments for the carriage are found in the accounts then. His MSS. are described in the old Catalogue of 1697. The printed books, which are particularly rich in tracts of the time of Charles I and the Usurpation, are still kept distinct, being called Linc.; ending, in the 8th series, at about the middle of the shelves marked with the letter C in that division. They are placed in the gallery on the left hand of the great central room. His legacy included a copy of the famous Exposicio Sancti Jeronimi in Simbolo Apostolorum, which was printed at Oxford in 1468, and completed, as the colophon states, on Dec. 17. This volume was given to Barlow, as he notes at the beginning, by Bishop Juxon, July 31, 1657. It is exhibited in the glass case near the entrance. The Library possesses also seven other productions of the early Oxford press. They are as follow:

1. Aegidius Romanus de Peccato Originali, dated March 14, 1479.

\[\text{In most of them is inscribed the motto, \textit{aile \etior\eiaiv.}}\]
Anima. 'Impressum per me Theodericum rood de Colonia in alma universitate Oxon.' Oct. 11, 1481.

4. Joh. Latheuri Exposicio Trenorum Spheric, July 31, 1482. No place, but printed with the same type as the last.

5. Liber Festalis, in English, printed by Rood and Hunt, 1486. Two copies, but both very imperfect. The more imperfect one of the two formerly belonged to Herbert, and was bought for £6 6s. in 1832; two additional leaves have been inserted by Mr. Coxe, which were found among Hearne's scraps, having been given to him as fragments of a Caxton by Bagford. The other copy was bought in 1852, at Uterson's sale, for £6 10s.

6. Opus Wilhelmi Lyndewode super Constitutiones Provinciales. No place or date, but identified by the type.

7. Vulgaria quedam abs Terentio in Anglicam linguam traducta. Without place or date, but also identified by the type. The following note, which corroborates the identification, is written in red ink on a fly-leaf in the volume (which includes several other tracts): '1483. Frater Johannes Grene emit hunc librum Oxond. de eleemosinis amicorum suorum.'

A list of sixty-six books, which Hunt, the Oxford printer and bookseller, had in his hands for sale in 1483, is preserved in his own writing on a fly-leaf in a copy of a French translation of Livy, Paris, 1486, which was bought for the Library from C. J. Stewart, in Dec. 1860, for £12. The list is headed 'Inventorium librorum quos ego Thomas Hunt, stacion.'

1 This last book is described by Dr. Cotton in the second series of his Typographia, published in 1866, from a copy in the University Library at Cambridge. Besides the other Oxford books enumerated by that learned bibliographer, fragments of another, a Compendium totius Grammaticae (conjectured to have been written by John Anwykyl, Waynflete's first Grammar Master at Magdalen College), have been discovered. They have been identified by Mr. H. Bradshaw, the Librarian of the University of Cambridge, whose extensive acquaintance with early typography is well known. That gentleman found, at Cambridge, two leaves in the University Library in 1859, two more in Corpus Christi in 1861, and two in John's in 1866. Four other leaves were discovered by the present writer in 1868, and bound up as fly-leaves in a volume in the library of Viscount Dillon, at Ditcheat, Oxfordshire. Mr. Bradshaw supposes the book to have been printed about 1483.
universitatis Oxoniensis, recepi de Magistro Petro Actore et Johannis (nic) de Aquisgrano ad vendendum, cum precio cuiuslibet libri, et promito (nic) fidelter restituere libros aut pecunias secundum precium inferius scriptum, prout patebit in sequentibus, Anno Domini M. CCC0. octuagesimo tercio.'

A.D. 1692.

Thirty-eight Persian and Arabic MSS., with one printed book, were bought from Hyde, the Librarian. They are entered in Bernard's Catalogue, pp. 286-7. Being bought out of the funds of the University, no mention of the price paid for them is found in the Library accounts.

A.D. 1693.

The Oriental MSS., in number 420, of the famous Edward Pococke, Regius Professor of Hebrew (who had deceased Sept. ox, 1691), were purchased by the University for £600. They are chiefly in Armenian, Hebrew, and Arabic, with three volumes in Æthiopic, a Samaritan Pentateuch, and a Persian Evangelary.
A list is given at pp. 274-278 of Bernard's Catalogue. In 1822 the Library became possessed of a portion of Pococke's Collection of printed miscellaneous books, by the bequest of Rev. C. Francis, M.A., of Brasenose College. They are chiefly small volumes in Latin, on historical subjects; and are, for the most part, placed in the shelves marked 8° Z. Jur. [Arabic version of Isaiah, see p. 81.]

Another large Oriental collection was added in this year by the purchase, from Dr. Robert Huntington, for the sum of £700, of about 600 MSS. These he had procured while holding the post of chaplain to the English merchants at Aleppo.1 The 1 He had previously given thirty-five MSS. in the years 1678, 1680, and 1683.

He died on Sept. 2, 1701, only twelve days after his consecration as Bishop of Raphoe.
From information gathered from the text, this page appears to be discussing the nature of Mendelian inheritance and its representation in various texts. It mentions the work of Mendel and the dissemination of his findings, as well as the incorporation of Mendelian principles in other scientific works. The text also references a specific edition of Mendel's work in English and the importance of Mendelian genetics in the field of biology.

Bibliogr. Dated: June 1893.
(1704, p. 21) that two were said to have been given by God to Adam, and the third to the angels, 330,000 years before Adam. And one volume (No. 598) is in the Ouigour language, a Tartar dialect, of which very few specimens are known to exist. A gentleman (M. Vainbéry) employed by the Russian Government to form a Chrestomathy of this dialect, came in the last year to England for the purpose of examining this volume, as one of the few on which his work could be based. Three MSS. exist at Paris; but that in the Bodleian is said to be the most beautiful of all as a specimen of writing, as well as the most ancient. It is a version of the Bakhtiār Nameh. A description of it, with an engraved facsimile, is given in Davids' Turkish Grammar, 4°. Lond. 1832, pref. p. xxxi.

An exchange of some duplicates was made with the Library of Queen's College, and in 1695 the duplicates of Bishop Barlow's Collection were transferred, in accordance with his will, to the same Library.

A.D. 1694.

A Mr. Clarke was employed in this year in making a catalogue of Pococke's and Huntington's MSS., for which he altogether received between £13 and £14.

A.D. 1695.

Books were bought from Mr. Bobart, and at the auction of the library of Sir Charles Scarborough, M.D.

Stationers' Company. See 1610.

MSS. from Wood. See 1658.
A.D. 1696.

From this year until 1700, Humphrey Wanley was an assistant in the Library, at an annual salary of £12. He had also £10 at the end of this year 'extraordinary, for his paines already past,' and £15, at the beginning of 1700, 'for his pains about Dr. Bernard's books.' Possibly this grant may have been in consequence of the interposition of Bishop Lloyd of Worcester, who, in a letter to Wanley of Jan. 6, in that year, promises to speak to the Bishop of Oxford to see whether he can get his place in the Library made better for him. Wanley was no favourite with Hearne. The following passage from the MS. Diary of the latter is a specimen of the censure which he on several occasions passes on him: 'Humphrey Wanley appears from several passages to be a very illiterate silly fellow. He committed strange and almost incredible blunders when he was employed by Dr. Charlett and some others in printing the catalogue of the MSS. of England and Ireland, which work was committed first to the care of Dr. Bernard; but he being then very weak and otherwise employed, he could not take so much pains about it as he would, had he not been thus hindered.' The very accurate index, however, to this Catalogue was Bernard's own work, made from the proof-sheets, and written with his own hand, 'uti ab illo accepi,' says Dr. T. Smith in his Life (1704, p. 48). He prepared also another index, which included besides the contents of eight of the great foreign libraries, but not the Royal Library at Paris, the catalogue of which he was unable to obtain.

1 Walker's Letters by Eminent Persons, i. 102. It is pleasant to find that Wanley in more prosperous days evinced his gratitude for the help he had received in the Library, by giving, in the year 1721, £7 7s., together with a MS. Latin Bible.

A.D. 1697.

On the death of Edward Bernard, D.D., the Savilian Professor of Astronomy (which occurred on Jan. 13), the University became the purchaser from his widow of the greater part of his library. A selection from his printed books, made on behalf of the Library by H. Wanley, comprising many rare Aldines and specimens of the 15th century, were bought for £140, and his MSS., many of which were valuable copies of classical authors, together with collated printed texts and his own Adversaria, for £200. Of 218 of the latter, Bernard has given a very brief list in his own invaluable Catalogus Manuscriptorum Angliae, which appeared posthumously, in the year of his death. (Vol. ii. pp. 226-8.) The bulk of his books are dispersed through various divisions of the Library; but about thirty volumes of his own Adversaria are kept together under his name. A very full account, by H. Wanley, of the purchase of the collection is printed by Dr. Bliss in his notes to the Ath. Oxon. (iv. 709), who adds that this addition ' contained many of the most valuable books, both printed and MSS., now in the Library.'

In the discharge of his duty of selection, Wanley came into sharp collision with his chief, Dr. Hyde, as is shown by a curious paper, in Wanley's handwriting, which was transcribed by Dr. Rawlinson from the original in Dr. Charlett's possession. The paper gives a list of books for the not securing which, together with others, out of Dr. Bernard's collection, blame had been thrown upon Wanley, and which Hyde had said must by all means be bought at the auction which was to be held in October, 1697. To the title of each book so specified, Wanley appends some caustic remarks, exposing Dr. Hyde's little acquaintance with the Library or with the books themselves; and sums up thus at the close:—'This is what I have to say to these 13 books, one whereof I look upon as imperfect, two more I was charged not to meddle with, and the other ten are in the Library already. I shall wave all unmanerly reflections, as whether this be not in you insignis insufficiencia, for which you are liable to be turned out of your place; or [whether,] if you had been employed to bring in a list of Dr. Bernard's books wanting in the Library and took the same method as now, the University would no have bought a fair parcel of duplicates, and such like; but pass them by. Tho' it must be owned that the University being willing to lay out but 140 pounds, some different editions of the Bible, Fathers, Classicks, &c, were prefer'd to some books not all in the Library, but they were at the same time judged to be of less moment, and likely to be given to it by future benefactors.'

1 Rawlinson's copy is now in MS. Rawl. Misc. 937. For the knowledge of this paper the writer is indebted to Rev. W. H. Bliss.

The quarrel, however, soon ceased; for, in the following year Hyde was anxious to see Wanley appointed as his successor. The latter, in a letter to Dr. Charlett, dated Oct. 10, 1698, repeats a conversation held with Hyde on the previous evening in which the Librarian said 'that he is heartily weary of the place of Library-keeper; that he must use more exercise in riding out, &c, if he intends to preserve his health; which will of necessity hinder his attendance there. He had rather I succeed him than anybody else, which I cannot do until I am a graduate; that, if I have any friends amongst the heads of houses, they cannot do better for me than in procuring for me the degree of Batchelor of Law, that I may be in a condition to stand for his place with others, which he will resign as soon as I have obtain'd the said degree, and (for my sake) will communicate his intentions to nobody else in the mean time. He presses me to get this degree as soon as possible, urging that...'

1 Ballard MSS. xiii. 45.
he does not care how soon he is rid of his place.' Wanley asks for Charlett's advice; what that was does not appear, but, at any rate, he did not obtain the degree which he desired, and consequently did not become eligible as Hyde's successor.

Sixteen MS. treatises on Mathematics, Astronomy, and Ancient History, by Thomas Lydiat, were given by Will. Coward, M.D.
They are placed amongst the Bodl. MSS., chiefly between Nos.
658-671.

A.D. 1700.

Considerable fears were entertained for the safety of the Divinity School and that portion of the Library which is built over it. About thirty-two years before, some failure had been observed in the roof of the former, which was rectified under the superintendence of Sir Christopher Wren. When Bishop Barlow's books were brought to the Library, in 1692 or 1693, the galleries on either side of the middle room were erected;
and, as the beams of the roof of the School were then observed to give from the wall, they were anchored on both sides, under the direction of Dr. Aldrich. But the tight bracing had now caused the south wall, that which adjoins Exeter College garden, to bulge outwards, so that the book-stalls were found to have started from the wall by three and a-half inches at the top and two and a-half at the bottom; the wall itself was seven and a-half inches out of the perpendicular, and the four great arches of the vault of the School were all cracked. Hereupon Dr. Gregory, the Savilian Professor, was despatched to London to consult Sir C.
Wren again, and, by his advice, additional buttresses of great depth and strength were erected on the south side, the weight of the bookstalls was removed from the roof of the School by their being trussed up to the walls with iron cramps; and the cracks in the vault were filled with lead or oyster-shells, and in some places with the exception of new volumes, and were then 'wedged in with well-weathered ancient volumes.' The work went on through the summers of 1731 and 1732, and in 1733 some similar parts were executed in some of the other Schools. The letter and papers of these in the subject with the artist's, and report of the workmen employed, are preserved in Bodley MS. 90. They are printed in "Visits of Inspectors," 16-27.

In this year also Henry Jones, M.A., Vicar of Sennington, Berks, requested at the Library sixty volumes in metal miscellanea in character and chiefly of the 16th and 17 centuries. Some of them had belonged to Bishop BULL. The request probably came in about some few years after Mr. John Search, as the books are entered in a full and accurate list) in the Benefaction Book among the gifts of about 1711 years 1708-12. It was from a modern transcript among the that Heberden edited the Historia Regum Anglorum of John Ryston. and seventy-one documents from No. 23, which the Hereford University, were printed by Rawlinson at the end of his "History of Hereford," London, 1717. One volume has many years been missing from the collection, viz., a fine grammar by John Smith and in the death of Queen Elizabeth York, in 1593. A list of the MSS. is printed from the Benefaction Register, in Upton's 'Complete Epitome,' pp. 200-208.

Between 1730 and 1735 Sir Hans Sloane is recorded to ha given considerably more than 1400 volumes, together with 1 picture in 1731: but the majority of them do not appear to have been considered of much value, and only 415 are specified by name in the Benefaction Register. Dr. Hyde, in a letter in the "Hudson," which accompanied a list of the books for which the latter had asked with a view to registration, says he scans thinks the entry to be 'for the credit of the business, not inu

1 Steele's MSS. Collections for Berks; Gough MS. 27.
But Hudson appears to have thought that the omission proceeded rather from carelessness, for, in a letter to Wanley, he says that he thinks Hyde assigned 'non causa pro causa'.

A.D. 1701.

The long-entertained idea of resigning the Librarianship was at length carried out by Dr. Thomas Hyde in this year, for the reasons given in the following letter, which was addressed by him to the Pro-Vice-Chancellor, probably Dr. Charlett. It is here printed from a copy sent by Hyde to Wake, then Rector of St. James, Westminster, and preserved amongst the Wake Correspondence in the library of Ch. Ch.:—

'March 10, 1701,

'Christ Church, Oxon.

'Sir,—I being a little indisposed by the gout, acquaint you thus by letter, that what I long agoe designed (as you partly knew) I am now about to put in execution. That is to say, I shall shortly lay down my office of Library-keeper, about a month hence, which resolution I do now declare, and I do hereby give you timely and statuteable notice of the same as Pro-Vice-Chancellor, entreating that, as the Statute requires, you will in two days order Mr. Cowper to draw a Programma to be set up at the Schools to the sence of the enclosed paper, he best knowing forms and lawyers' Latin.

'Among the Bodleian Statutes in the Appendix, in the Statute de causis amovendi aut libere recedendi, you will find that upon the Library-keeper's notice thus given, you are in two days' time to fix up the programma preparatory to make it known that about a month hence (which is about the end of this term) that office will be actually resigned and void.

'My reasons for leaving the place are two, viz. one is because

1 Walker's Letters by Eminent Persons, i. 173.
...my feet being left weak by the gout I am weary of the toil and drudgery of daily attendance all times and weathers; and secondly, that I may have my time free to myself to digest and finish my papers and collections upon hard places of Scripture, and to fit them for the press¹; seeing that Lectures (though we must attend upon them) will do but little good, hearers being scarce and practitioners more scarce.

I should have left the Library more compleat and better furnish'd but that the building of the Elaboratory² did so exhaust the University money that no books were bought in several years after it. And at other times when books were sometimes bought, it was (as you well know) never left to me to buy them, the Vice-Chancellor not allowing me to lay out any University money. And therefore some have blamed me without cause for not getting all sorts of books.

Before the Visitations I did usually spend a month's time in preparing a list of good books to offer to the Curators; but I could seldom get them bought, being commonly (sic) answered in short that they had no money. Nay, I have been chid and reproved by the Vice-Chancellor for offering to put them to so much charge in buying books. These things at last discouraged me from meddling in it. But, however, I leave the Library three times bigger than I found it³, and furnished with a Catalogue of which I found it destitute. I wish the University a man who may take as much pains and drudgery as I have done whilst I was able to do it.

I entreat you with all speed to cause the Register to put up the programma signed with your name, that so things may be regularly and statutorily dispatched in order, until the time of actual resignations shall come.

'In the mean time I remain,
'Thomas Hyde.'

¹ These were left in MS. at Hyde's death, and have never been published.
² i.e. the Ashmolean Museum.
³ Hyde was greatly mistaken here, as a calculation made by Hearne in 1714 (p. iv.) showed that the Library had then little more than doubled since 1620.
John Hudson, M.A., of Queen's, afterwards D.D. and Princ. of St. Mary Hall, was elected in Hyde's room; he was opposed by J. Wallis, M.A., of Magd., the Laudian Professor of Arabic, but was chosen by 194 votes to 173. A letter to him from Hyde on his election, with advice about the entering of Sir H. Sloane's books in the Register, the augmentation of Mr. Crabbe's salary, the Catalogues and the Statutes, is printed in [Walker's] Letters by Eminent Persons, i. 173. He had previously, in 1696-98, given seventy books to the Library, and in 1705-10 he added nearly 600. Hyde did not long survive his resignation, dying before one year had elapsed, on Feb. 18, 1702. He was buried at Handborough, near Oxford.

In this year Thomas Hearne, the famous antiquary, was appointed Janitor, or Assistant, in the Library. He tells us in his Autobiography (p. 10) that, from the time of his taking the degree of B.A. in Act term, 1699, 'he constantly went to the Bodleian Library every day, and studied there as long as the time allowed by the Statutes would admit,' and that the fact of this his 'diligence being taken notice of by all persons that came thither, and his skill in books being likewise well known to those with whom he had at any time conversed,' occasioned Hudson's appointing him to be an Assistant immediately upon his own election as Librarian. It appears, from the Visitors' Book, that a payment of £10 was made to him in this year, and that, in the next year, £30 were voted to him for his assistance in making an Appendix to the Catalogue of printed books, and for enlarging and correcting the Catalogues of MSS. and Coins. Extra payments of 50s. were also made to him in 1704 and 1706, and of 20s. in 1709.

The Bodley Speech. See 1682.

1 Reliq. Hearn. ii. 616. 2 For an account of Hearne's Appendix, see 1738.
A considerable number of printed books were given by Steph. Jenm. D.D., and a collection of rare coins was bequeathed about this time by Tim. Nurse of Univ. Coll.

A.D. 1703

The name of John Locke appears in the Register, as the donor of his own works, which he gave at Hudson's request, together with some others, including, with an inimitable fairness, those of barley. Sillingfeet written in controversy with himself. As Locke's excursion from Ch. Ch. in 1684, by royal mandate, for political reasons, as sometimes, with an injustice which he himself would doubtless have warmly reprobated, represented as if it had been the act of Oxford itself, it is worth while to quote the language in which this fact from him twenty years afterwards, as recorded, and revised, roe. by the pen of the earnest and conscientious James. Thomas Hearne: "Joannes Lock, gentemen et optime Aesopae vemi aenuses prae ter Opera ab ipso edita, in usque elegantiam doctrinam varietatem et philosophiam subiectam, annios suspicatena (here follow the titles of his new books, except ex sop in opimas artes amore, animoque ad sopelliconem litteram amandum propenso. Bibliothecae haec dono delectibus sequentes: i.e. Churchill's Voyages and Travels, 4 vols. 1704. Sillingfeet's Vindication of the Doctrine of the Trinity, Sillingfeet's Answer to Locke, and Rob. Boyle's History of the Air. Locke desired, in a codicil to his will, that in compliance with a second request from Hudson, all his anonymous works should also be sent to the Library.

William Ray, formerly consul at Smyrna, presented about

1 Lord King's Life of Locke, edit. 1830, vol. ii. p. 51.
600 coins, chiefly Greek, which E. Lhwyd (who reported their number to be about 2000) said he had been told had been collected at Smyrna by his cook. But the Benefaction Register records that they were obtained by Ray from the widow of one ‘domini Dan. Patridge,’ who had himself intended to present them to the University. They were put in order, and a Catalogue made of them, some years afterwards, by Hearne, who intended to have given the Catalogue to the Library, ‘had not,’ he says, ‘the ill usage he afterwards met with there obliged him to alter his mind.’ Ray also gave a Turkish almanac.

A.D. 1706.

The supposed original MS. of The Causes of the Decay of Christian Pity, by the author of The Whole Duty of Man, was given by Mr. Keble, the London bookseller. It is now numbered Bodl. MS. 21. Dr. Aldrich was of opinion that it is not in the author’s own hand, but copied in a disguised hand by Bishop Fell. Hearne thought it to be in a disguised hand of Sancroft’s; but the resemblance is very slight indeed.

A.D. 1707.

Six volumes of Archbishop Usher’s Collectanea, with two or three other MSS. which had belonged to him, were given to the Library by James Tyrrell, the historian, who was the archbishop’s grandson. He had placed them previously in the hands of Dr. Mill, for use by him in his edition of the Greek Test., and it was about a week before Mill’s death, June 21, 1707, that they were transferred, together with a gift from Mill of various printed books, to the Library. They are now placed among the Rawlinson Miscellaneous MSS., 1065-1074, and one volume containing various readings in the Gr. Test., is numbered Auct. T. v. 30. Other volumes of his MSS. Collections in the Library are Barlow, 10 and 13; e Museo, 46 and 47; Rawl. Misc. 225, 280; Rawl. Letters, 89, and Rawlinson C. 849, 850, which last were given to Hearne by Tyrrell. Hearne has printed some extracts at the end of Gul. Neubrig. iii. 804. Six Samaritan and other MSS. which belonged to Usher are now in the class called Bodl. Orient.

1 Walker’s Letters by Eminent Persons, i. 137.

By the bequest of Dr. Humphrey Hody the Library acquired some 400 or 500 volumes, being all those in his own collection which were wanting here, together with his MSS. Collectanea. These last, amounting to twenty-three volumes, are now numbered Bodl. Addit. i. D. 1-4, 2. B. 1-16, 2. C. 1-3.

Thomas, Archbishop of Gocthan, in Armenia, visited England on an errand which seems to have justly excited great sympathy and attention. Sensible of the low condition of his fellow-countrymen, through their want of means of instruction, and being earnestly anxious to do something towards their elevation, he had spent some forty years in travels through Europe and Asia for the purpose of procuring books, establishing printing-presses, educating young men, and obtaining help for the furtherance of his Christian and patriotic projects. His first printing establishment, at Marseilles, was ruined by the mismanagement and fraud of those to whom it was entrusted. He then, for ten years, carried on a press at Amsterdam, where he printed, in Armenian, the New Testament, the Prayers and Hymns of the Church, a translation of Thomas à Kempis, and several other theological works, together with some in geography, history, and science.

1 Hearne's MS. Diary, xv. 24.
But troubles and trials again overtook him; disputes and law-suits involved him in debt; one hundred books, which he shipped for Armenia in 1698, were taken at sea, and so never reached their destination. And so, poor and sorrowful, in extreme old age, the Archbishop came to England to seek for help, recommended by Dr. John Cockburn, the English Minister at Amsterdam. He was well received by the Archbishops, and Sharp, of York, procured him an interview with the Queen, who gave him some assistance. Then, recommended by Bishop Compton¹, of London, he came to Oxford. What he received in the way of the help which he most of all needed, deponent sayeth not; let us hope it was not small. What he received in the way of honour, and what he did to cause the introduction of his name in these Annals, Hearne tells, in his own interesting way, in his Diary².——

'May 24. Last night came to Oxon one of the Armenian Patriarchs. He is Patriarch of the Holy Cross in Gogthan (near Mount Ararat) in Greater Armenia. He subscribes himself in his speech to the Queen in the last month, by translation, Thomas. The next day he was attended to the publick Library by Dr. Charlett, Pro-Vice-Chancellor. At the entrance, Dr. Hudson, the Keeper, made him a handsome complement in Latin; but the Patriarch, being about 90 years of age, and understanding no Latin, nor Greek, nor any European language but Italian, took but little notice of any thing. He afterwards was carried to Dr. Charlett's lodgings, where he was treated.

'May 29. This day was a Convocation in the Theatre, when the Archbishop of the Holy Cross in Gocthan was created Doctor of Divinity, and his nephew, Luke Nurgian, and Mr. Cockburn, son of Dr. Cockburn, were created Masters of Arts. The day before, the Archbishop presented to the publick Library several books in Armenian which he has caused to be printed. Mr.

¹ And by the good Robert Nelson (Letters by Eminent Persons, i. 167, 9), who had also obtained ten guineas for him from the Christian Knowledge Society (Secretan's Life of Nelson, pp. 113-4).
² Vol xiv. pp. 64, 68.
Villiers spoke a speech in his commendation, and then a speech having been pleased to let us be witness for Armenia. During the Convention, several papers were given to the Doctors. Noblemen, in a letter, were Armenians in Christian Patriarch Thomas, written on direct from in Persia-Perso-Armenian, persignatum, and to Europeans because of /harmenian a secret measures were taken and were a deacon of Armenia and Armenia laws. Perso-Armenian was the purpose to suppress. Accused of having Armenian enemies under a pretense. Printed upon the margin of

In another volume of memoirs, Baron adds the following note to the one he has given by the Archbishop: Amongst the books which he gave to the Societsee Library is a History, written in Armenian, which the Archbishop's nephew put the following dedication: "Erumen Karmen Armenum, a Main Perso-Armenian, wrote a work. About 1693. May 28, the Armenian Armenians have in his reverence, Thomas written a letter to Father Armin. For matters ejected, retracted on the Perso-Nasirhum. Underneath which is written to the monarch of the King of Persia and by the direction of which they retracted nothing. The monarch sent to France the same volume in Chennai. The book is now numbered 4111.

A.D. 1707.

In the year 1707 the following Act was passed which required the draining of rivers in all wards entered at Citymen's Hall under those of Frigate and Scotland. This number was increased upon the motion was twelve to eleven, but finally

Romaine MS. C. 846, p. 44. reduced to five (British Museum; Oxford; Cambridge; Advocates' Library, Edinburgh; and Trinity College, Dublin) by 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 110.

A.D. 1710.

Dr. Richard Middleton Massey, formerly of Brasenose College, gave (with a few other books) a very curious and valuable series of Registers of the Parliamentary Committee for augmentation of poor vicarages, from 1645 to 1652, in eight folio volumes, with one volume of Index. To local antiquaries these proceedings are full of interest, while their historical and biographical value is equally great. They are now numbered Bodl. MSS. 322–330. Of the printed books given by Dr. Massey, most of those in octavo were placed at the end of Bishop Barlow's books, in the shelves marked D. Linc.

Three thousand pounds were offered by the University for the library of Isaac Vossius, but refused. But the books were shortly afterwards sold to the University of Leyden for the same sum.

A.D. 1711.

A watch which had belonged to Dudley, Earl of Leicester, is said to have been presented by Mr. Ralph Howland, of Maidenhead.

Grabe's Adversaria. See 1724.

A.D. 1712.

'July 19, Died Mr. Joseph Crabb, Under-keeper of the Bodleian Library, having kept in ever since this day sennight. He died of a rheumatism, occasion'd by a careless sort of life. He was, however, an honest harmless man. He was buried on Monday night following (between 7 and 8 o'clock) in Haly-well Church-

Reliquia Heurn. i. 205. 6.
yard, very privately. Upon his coffin was put, I. C. ag. 38. 1712; but I heard him say some time since he was 39 years old.' He is described in the following caustic terms by Zach. Conr. Uffenbach, in a letter written in 1713, and printed in his Commer- cium Epistolicum:

'Alteri [praefecto Bibliothecae], nomine Crab, caput vacuum cerebro est, lepidum alias, dignusque homo quem ridiculo illo en- comio, quo tamen multi serio egregios viros onerant, ornetur, vociteturque Helleu, non librorum tamen sed præmiorum, quæ ab exteriis Bibliothecam hanc invisentibus avide excipit, statimque cauponibus reddit pro liquore, ad guttur colluendum purgandum- que a pulviscolo, qui librorum tractationem velut umbra aut nebula comitari solet. Quamvis non ejus, sed tertii infimique Bibliothecarii, hoc sit munerus, ut libros in loculos reponat, quævis in ordinem redigat atque emundet.'

The date of Crabb's appointment has not been ascertained, but it must have been previous to 1699, as on Nov. 8 of that year an order appears in the Visitors' Book for an extra payment to him of £10; other additional payments of £5 and 50s. are made to him annually until 1710. Two vols. of an index to texts of printed sermons, ending about the year 1708, (now Bodl. MSS. 47 and 657,) which were, doubtless, intended to form a continuation of Verneuil's little book, are said in an old entry in the Catalogue to be by 'Mr. Crabb.' The following brief account of him is given in Rawlinson's MSS. collections for a continuation of Wood's Athenæ:

---

1 Hearne's MS. Diary, xxxvii. 180.
2 1753, p. 181. For the reference to this passage the author is indebted to Dibdin's Bibliogr. Dexam. iii. 281. The same volume of Uffenbach's contains some criticisms on Bernard's Catalogue of the MSS., chiefly with relation to the Barocci collection, with extracts from the additional entries in the Reg. Benef.
3 This was granted at Hyde's urgent request, 'in regard of his great pains in entering books in the Catalogue, and of the smallness of his place.' Letter from Hyde to Hudson, in Walker's Letters, i. 174.
Joseph Crabb, son of Will. Crabb, clerk, born at Child-Ockford in Dorsetshire on —— 1674; educated in grammar learning at ————; matriculated as a member of Exeter College, 18 July 1691; took the degree of B.A. 17 Oct. 1695; became Sub-librarian at the public library; removed to Gloucester Hall, where he became M.A., 4 July 1705, and died ————.

Rawlinson goes on to attribute to him (as his solitary claim to a place in the Athenaeum, a Poem on the late Storm, Lond. 1704, fol., but this was written (as well as a Latin poem In Georgiæm reducens, Lond. 1719, fol.) by John Crabb, Fellow of Exeter College (B.A., Oct. 15, 1685; M.A., June 19, 1688), who was also a Sub-librarian at an earlier period, but the date of whose entrance into office as well as of quittance is not known. The latter became Rector of Breamore, Hants, in 1709, where he died in 1748 at the age of eighty-five. He is remarkable for having married four wives, all of whom lie buried with him in his church. The third of these, Grace Shuckbridge, became his wife when he was aged seventy-six and she was forty-nine; the last (who survived until March 13, 1777) was thirty-six when she took him, at the age of eighty-one, for better or worse. There is a handsome marble tablet to his memory on the north wall of the Chancel of Breamore Church, bearing the following inscription, and surmounted by his arms (scut., on a field gules a chevron between two fleur-de-lis above and a crab displayed below or; crest, a demi-lion rampant or) painted in their proper colours:—

Obit tandem xiii Id. Martii, Anno setat. sua lxxxv., æ Christianæ MDCCLXVIII."

On July 22, Thomas Hearne was appointed Second-keeper Dr. Hudson, in the room of Crabb, while still retaining his post Janitor, 'with liberty allow'd him of being keeper of the Anato schoole, or Bodleian repository, on purpose to advance the p quisites of the place, which are very inconsiderable', but with proviso that the salary of the janitor's place should go to assistant officer. By this arrangement Hearne retained the ke so that he could go in and out when he pleased.

' Sept. 16, Dr. Hudson told me to-day that some have complai that books in the Publick Library are not so easily come at usual. I am glad there is such a complaint. I am afraid complainers are such as us'd to steal books from the Library, a upon that account, are concern'd that they are more strictly loo after than formerly.'

A.D. 1713.

The learned and munificent Narcissus Marsh, Archbishop s cessively of Cashel, Dublin, and Armagh, on his death, Nov. 2 this year, bequeathed to the Library a very large and valu

---

1 For the above particulars of John Crabb's history subsequent to his lea Oxford the author is indebted to his friend the Rev. J. H. Blunt, lately the Curœ charge of the parish of Breamore, who mentions, with reference to Crabb's own experiences, the parallel case of Bishop John Thomas, Bishop of the adjoin diocese of Salisbury, 1757–61, and afterwards of Winchester. At his fourth beds that prelate had the good taste and feeling to present his friends with mem rings inscribed with the couplet:—

' If I survive
I'll make them five.'

But the lady did not afford him the wished-for opportunity.

4 MS. Diary, xxxix. 120.
gathering of Oriental MSS., which had been chiefly procured for him in the East by Huntington, and at the sale of Golius' library, at Leyden, in October, 1696, by Bernard. The collection numbers at present 714 volumes, but probably some of these may have been books added for convenience' sake from other sources. Many of them bear the motto of some former owner (qu. Golius?), somewhat like in form to Selden's, but better in spirit, 'πωραξάδ ρή λεγέλιεν.' It is strange that no notice of this liberal gift is found in any of the Library Registers, and it is only from a passing mention in Hearne's preface to Camden's Elisabeth (p. lxxvi.) that we find it was a death-bed legacy, and consequently learn the date of its acquisition. Hearne there says that the books were placed in the Library 'in tenebris;' and this expression was made one of the subjects of complaint against him when prosecuted in 1718 in the Vice-Chancellor's court on account of that preface. He then replied that the expression was correct, for that they were placed in a dark corner to which access was only had through a trap-door, but that he himself had put them there for want of a better place. He had wished to deposit them in one of the rooms in the Picture Gallery, but Dr. Hudson kept that for his own purposes 1.

At this period every stranger admitted to read in the Library had to pay nine shillings in fees, of which 1s. went to the Head Librarian, 3s. 6d. to the Second Librarian, 1s. 6d. to the Janitor, 2s. to the Registrar (for an order for admission, but in the Long Vacation this fee went to the Second Librarian), and 1s. to the Proctor's man 2. In 1720 the fee to be received from every visitor not qualified to read was fixed at one penny, to be paid to a porter who was then first appointed to the charge of the Picture Gallery. It subsequently rose by a silent custom to the large sum of a shilling; but some few years ago the Curators fixed the charge to visitors at threepence each, unless accompanied, and in consequence franked, by some member of the University in his academic dress. Since this moderate sum has been fixed, the number of ordinary sight-seeing visitors has, naturally, much increased.

---

2 Ibid. vol. xlvi. p. 89.

The suppression, by an order of the Heads of Houses, dated March 23, 1713, of Hearne's edition of Dodwell's tract De Parma Equestri Woodwardiana, was attributed by Hearne himself to (as the remote occasion) an incident connected with his office in the Library, which is related very fully by himself in vol. xlv. of his MS. Diary. On Feb. 20, Mr. Keil, the Savilian Professor of Geometry, brought to the Library an Irish gentleman named Mollineux, recommended by Sir Andrew Fountaine, to whom he requested Hearne to show the curiosities of the place. As Keil was 'a very honest gentleman,' Hearne little suspected that his friend was possessed with the 'republican ill principles' and 'malignant temper' of Whiggism, and consequently was not very guarded in his talk. After showing him various MSS. and coins, he took the visitor into the Anatomy School, where all kinds of odds and ends were preserved; amongst which was (as Hearne gravely notes in another place) a calf which, being born in the year of the Union, 1707, had (it is to be presumed in consequence thereof) two bodies and one head. What

---

1 In an account of a visit to Oxford by an American tourist, which appeared very recently in the New York Times, and was copied into English journals, written with the warm-hearted tone of one who could rightly appreciate the interest of the place, although (like most Transatlantic visitors) he spent but twenty-four hours in it, the following comment is made upon the smallness of this Bodleian fee:—'The gentleman [i.e. the present Janitor, Mr. John Norris] who showed me through this noble collection, and gave me the most interesting explanations, politely informed me that the charge was 3d. 'It went against my conscience to give a gentleman of his civility and erudition the price of a pot of beer, and I added a small testimonial, for which he seemed more than sufficiently grateful.'

2 This was the room which is now attached to the Library under the name of the Auctarium.
followed during the exhibition of this museum is worth relating in the diarist's own words:—

'I mentioned a picture engraved and hanging there with horns and wings, and underneath, uxor ejus ad vivum pinxit. This picture many had said was Benjamin Hoadley, the seditious divine of London; but, for my part, I gave no other description of it than this, that 'twas the picture of one of the greatest Presbyterian, republican, antimonarchical, Whiggish, fanatical preachers living in England. And this description was enough to exasperate him. And yet, for all that, he did not discover any passion, nor give the least hint that he was a Whig himself. Neither did he give any hint of it afterwards till I came to mention a tobacco stopper tipped with silver, and given to me by a reverend divine, who had informed me that it was made out of an oak that lately grew in St. James's Park, but was destroyed by the D. of M. for the great house he was building near St. James's, and that the said oak came from an acorn that was planted there by King Charles II, being one of those acorns that he had gathered in the Royal Oak, where he was forced to shelter himself from the fury of the rebels after the fight at Worcester. Mr. Mollineux was at the other end of the room when this was shew'd, and the said story told; but hearing it he comes immediately to the tables, and expresses himself in words of this kind, viz. that 'twas a baseable, and that an hundred such things were not worth the seeing. Mr. Keil however thought otherwise, and said that he thought my collection was better than that in the Laboratory. Some mirth passing after this, I went on with my description, and had not yet formed an opinion that Mr. Mollineux was a Whig; but finding that he was still inquisitive after other curiosities, and that he pretended to much skill in good engraving and drawing, I produced the picture of a beautifull young man, over the head of which was ΕΙΚΟΝ ΒΑΣΙΛΙΚΗ, and underneath, Quid quaeciris ultra? I did not tell them whose picture it was, but said that I shew'd it them as a thing excellently well done, which they all allow'd and view'd it over and over, and seemed to be mightily taken with it, and Mr. Mollineux in particular was pleased to say that 'twas admirably well done, and deserved a place amongst the most exquisite performances of this kind, at the same time asking how long I had had it, and who picture I took it to be. To the former of which questions reply'd, about a quarter of a year, to the latter that I did pretend to tell who it was designed for. Yet Mr. Keil w pleased to laugh, and to tell Mr. Mollineux, They are all rebel Mr. Mollineux, they are all rebels in this place, speaking the words in a merry joking way, and not with any intent to do me injury. Mr. Mollineux took the words upon the picture dow which I did not deny him, not thinking that 'twas with a design inform against me, as it afterwards proved. Yet from this time began a little to suspect his integrity, and that he was not one of those good men I expected from Mr. Keil, whom I had always found to be a man of honesty.'

Hinc illæ lacrymae! Poor Hearne was reported to Dr. Charl the same afternoon for showing the Pretender's Picture; a meeti of the Curators of the Library was threatened; but eventually matter seemed to pass over by his being desired by the Vice-Chancellor to give up the key of the Anatomy School, in order that determining Bachelors might meet there, by which change Hearne was mulcted of the fees which he obtained for showing the room and was sometimes detained one hour, or two, later than usual order to see to the locking up of the staircase on which it is situate. On March 23, however, he was summoned before the Heads Houses for remarks made in his preface to Dodwell's above mentioned tract, and, after a sharp discussion, in which reference was made to his exhibition of the portraits, he was ordered to suppress his preface, and re-issue the book without it; to which he consented. He was pressed to make a formal retraction of the passages to which objection was made, but this he stiffly refused to do. He says in a letter to Sir Philip Sydenham that the on form of retraction or expression of sorrow he could have been prevailed on to sign (strongly resembling the famous apology a middy to an insulted naval surgeon) would have been some su form as this:—'I, Thomas Hearne, A.M., of the University of Oxford, having ever since my matriculation followed my studies with as much application as I have been capable of, and having published several books for the honour and credit of learning, and particularly for the reputation of the foresaid University; am very sorry that by my declining to say anything but what I knew to be true in any of my writings, and especially in the last book I published, intituled,Henrici Dodwelli de Parma Equestri Woodwardiana Dissertatio, &c, I should incur the displeasure of any of the Heads of Houses, and as a token of my sorrow for their being offended at truth, I subscribe my name to this paper, and permitt them to make what use of it they please.'

A.D. 1714.

An evidence of the increased intercourse which sprang up between Denmark and England, in consequence of the marriage of Queen Anne, is probably to be found in the number of Danish readers who frequented the Library in the interval between her marriage and her death. Between the years 1683 and 1714, forty-nine Danes are entered in the Liber Admisorum, besides many from Sweden, Norway, and the North of Germany. The total number of foreigners admitted within the same period was no less than 244.

' In the year 1714 were in the Bodleian Library:—

| 30169 pr. vols. |
| 05916 MSS. vols. |

In all 36085.'

( Hearne's MS. Diary, vol. xci. p. 256.)

1 Hearne's MS. Diary, xlviii. 22. The retractation and apology which Hearne afterwards actually submitted to the Vice-Chancellor in court in 1718, when in trouble again for his preface to Camden's Elizabeth, was very similar in style to this. But he was not allowed to read it. Ibid. lxxi. 3 May.
It is strange that, notwithstanding Selden's and Laud's last additions, the Library had therefore very little more than doubled since 1620.

It is recorded in vol. ii. of the same Diary (p. 187) that the series of portraits which were painted on the wall of the Picture Gallery was renewed in November of this year. These portraits, amounting in number to about 222, ran round the gallery, immediately under the roof; many of them were fancy-heads of ancient philosophers and writers, but besides these there were some portraits of English writers and divines, up to the time of James II. A list of the whole series, as well as of the oil paintings in the Picture Gallery, was printed by Hearne together with his Letter contain an Account of some Antiquities between Windsor and Oxford. Of renovation of the wall-paintings he thus speaks in his preface to Rossi Historia Regum Angliae (1716): 'Non possim quin bibliotheca Bodleianae Curatores laudem, qui pictori Academico [i.e. W. Goose] in mandatis dederunt, ut veteres effigies renovet nitori pristino restituat: quippe quas eo pluris aestimendas esse censuavit quod eas in galeria depingendas jusserit ipse Bodleius, I Genius.' When the Gallery was re-roofed in 1831, all these paintings were, however, removed [see p. 15].

About the end of this year the Arundel Marbles, which, strange to say, had been exposed to the open air within the quadrangle of the Schools ever since they were given to the University, were removed into one of the rooms on the ground-floor, where they still remain. It was said that they had suffered more 'since 1586,' when they were exposed to our air, than they did in many hundred years before they came into it.' But the influence of the air was not all, for they had to contend against, for Hearne tells us that the defects of the Marble Chronicle (of which there are portions that were by Selden, which now can no longer be read at all) and some others, was owing not merely to exposure to the weather, but to the abuses of children who are continually playing in the area, and of other ignorant persons."

A.D. 1715.

We learn from Hearne's MS. Diary [vol. iii.] that differences between him and Dr. Hudson (of which he makes frequent mention) increased during this year. He was reported to the Vice-Chancellor in April for absence from the Library through his duties as Bedel, by reason of which readers had difficulty in obtaining books lodged above stairs. To this complaint his reply was that he was not bound, as Second Librarian, exclusively to do such 'drudgery,' but that Dr. Hudson was himself obliged by statute to deliver out such books as were under lock-and-key, and books in quarto and octavo, either personally or by his own special deputy. At the same time a complaint was made against him by three 'Bachelors of Arts of Queen's College, for refusing books to them which were of the faculty of Arts prescribed to them by the statutes of the Library. Hearne's only reply to the Vice-Chancellor in this case was the asking whether they had, also in accordance with the Statutes, come to the Library in their hoods, if under two years' standing; at which 'he smiled.' It appears, therefore, that this requirement had already become obsolete. Dr. Hudson, however, regarded the matter more seriously, and threatened that Hearne should be turned out of both his places.

April 15. (Good Friday!) 'This morning Dr. Hudson went out of town, and that pert jackanapes Bowles (who is Dr. Hudson's servitor) came to tell me that he is gone, and that the sweeper of the Library being dead, I must not admitt any one to sweep the 1 Letters by Eminent Persons, 1813, vol. i. p. 204.

Library as formerly. I returned answer I had nothing to do in that case. In the afternoon I was at study in the Library, and Bowles brings up a woman and girl, and set them to sweeping, and left them there: the this should not have been, they being not sworn nor allowed as sweepers. Indeed all things are now done very irregularly in the Library by the permission of Dr. Hudson, and by the impudence of this pert, silly servitor, and I am afraid much mischief is done within. The whole Library and galleries and studies and the Anatomy School used to be swept this day; they began about eight, and had not done till four or five in the afternoon. But now the Library only below stairs was swept over, and that very slightly, and all things were left in a bad condition, to my very great concern.1

At the visitation on Nov. 8, the Curators passed a resolution that the places of Under-librarian and Bedel were inconsistent, and that on S. Thomas’ day Hudson should be at liberty to appoint some other person to Hearne’s office. Hereupon Hearne immediately, without a moment’s delay, resigned both the offices of Architypographerus and Superior Bedel of Civil Law, and claimed to remain in the Library: but Hudson had fresh locks put on the doors, of which Bowles kept the keys, so that Hearne was unable to go in and out as before. However, he continued to execute his office whenever the Library was open until Jan. 23, 1716, when the Act which imposed a fine of £500, with other penalties, upon any one who held any public office without having taken the Oaths, came into operation. Then at once, all worldly interests, all affection for the old place of his studies and his care, gave way to the honest and unwavering dictates of his conscience; the Non-juror withdrew, and, with singularly hard measure, in spite of his representations, his place was ordered by the Curators to be filled up at Lady-Day, not on the ground of his own retirement, but on that of neglect of duty! His successor was Rev.

1 Hearne’s MS. Diary, liii. 124, 5.
John Fletcher, M.A., Chaplain, and afterwards Fellow, of Queen's College. Hearne states that his salary was, with great unfairness, withheld from him for the whole half-year preceding Lady-Day, together with some fees which were due\(^1\). But to the end of his life he maintained that he was still, de jure, Sub-librarian, and, with a quaint pertinacity, regularly at the end of each term and half-year, up to March 30, 1735\(^2\), continued to set down, in one of the volumes of his Diary, that no fees had been paid him, and that his half-year's salary was due.

On Hearne's announcing John Ross's Historia Angliae for publication in this year, W. Whiston forwarded to him a MS. of a Latin historical poem entitled Britannica, written in 1606 by an author of the same names as the forth-coming historian, with the following note inserted:—

"This book was written, as I think, by my great uncle, Mr. John Rosse, rector of Norton-juxta-Twycross in Leicestershire, where I was myself born. If it may be of any use to Mr. Hern at Oxford in his intended edition of this or some other work of the same author now advis'd, or may be thought worthy of a place in the publick library of that University, it is hereby freely given thereto by

"WILLIAM WHISTON.

"London, December 12, 1715."

Hearne adds that (of course) the author was altogether different from the Ross of his editing, and that the poem had been printed at Frankfort in 1607, as he learned from a MS. Catalogue of Mr. Richard Smith's books lent him by Bp. Fleetwood of Ely\(^3\). The MS. is now numbered, Bodley 573.

A learned tailor of Norwich was in this year recommended by \(^1\) Life, 1772, pp. 18–20.

\(^2\) He died on June 10, in that year.
\(^3\) This catalogue was sold at the auction in 1855 of the MSS. of Dr. Routh, who had bought it at Heber's sale.
Dr. Tanner, then Chancellor of Norwich Cathedral, for the Janitor's place in the Library should it be vacant. Although but a journeyman tailor of thirty years of age, who had been taught nothing but English in his childhood, Henry Wild had contrived within seven years to master seven languages, Latin, Greek, Hebrew, Chaldee, Syriac, Arabic and Persian, to which Tanner adds, in another letter to Dr. Rawlinson, Samaritan and Ethiopic. The application appears to have been unsuccessful so far as the holding office in the Library was concerned; but Wild found some employment in the Library for a time in the translating and copying Oriental MSS¹. He removed to London about 1720, and died in the following year, as we learn from an entry in Hearne's MS. Diary, (xcii. 128–9,) under date of Oct. 29, 1721, where we read:—

'About a fortnight since died in London Mr. Henry Wild, commonly called, the Arabick Taylour. I have more than once mentioned him formerly. He was by profession a taylour of Norwich, and was a married man. But having a strange inclination to languages, by a prodigious industry he obtain'd a very considerable knowledge in many, without any help or assistance from others. He understood Arabick perfectly well, and transcrib'd, very fairly, much from Bodley, being patroniz'd by that most eminent physician, Dr. Rich. Mead. He died of a feaver, aged about 39. He was about a considerable work, viz. a history of the old Arabian physicians, from an Arabick MS. in Bodley. The MS. was wholly transcrib'd by him a year agoe, but what progress he had made for the press I know not.'

Five MSS., including the Leiger Book of Malmesbury Abbey, together with a large number of printed books, were given on May 7, by William Brewster, M.D. of Hereford, a well-known antiquary².

A thick quarto volume (1052 pages) containing a Latin treatise

¹ Letters by Eminent Persons, i. 271, 300. [On p. 270 for Turner, read Tanner.]
² Hearne's MS. Diary, iii. 148.
ADAM ZERMICHNAUS on the controversy between the Eastern and Western Churches, concerning the Procession of the Holy Ghost, was forwarded to the Library through Sir Robert Sutton, ambassador at Constantinople, by Chrysanthus, Patriarch of Jerusalem, nephew and successor of Dositheus, an autograph Greek epistle from whom, occupying seven pages, is prefixed. At the end is a list of eleven German scribes who were employed upon the transcription of the volume, with the payments they severally received. It appears from the Benefaction Register that the volume was not actually received at the Library until 1722; and in 1731, an entry in the catalogue records that the MS. was restored to Sir Robert Sutton, by order of the Vice-Chancellor; but no reason or explanation is given. For more than a century the Patriarch's gift was consequently lost from the place of its destination; but in Dec. 1864, having turned up for sale among the well-known stores of Mr. C. J. Stewart, it was secured by the Librarian at the cost of £5 15s. 6d., and is once more to be found in its legitimate quarters, numbered MS. Addit. Bodl. ii. c. 9. Chrysanthus also gave, in 1725, a copy of Dositheus' History of the Patriarchate of Jerusalem, which was printed, in Greek, in 1715.

A.D. 1716.

On Aug. 23, a legacy of £100 from Dr. South (who died July 8), for the purchase of modern books, was paid to the Vice-Chancellor.

Arms in the window. See 1610.

A.D. 1718.

One Mr. Hutton appears to have been employed in the Library during this year. It seems, from a passage in a letter of 1 Hearne's Diary, lix. 141; Reliqq. Hearn. i. 366.

C. Wheatly's, printed in Letters by Eminent Persons, ii. 116, that the learned commentator Samuel Parker, son of the Bishop of Oxford, was also at some time employed in the Library; for Wheatly expresses a wish that S. Parker's son, then (1739) an apprentice to Mr. Clements the bookseller, might, if the accounts of his extraordinary proficiency be true, be placed 'in his father's seat, the Bodleian Library.' As Parker was a non-juror, his employment must doubtless have been at some earlier period than this, but his name is not met with in any of the old Account-books or Registers. One Thomas Parker occurs in the Library accounts in 1766 and in 1772.

A.D. 1719.

Dr. Hudson died, on Nov. 27, of dropsy. And at one o'clock on the afternoon of the very next day, Joseph Bowles, M.A., of Oriel College, was elected in his room.

The bitter terms in which Hearne frequently, in the course of his Diary, condemns Hudson's management, or rather mismanagement, of the Library, may be supposed to be owing in a considerable degree to personal pique and quarrel. But they meet with very singular and abundant confirmation in the letter of Z. C. Uffenbach, quoted above (p. 130), when the writer expresses, in the following strong language, his opinion of Hudson's neglect and incapacity, and of the general condition of the Library under his management:

> Perpende, queso. mecum, vir eruditissime, quantus thesaurus ex solis Bodleianæ Bibliothecæ codicibus elici possit, nisi Proto-Bibliothecarii Hudson negligentia ac pertinacia obstaret. Is enim muneri abunde satisfecisse, imo eximie ornasse Spartam videri vult, dum tot annis unico scriptori, Thucydidem ejus puto, omni

1 In one passage, Hearne says that such was Hudson's self-esteem that he reckoned himself equal to Erasmus or Sir Thomas More, while all that was curious in his books was gained from Hearne himself or others. (MS. Diary, vol. lvii. p. 158.)
Bibliothecæ cura plane abjecta, insudavit, cum hoc, quod supra dixi, potius agendum fuisset. Nefandam hujus insignis Bibliothecæ sortem (ignoscere justæ indignationi) satis deplorare nequeo. Inculta plane jacet, nemo ferme tanto thesauro uti, frui, gestit. Singulis sane diebus per trium mensium spatium illam frequentavi, sed, ita me dixi amant, nunquam tot una vice homines in illa vidi quot numero sunt Musæ, vel saltem artes liberales. De librorum studiosis loquor; nam puerorum, muliercularum, rusticorum, hinc inde cursitantium, voluminumque multitudinem per transennas spectantium mirantiumque, cœtum excipio. . . . De Proto-bibliothecarii incuria jam dixi, ejusque stupendam in historia literaria librariaque, inprima extra Insulam ultraque maria, ignorantiam taceo.'

Of Hearne, however, Uffenbach writes in the following different strain:—

'Hic scholaris, ut hic loqui amant, esse solet, atque etiamnum est, nomine Hearne, qui, præ reliquis, diligentiam suam non modo scriptis, sed in novo etiam Bibliothecæ catalogo consitiendo, typis proxime exscribendo, probavit; ast, quod dolendum, ad exemplum prioris, qui satis jejunos, inconcinnus, erroribusque innumeris scatens est.'

Hudson's successor, Bowles, had previously been his Assistant for some years, and as, while Hearne was Under-keeper, he had come into sharp collision with that irascible antiquary (see under 1715), his election now was a matter of sore annoyance to the latter. Hearne dwells upon it in his Diary with great bitterness and at great length: 'Competitors were Mr. Hall, of Queen's, and that pert conceited coxcomb Mr. Bowles (who is not yet Regent Master) of Oriel College. Bowles carried it by a great majority, having about 160 votes, and Mr. Hall about 77. I think it the most scandalous election that I have yet heard of in Oxford.' Of his supporters he speaks thus:—'Charlett and such rogues, who contrived to bring in that most compleat coxcomb
Annals of the
1719-

Bowles to the Head-Librarian in the immortal scandal of all men were concerned in. And even, when ten years later he recorded Bowles’ death, he indulges in forgetfulness of charity to the departed, in the following strain: 'Of this gentleman (a most vile, wicked wretch) frequent mention hath been made in these Memoirs. He took the degree of M.A Oct. 19, 1719. 'Tis incredible what damage he did to the Bodl. Library, by putting it into disorder and confusion, which before, by the great pains I had taken &c. was the best regulated library in the world!' Bowles' name never occurs in the Diary without some appropriate epithet being attached to it, which may be accounted for partly from his having taken the oaths of allegiance after declaring he would never do so a defector which Hearne never forgave in any one, but chiefly also from his having personally excluded Hearne from the Library, when the latter refused to resign his keys in 1715, by procuring new locks and keys, which he kept in his own custody.

Three or four days after Bowles' election, Mr. Fletcher, the Sub-Librarian, helding no doubt the appointment of his junior over his head, resigned his office, to which Bowles appointed the well-known antiquary, Francis Wise. Upon this appointment Hearne comments thus: 'Bowles put in Mr. Wise, A.M., of Trin. Coll. (a pretender to antiquities), tho' he had promised it to one of Oriel Coll., that came in fellow of Oriel when he did, and was very serviceable to him in getting the Head Librarian's place: for which Bowles is strangely scouted and despis'd at Oriel, as a breaker of his word, and a whiffing, silly, unfaithfull, cox-comb.' It must be allowed that the portrait of Bowles in the Library bears out in some degree Hearne's last epithet, by giving him the appearance rather of a fine clerical gentleman than of a student.

Baskett, the printer, presented to the Library a magnificent copy on vellum of the 'Vinegar' Bible, printed by him in 1717. Only three copies were so struck off; the second was placed in the King's Library, and the third was sold to the Duke of Chandos, for five hundred guineas, at whose sale, in 1747, Lord Foley purchased it for £72 9s.

A.D. 1720.

About this time, one John Hawkins, a highwayman (who was executed in May, 1722), is said by an accomplice, Ralph Wilson, who published an account of his robberies, to have defaced some pictures in the Library. The University is said to have offered £100 for discovery, and a poor Whig tailor was taken up on suspicion, and narrowly escaped a whipping. No particulars, however, of Hawkins' act are given in the pamphlet, and no further notice of it has been found elsewhere.

Joseph Swallow, B.A., who died in this year, is found from the Accounts to have been employed, for some short time, in the Library.

In this year the titles of all books which were bought out of the Library funds begin to be recorded, together with their prices; they are entered in a Register marked with the letter C.

Visitors' Fees. See 1713.

A.D. 1721.

The inscription on the Schools' Tower, beneath the statue of James I, was renewed in this year 1.

Sir Godfrey Kneller presented his own portrait to the Gallery.

1 Heane's Diary, xci. 196.
A.D. 1722.

Mrs. Mary Prince is recorded to have presented heads of our Blessed Lord and of King Charles I, painted by herself. They appear to be the two paintings on copper, now hanging in the Sub-librarian’s study, called Mus. Bibl. II. Beneath that of our Lord is the following inscription: ‘This present figure is the symyltyude of our Lorde Jesus our Saviour, imprinted in amyrald by the Predecessors of the Great Turke, & sent to Pope Innocent y® Eight at the cost of the Great Turke for a token, for this caus, to redeeme his brother that was taken prisner.’ The inscription is, of course, if the painting be Mrs. Prince’s work, reproduced literatim from some older copy.

The attachment to the old Stuart family, which was so warmly cherished in Oxford, appears to have lingered in the Bodleian, notwithstanding Hearne’s departure, who himself would scarcely have thought that a vestige of it had been left behind. For in the Benefaction Register for this year, the gift of a portrait of Sheikh, Duke of Buckingham, from his widow Catherine, a natural daughter of James II, is entered as coming from ‘filia Regis Jacobi II, τοῦ μακαρίου.’

Chrysanthus, Patriarch of Jerusalem. See 1715.

A.D. 1723.

The noble brass statue of William Herbert, Earl of Pembroke, (who was Chancellor of the University from 1617 to his death in 1630, and was the donor of the Barocci MSS.,) which forms such a conspicuous feature in the Picture Gallery, was presented this year by the earl’s great nephew, Thomas, the seventh Earl of Pembroke. It was cast by the famous artist Hubert le Sœur, from a picture by Rubens, and is said to weigh about 1600 lbs.
letter of thanks from the University was read in Convocation on April 19; it is criticized by Hearne in his Diary¹ in the following terms: 'I am told that this letter is very silly and poor, and that, among other things, his Lordship is told in it that the statue is placed in aedē immortalitatis. Now what this aedes immortalitatis, church, temple or chapel of immortality is, I cannot conceive, but am sure that the statue is at present fix'd in the Picture Gallery, adjoyning to the Bodl. Library.'

A.D. 1724.

The MSS. Adversaria of Dr. J. E. Grabe came to the Library in this year after the death of Bishop Smalridge (Sept. 27, 1719), in accordance with the will of their writer, who at his death (Nov. 12, 1712) bequeathed them first to Hickes and next to Smalridge, with the final reversion to the Bodleian. They form forty-three volumes. Some account of them is given in Hickes' Discourse prefixed to Grabe's Defects and Omissions in Whiston's Collection of Testimonies, &c. (8o. Lond. 1712), and they are fully catalogued by Mr. Coxe in vol. i. of the general Catalogue of MSS., cols. 851–876. In a written list of them, preserved in the Library, Dr. Bandinel has noted that several volumes of the series were purloined before they came to Oxford, while remaining in the possession of a friend after Grabe's death.

A Zend MS. very well and clearly written (dated in the year 1005 of the era of Yezdegerd, i.e. A.D. 1635), of the Leges Sacrae, Ritus, &c. Zoroastris, was received from G. Bowcher, a merchant in the East Indies. It was given in 1718, but not forwarded until 1723, when it was brought from India by Rev. Rich. Cobbe, M.A. It is now numbered Bodl. Or. 321. And a Coptic Lexicon, compiled and prepared for the press by Rev. Thos. Edward, M.A.,

ANNALS OF THE

In 1724, Edward was brought for the sum of ten pounds, which was specially granted from the University Chest. Edward was the son of the Dean of Ch. Ch., meeting him in the name of Dr. Edmund Cressell, with whom he was living. When he was retired by appointing him a Chaplain of the University with the view of devoting himself to the study of the Coptic language, which was then the ground upon the death of Dr. Tatton at Lincolns College. But just when Edward was expected to resign his office, his father, an Englishman, was not, as he could not care for the same. He was the eldest son of W. Cressell, in Northamptonshire, and a younger brother. He finally became Rector of Aldwinkle in the same county, and died there in the year 1727. His book is a work on Archibald Tatton in his Lexicon Sacro-Egyptiacum. Another MS. Coptic Lexicon, in two volumes, was written in 1727.

In 1744, there were five volumes of the tracts on the Coptic language, which appeared between 1680-1690, written by E. Smidt, M.A. of St. Ven. Coll., and Rector of

In 1747, John Cressell of St. John's College, gave nine volumes of MSS. of most importance, of which is a copy-book of

In 1748, Peter O'Shea, Lord Deputy of Ireland, in

Some Greek MSS. were bought which had been brought from Mount Athos; three of them are now placed amongst the Cromwell MSS., Nos. 15, 16, and 27, and three others are numbered Miscell. Gr. 137–9.

Sale of Duplicates. See 1745.

A.D. 1729.

Mr. Bowles, the Librarian, died at Shaftesbury, the place of his birth, and was buried there on Nov. 25. On Dec. 2, Mr. Robert Fysher, B.M., Fellow of Oriel College, was elected his successor by 100 votes to 85 over Francis Wise, the Under-librarian. Mr. John Bilstone, M.A., Chaplain of All Souls' and Janitor of the Library, was also a candidate, but retired before the election, in the hope of securing Wise's return. As Wise held Hearne's old place, and was regarded by him as an usurper, and as Bilstone held in his possession the new keys which Bowles originally procured to render Hearne's old ones useless, the latter consequently regarded them both with great disfavour, and rejoiced greatly at the result of the election. His account of it is printed in the Reliq. Hearne. vol. ii. p. 712.

Forty-two MS. volumes came to the Library by the bequest of the widow of Mr. Francis Cherry, of Shottesbrooke, Berks, the early patron and constant friend of Hearne.1 Cherry himself

1 In the Benefaction Register they are erroneously entered as coming by the bequest of Mr. Cherry himself.
died Sept. 23, 1713, and Hearne says that he had intended to give his MSS. to his old protégé. They are not, for the most part, of very great value, but among them are various volumes by Dodwell; and a book written and bound by Q. Eliz. is described above, under the year 1628. Hearne was greatly annoyed at a paper of his own, containing reasons for taking the oath of allegiance, which he had written in 1700, coming into the Library amongst these books; he endeavoured in vain (although now in these days his legal right would be at once recognized) to recover it, and it was published, to his still greater annoyance, by the Whigs, under the editorship of Mr. Bilstone, the janitor. An account of Hearne’s endeavours to regain it, together with a notice of Mrs. Cherry’s bequest and of the MSS., is to be found in Dr. Bliss’
Appendix to his Reliq. Hearm. ii. 899 906.

In the Register of Readers admitted by favour occurs, under date of April 19, the name of ‘C. Wesley, ædis Xti alumnus,’ written in a neat and clear hand. The name of his great brother is not found in any register extending over the period of his stay in Oxford. At this time the Library appears to have been almost entirely forsaken. Between 1730–1740 it rarely happens that above one or two books are registered to readers in a day, while often for whole days together not a single entry occurs; and since, in the register for this period, the books are noted down by three hands, it can hardly be possible that the blanks are due to the negligentance of librarians (as might have been supposed were the same han-writing found throughout) rather than to the lack of students.

A.D. 1735.

On the death of Hearne (June 10, 1735) fifteen of the MSS. of Thomas Smith, D.D., of Magdalen College, the well-known a-learned non-juror, came to the Library, Smith having bequeath-them to Hearne on this condition. With them came also copies of Camden's Britannia and Annales Eliz., with MSS. notes by their author. The rest of Smith's MSS. appear to have come to the Library together with the mass of Hearne's collections, included in Rawlinson's bequest in 1755. They amount altogether to 138 thin volumes, containing notes, extracts and letters on all kinds of subjects. There is a very full written catalogue of their contents, in two volumes. Three Greek MSS. were given by Smith himself on his return from his travels in the East about 1681.

A.D. 1736.

The Library was enriched with the collections of the well-known antiquary, Thomas Tanner, Bishop of St. Asaph, who died on Dec. 14, in the preceding year. By his will, dated Nov. 22, 1733, he bequeathed his MSS. to the Library together with such printed books, not already there, as the Curators and Library-keeper should think fit to accept. But he directed his executor to burn all his sermon-notes, 'and other little pieces and attempts in divinity,' as well as all his own private papers and letters.
The largest portion of his MSS. (nearly 300 volumes out of 467) consists of the papers which he himself says he 'bought of Archbishop Sancroft's executors,' but which it is said in the Gent. Mag.
for 1782 (cited by Gough in his British Topography, i. 126) he bought for eighty guineas of the bookseller Bateman, to whom Sancroft's executors had sold them.

Together with these, and perhaps not now to be distinguished, are some of the collections of Dr. Nalson between 1640 and 1660. To the latter a claim was made through Archdeacon Knight, in 1737, by Dr. Williams of St. John's College, as grandson of Nalson; but the Bishop's brother replied (as we learn from a copy of his answer and of another letter written by

1 Eighteen other volumes of Sancroft's MSS. are to be found in the Harleian Collection, Brit. Mus., and a few among Wharton's books at Lambeth.
him in 1753) that the Bishop had bought them at Ely, where they had lain neglected for many years, and he thought possibly from some one living in the house which Nalson inhabited when Prebendary of Ely. The matter ended by Dr. Williams waiving any claim which he had, in consideration of the place of deposit being the Bodleian. Sancroft's and Nalson's papers together comprise a large series of letters of the time of the Civil War, of the highest interest and value, from most of the leading personages on both sides, including Charles I, Rupert, the Protector Oliver, and Hampden. There are also collections relating to various dioceses, with very much that illustrates both the ecclesiastical and literary history of the seventeenth century. A selection from the Civil War letters was published, in 2 vols. in 1842, by Rev. Henry Cary, M.A. (a son of the translator of Dante, and at that time an assistant in the Library), under the title of Memorials of the Civil War; but the transcripts were very carelessly made, and scarcely a single letter can be trusted as faithfully and verbatim representing the original. Another volume of selections from Sancroft's papers was published, with much better care, by Will. Nelson Clarke, D.C.L., 8°, Edinb. 1848, entitled, A Collection of Letters addressed by Prelates and Individuals of high rank in Scotland, and by two Bishops of Sodor and Man, to Archbishop Sancroft, in the reigns of Charles II and James VII. A catalogue of the MSS., compiled by the Rev. Alfred Hackman, M.A. (now Sub-librarian) was published in 1860, in a thick quarto volume, forming vol. iv. of the general Catalogue.

1 Thirty-one other volumes of Nalson's papers were offered for sale to Dr. Rawlinson in 1751 (Letter to H. Owen, Rawl. MS. C. 989. fol. 121). Four volumes which belonged to Bp. Moore's library were restored to Cambridge out of Tanner's collection in 1741; two of them were registers of the Abbeys of St. Edmund's-bury and Langley.

2 Some collections for Wiltshire made by Tanner did not come to Oxford with his library, but were forwarded by his son in 1751.

3 Dr. Clarke appears not to have been aware of the existence of an interesting volume of letters from Scottish Bishops to Bishop Compton of London, among of MSS. The several volumes are described in brief in the body of the work; but a very full Index is subjoined, in which the contents of all the letters and papers are entered in detail. The printed books (upwards of 900) contain many, by the Reformers and their opponents, which are of the utmost rarity in early English black-letter divinity. One of these is an unique copy (as it is believed) of an edition, printed without place or date, of the Pore Helpe, of which there is also an unique copy of another edition, equally without place or date, among the Douce books. It has not hitherto been remarked that two copies, or two editions, exist of this metrical satire. Another volume, which contains several tracts printed by W. de Worde and Gerard Leeu, has also two by Caxton, hitherto unnoticed as exhibiting his type, and described in the Catalogue simply as being books without place or date. The merit of their discovery as Caxton's is due to the recent research of Mr. Bradshaw, the Librarian of the Cambridge Library. The one is a clean and perfect copy of the Governayle of Helthe, with the verses called Medicina Stomachi, of which the only copy known to Mr. Blades is in the library of the Earl of Dysart at Ham House; the other a wholly unknown quarto edition, in the same type, of the Ars Moritendi.

Unfortunately, when Tanner was removing his books from Norwich to Oxford, in Dec. 1731, by some accident in their transit (which was made by river) they fell into the water, and were submerged for twenty hours. The effects of this soaking are only too evident upon very many of them. The whole of the printed Rawlinson's MSS. (C. 985), which was rescued by Rawlinson, with the rest of Compton's papers, from being destroyed as waste paper. Other letters, including a large number from Archbishop Burnett of Glasgow, addressed to Archbishop Sheldon, are in a volume of the Sheldon papers.

1 Gent. Magaz. 1733, p. 583.

2 None of them, however, are now in the state described in a note in Letters by Eminent Persons, ii. 89, where it is said that many have received so much injury as books were uniformly bound in dark green calf, apparently about fifty years ago; the binder’s work was well done, but unhappily all the fly-leaves, many of which would doubtless have afforded something of interest, with regard to the books and their former possessors, were removed. Many of Tanner’s own letters are to be found amongst the Ballard and Hearne MSS., as well as scattered here and there in other collections; and one volume of them was purchased in 1859. Some coins were given by him in 1733. We learn from the Accounts that Thomas Toynbee, an undergraduate of Balliol College (B.A. 1743, M.A. 1745), received £12 12s., in 1741, for making a list of Tanner’s MSS., and that E. Rowse Mores, the subsequently well-known antiquary, arranged some of his deeds in 1753-4.

A.D. 1738.

The third Catalogue of the printed books appeared this year in two volumes, folio, of 611 and 714 pp. respectively. It is still a Catalogue of great use and value, from its remarkable accuracy, and from the abundance and minuteness of its cross-references. The secret history of this Catalogue, however, as of the preceding one, is related by Hearne. By him, as he himself frequently tells us¹, the greater portion of it was virtually prepared soon after his appointment as Sub-librarian, in 1712 (although no mention of his name is made in Fysher’s preface), and to him, therefore, its accuracy is most probably in a great measure due². He compared every book in the Library with Hyde’s to be altogether useless, crumbling into pieces on the slightest touch.³ Perhaps the unique copy of The Children of the Chapel Stript and Whipt which Warton says was amongst Tanner’s books, but which has never appeared in any Bodleian Catalogue, may have perished from this cause. For a notice of the disappearance of two of Churchyard’s tracts, see under the year 1659, p. 81.

¹ Pref. to Chron. de Dunstable, p. xii. Autobiogr. p. 11, &c.
² It is fair to say that Fysher remarks in his preface that experience proved how Catalogue, and corrected many mistakes, adding notes here and there about anonymous and synonymous authors, and, as the Vice-Chancellor (Dr. Mauder, of Balliol) was anxious to have an Appendix issued, he transcribed for this purpose all his corrections and additions into two folio volumes, 'which' (to take up now Hearne's own account in his Diary, vol. ixii. p. 58, under date 1717) 'now lye and are to be seen in the Library.... But at last Dr. Hudson thought it more convenient with respect to himself that both Dr. Hyde's Catalogue and my Appendix should come out together as one entire work, so that he might have the honour of all. Upon which he employed one Moses Williams, his servitor\(^1\) (the Dr. being then Fellow of University College), to transcribe it, the said Williams being in the Dr.'s debt. When Williams had done, he demanded the remaining part of his money, which was about ten or twelve pounds, the rest having been stopped by the Dr. for the debt just now mentioned. The whole was fifty lbs. which he bargained for with the Dr. But when Williams desired the said ten or twelve pounds, of which he had immediate occasion to discharge the fees and charges for the degree of Bachelor of Arts, the Dr. was in a very great passion, and refused to pay it. Upon which Williams moved the matter so far that the Catalogue was laid before the Delegates of the Press, and the Dr. was called before them to his very great mortification, and they told him that 'twas highly unreasonable to stop the poor lad's money. Upon which the Dr. in a great rage and fury paid him; otherwise Williams had most certainly put him into the Court. This Catalogue was last summer ordered to be printed, and the Dr. was refunded his money; but 'tis not yet put to the press, the Dr. being unwilling it should be printed till such time as he hath done Josephus.' But Hudson died before his Josephus was finished, and the proposed new Catalogue was consequently begun, and only begun, by his successor, Bowles. The latter printed as far as p. 244 of vol. i. and p. 292 of vol. ii. His successor, Fysher, upon his appointment, engaged the assistance of his friend, Emmanuel Langford, M.A., Vice-Principal of Hart Hall, who completed the second volume, while Fysher himself finished the first. At the end of the second volume appeared an announcement of a supplemental Catalogue, as being ready for the press, containing the books existing in College Libraries but wanting in the Bodleian. This, however, never appeared, and nothing is known of the MS. from which it was to have been printed. Fysher's Catalogue appears, from the University Accounts, to have occupied from 1735 in preparation, for which, and for transcribing it for the press, £194 5s. were paid to him.

\(^1\) Moses Williams took his degree as B.A. in 1708. One John Williams (probably the one of that name who is entered in the Register of Graduates as having taken the degree of B.A. at Oriel in 1704) appears to have been a colleague of Hearne's in employment in the Library, about 1704. For in a letter written to Hearne, March 20, 1706, one year and a-half after he had quitted Oxford, in which he mentions his having been appointed to the Head-mastership of Ruthin School in November, 1705, he refers to 'our dear friends that are in irons at the Bodleian Library, there being several, I suppose, that have been manacled in that pleasing prison since my being there.' (Rawlinson Letters, vol. xii. f. 1.)

Alexander Pope gave, together with copies of his Iliad and Odyssey, a curious volume, containing a series of 178 Portraits of East Indian Rajahs and Great Moguls, down to Aurung-Zebe. It is now numbered Bodl. MS. Sansk. 14.

The names of various persons (all, probably, undergraduates) employed in the Library about this time are learned from the Accounts:—1738, Mr. Hall; 1740-1, Mr. Allen; 1740, Mr. Toynbee (Ball. Coll., B.A., 1743); 1743, Mr. Jessett (All Souls', B.A., 1745); 1747, Mr. Thomas Winbolt (All Souls', B.A. 1748).
A.D. 1739.

Notification was given to the Vice-Chancellor, on June 9, that thirteen pictures (of no great value) were bequeathed to the Gallery by Dr. King, Master of the Charter House, by his will dated July 28, 1736, together with £200 for the cleansing and repairing the frames of the pictures already in the Gallery. A list of these thirteen is given in Gutch's transl. of Wood's Annals, vol. ii. pp. 969, 970. The pictures themselves are now in the Randolph Gallery. Dr. King also left a legacy of £400 to the University to prepare a complete and handsome edition of Zoroaster's Works, in Persian, with a Latin translation and notes; but this portion of his bequest was not accepted.

A.D. 1740.

A copy of the Byzantine historian, Pachymeres, was restored in this year, by order of the Curators, to Emmanuel College, Cambridge, from which it had by some means been removed; but the College paid £4 4s. for its restoration.

A.D. 1745.

In this year died Nathaniel Crynes, M.A., Fellow of St. John's College and Superior Bedel of Arts, to which latter office he had been elected Jan. 26, 1744. He bequeathed to the Library all such books out of his own valuable collection as it did not already possess, the rest going to his own College. His books in octavo and smaller sizes, with a few quarto, are still kept distinct, under his own name, and number 968 volumes.

1 He left a benefaction to his successor in this office, which now produces £13 6s. 8d. yearly.
many of which are of great rarity. Seven MSS. were presented by him in 1736. In 1727 he purchased some duplicates from the Library, for £3 16s. 8d., and a story, told by Warton in connection with this purchase, of his fortunately rejecting books which bore the name of Milton, will be found under the year 1620. There is a biographical notice of him in J. Haslewood's Introduction to Juliana Barnes' Boke of St. Alban's, Lond. 1810, pp. 86-7. In the Accounts for 1746 occur special payments to Fr. Wise, and to one Mr. Gerard Bodley, for cataloguing and arranging Crynes' books.

A.D. 1746.

Trott's Claris Lingue Sancte. See 1686.

A.D. 1747.

Dr. Fysher, the Librarian, died on Nov. 4, at Mr. Warneford's, of Sevenhampton, Wilts, and was buried, on Nov. 7, in Adam de Brome's chapel in St. Mary's Church, Oxford. And on Nov. 10, Rev. Humphrey Owen, B.D., Fellow of Jesus College (afterwards D.D., and chosen Principal of his College in 1763), was unanimously elected his successor¹. Rawlinson mentions, in a letter

¹ Memorandum by Owen himself, in reply to a question from Rawlinson, Rawl. MS. C. 989, f. 142. This volume contains a collection of letters to Owen, chiefly from Browne Willis and Rawlinson, between the years 1748-1756. It affords proof that Owen was what his correspondents would call an 'honest' man, i.e. a Jacobite. In one letter, Willis sends him a Latin inscription in praise of Flora Macdonald, which he says is 'on a fair lady's picture, in an honest gentl. seat in the province of St. David's;' in another, Rawlinson sends him, as a contribution to the Oxford collection of verses on the death of Frederick, Prince of Wales, this Jacobite epitaph:

'Here lies Fred., Down among the dead;
Had it been his Father, Most had much rather;
Had it been his Brother, Better than any other;
Had it been a Sister, More would have mist her;
Wer't the whole generation, Happy for the nation;
But since it is only Fred., There is no more to be said.'
to Owen of April 15, 1751, that he had heard a complaint that in Fysher's time 'there was a great neglect in the entry of books into the Benefactors' Catalogue, and into the interleaved one of the Library; as to these objections, my answers were as ready as true, at least I hope so, that Dr. Fysher's indisposition disabled him much from the duty of his office, and that I did not think every small benefaction ought to load the velum register.'

A.D. 1749.

A Runic Primstaff, or Clog Almanack, was given by Mr. Guy Dickens, a gentleman-commoner of Ch. Ch. It is now exhibited, together with another (see p. 105), in the glass case near the entrance of the Library. Pointer, in his Oxoniensis Academia (p. 143), mentions that an explanation of the Primstaff was given by himself; the Accounts show that it was also in this year.

A number of coins were added to the Numismatic Museum, which had been collected by the late Librarian, Fysher.

A.D. 1750.

A copy on vellum, with illuminated initials, &c, of vol. i. (reaching to the Psalms) of the Vulgate Bible, printed by Fust and Schoeffer in 1462, was bought for £2 10s. ! The volume was imperfect at the end, ceasing at Job xxxii. 5, and seven leaves followed in contemporary and beautiful MS., which also ended imperfectly at Ps. xxxvi. 9, with one leaf wanting at the end of Job. But when the Canonici Collection of MSS. was received from Venice, in 1818, among some fragments which were found in one of the boxes were fourteen leaves of a MS. Bible, which were at once recognised as being part of those wanted to complete this book, and which left only four still deficient. The volume came to the Library from the collection of Nic. Jos. Foucault,

1 Rawl. MS. C. 98g.
ANNUALS OF THE

1750.

'Ceones Consistorianus,' many other of whose MSS. and printed books came by Rawlinson's bequest; but through how many hands the missing leaves had passed in the seventy subsequent years ere they were thus marvellously restored to their place, it is impossible to tell.

A.D. 1751.

A benefaction from Lord Crewe, Bishop of Durham, of £60 to the Librarian and of £10 for the purchase of books, appears for the first time in the Accounts for this year. These sums (which are still annually paid into the General Fund) proceed from a bequest of £200 per annum from Crewe (who died Sept. 24, 1721) to the University. A proposal to give these same sums to the Library, with other assignments for the remainder, was brought forward in Convocation on June 5, 1723, but the scheme was then rejected. And thus nearly thirty years seem to have elapsed from the time of the bequest before the share for the Library was definitely fixed and paid.

Charles Gray, M.P. for Colchester, presented a MS. Roll, containing a Survey of the estates of the Abbey of Glastonbury at the Dissolution, which is printed by Hearne in his Appendix to Langtoft's Chronicle, vol. ii. pp. 343-388, from a copy made from this original; and an inscription, in the Phœnician language, upon a white marble stone, which was brought, with many others, from Citium, in the island of Cyprus, by Dr. Porter, a physician of Thaxted in Essex. The stone measures twelve inches in length, by three in breadth, and three in depth. It has been frequently engraved: first by Pocock (Travels in the East, vol. ii. pl. xxxiii. 2); next by Swinton (Inscriptiones Ciliciae, 1750, and Philos. Trans. 1764); afterwards by Chandler, Barthélemy, &c.; and, lastly, by Gesenius

1 The story of this recovery has been already related by Archd. Cotton in his Typographical Gazetteer, p. 339, where by mistake he refers the original purchase to the year 1752.
2 Hearne's Diary, xcvii. 12.
(for whom former copies were collated with the original, and corrected, by Mr. Reay) in his Scripturae Linguaeque Phoeniciæ Monumenta, published in 1837, where the inscription is described at pp. 126–133, part i., and engraved at pl. xi. part iii. It appears to be an epitaph by a husband in memory of his wife. The stone is now kept in one of the Sub-librarians' studies.

Thomas Shaw, the well-known Eastern traveller, bequeathed his collection of natural curiosities, which was sent to the Ashmolean Museum, and the MS. of his own travels, with corrections, and other papers. Copies of Caxton's Game of the Chess and Recuyell of Troye were given by Mr. James Bowen, of Shrewsbury, painter ¹.

A.D. 1753.

In May of this year died Henry Hyde, Lord Cornbury, son of Henry Hyde, Earl of Rochester, and great-grandson of the great Earl of Clarendon. He had made a will bequeathing all the Chancellor's MSS. to the University of Oxford, to be printed at their press, and the profits to be devoted to a school for riding and other athletic exercises in the University, should such an institution be accepted, or else to other approved uses. Dying before his father, through the effects of an accident, his bequest was void, as he was never actually in possession of the papers to which it referred; but after the death of his father in Dec. following, his sisters, who were the co-heiresses, carried out his will, by sending all the Clarendon MSS. in their possession to the University on the same conditions ². From these was published in 1759 (in which year the papers appear to have been deposited in the Library) the ¹ A MS. vol. of collections by him relating to the history of Shropshire, dated 1766, is among Gough's books, Salop MS. 20.

² On Feb 4, 1868, a scheme for the appropriation of the accumulated fund (now amounting to about £12,000), which had been approved by the Clarendon Trustees, was accepted by Convocation. The money is to be applied to the erection of laboratories, &c, at the University Museum, for the Professor of Experimental Philosophy.
Life of the first Earl, reprinted in several editions up to the year 1827. This was followed, in 1767-73, by the publication, under the editorship of Dr. Rich. Scrope, of Magd. Coll., of vols. i., ii. of a selection from the State Papers; of which vol. iii. appeared under the editorship of Mr. Thos. Monkhouse, of Queen’s Coll., in 1786. During the progress of this publication, however, the original collection of MSS. papers was very largely increased by the acquisition of various portions which had long before been detached. Some were obtained, before the publication of vol. i., from the executors of Rich. Powney, LL.D.; and many were presented to the University, before the publication of vol. ii., by the Radcliffe Trustees, who had bought them for £170 when sold by auction in 1764 by the executors of Joseph Radcliffe, Esq., one of the executors to Edward, third Earl of Clarendon, who died in 1723. Dr. Douglas (afterwards Bishop of Salisbury), who was employed in the latter purchase, himself bought and gave some MSS. which had belonged to Mr. Guthrie, and was instrumental also in procuring some letters from Viscountess Middleton, &c. Again, before the publication of vol. iii. many further papers were purchased by the Radcliffe Trustees from a Mr. Richards, near Salisbury (from whose father Mr. Powney had obtained his portion), and from Mr. W. M. Godsall, of Albury, Surrey. And lastly, about eight or ten years ago, several boxes (including Clarendon’s own iron-bound escrivão), containing miscellaneous papers, were forwarded by the Clarendon Trustees in final discharge of their trust.

A MS. of the History of the Rebellion, in seven volumes, together with one of the Contemplations, in three volumes, was forwarded in 1785 or 1786 by the Duke of Queensbury. The former MS. appears to be that from which the first edition was printed by the Earl of Rochester.¹

¹ In the Benefaction Book this gift is entered under 1793, but it is mentioned in the Preface to vol. iii. of the State Papers, dated May 29, 1786, as having been
A complete Calendar of the Clarendon State Papers is now in progress under the care of several editors. As far as it has advanced, it has proved the good judgment and the extreme correctness with which the printed selection was made; but as that selection ended with the Restoration, while the papers themselves reach on to 1667, the year of the Earl's banishment, the later portion may be expected to contain much of fresh interest and value.

It was in this year also that the first portion of the MSS. of Thomas Carte, the 'Englishman' and historian, came to the Library. It has been universally supposed that his voluminous and invaluable collections came en masse subsequently to his death, but the Library Register shows that Oxford was indebted to him for a considerable and important portion during his life. In this year we find that he sent the papers which relate to the life of the great Duke of Ormonde, with a large number of others bearing on the history of Ireland from the time of Queen Elizabeth, comprised in thirty volumes folio and quarto. In the following year, shortly before his death (which occurred on April 2, 1754) he forwarded twenty-six more of his Irish volumes, in folio, marked A, B, C, D, &c. And in 1757 nine more of the same series were forwarded by his widow from Caldecot, near Abingdon, according to an entry in the old Catalogue, which appears to correspond to one in the annual Register to the effect that four more boxes were forwarded by the executors, 'by order of Rev. Mr. Hill.' The remainder of his collections were left in the hands of his widow, who, re-marrying to Mr. Nicholas Jernegan, or Jerningham (of the family seated at Cossey, Norfolk), bequeathed them, upon her death, to him, with the reversion to the University of Oxford. While they were in Mr. Jernegan's possession they were largely used by Macpherson 'lately' given. Another copy of part of the History, partly written by William Edgeman, who was Hyde's secretary at Scilly and during his first exile, came to the Library among Rawlinson's MSS., by whom it was bought at the sale of the Chandos Library in 1747 for £1 10s.
for his publication of State Papers, for which use of them £300 were paid; and the agreement entered into by the publisher Cadell, when borrowing some of them for this purpose, is preserved in the MS. Catalogue of the collection. In 1778, however, Mr. Jernegan disposed of his life-interest to the University, for (as Nichols¹ was informed by Price) the sum of £50, and the remainder were consequently at once transferred to the Library. The collection numbers altogether 180 volumes in folio, fifty-four in quarto, and seven in octavo, besides several bundles of Carte’s own papers; and is accompanied by a very full list of contents, compiled by Carte himself, in one folio volume. The mass of papers relating to Ireland which these volumes contain is enormous, drawn chiefly from the stores accumulated by Ormonde at Kilkenny Castle; to which are added miscellaneous historical collections derived from Lords Huntingdon, Sandwich, and Wharton. There are, also, several volumes of extracts and papers, collected with immediate reference to Carte’s History of England. And a third, and especially interesting, portion consists of the papers of Mr. David Nairne, under-secretary to James II during his exile, which reach from 1692 to 1718, and fill two volumes in folio and eight or nine in quarto. It was from these that Macpherson chiefly compiled his Original Papers, published in 1775, in 2 vols., 4º. A Report upon the contents of the collection, with special reference to Ireland (omitting the Nairne papers) was made to the Master of the Rolls by T. Duffus Hardy, Esq., and Rev. J. S. Brewer in 1863, and was printed in the following year, together with an extremely useful summary of the contents of the various volumes, and a reference-table of the letters, &c, printed by Carte in his Ormonde volumes. In consequence of this Report, two Commissioners (the Rev. Dr. Russell, President of Maynooth, and J. P. Prendergast, Esq.) were appointed to examine the whole series, and select for transcription all historical and official papers of interest relating to

¹ Lit. Anecd. ii. 514.
Ireland, with a view to the preservation of copies in the Record Office at Dublin. Several transcribers are therefore now continuously employed in transcribing for this purpose the papers selected by the Commissioners. Some notice of the MSS. is to be found in the Record Commission Report for 1800, p. 354.

A.D. 1754.

In this year the MS. collections of Rev. John Walker, D.D., of Exeter (son of Endymion Walker, of Exeter; born 1674, dec. 1747), from which he compiled his valuable and laborious work, The Sufferings of the Clergy, were forwarded to the Library by his son, William Walker, a druggist in Exeter, as appears from a letter from the latter preserved among papers relating to the Library in the Librarian's study. The annual accounts, however, mention the gift under the year 1756. Dr. Walker had expressed in his book (pref. p. xliii.) his intention to deposit his papers in some public repository, and his purpose was fortunately thus carried out. The papers have recently been bound, and now form twelve volumes in folio and eleven in quarto, with a few papers still in bundles. A large number of letters from many among the sufferers and their representatives are here preserved; but, unfortunately, Walker's own handwriting is often hard to decipher. Many pamphlets which belonged to him (identified by the peculiar handwriting in MS. notes) are amongst a vast series recently bound and placed in continuation of the Godwyn Tracts; and several volumes of pamphlets written by Dissenters were given by himself in the years 1719-21.

1 His successor in his Exeter prebend was appointed in that year.
2 The present writer, in answer to an enquiry in Notes and Queries in 1862 (3rd series, i. 218), said that these papers were amongst the Rawlinson MSS. This mistake arose from the fact that the least important portion had recently been found in a mass of papers belonging to that collection, but they did not at any time themselves form part of it.
The name of Hogarth occurs in the list of donors, as presenting his two engravings of the Analysis of Beauty, which he had published in the preceding year.

A.D. 1755.

This year is remarkable for the number and variety of the collections with which, during its course, the Library was enriched, comprehending those of Rawlinson, Furney, St. Amand, and Ballard.

On April 6 died Richard Rawlinson, D.C.L., a Bishop among the Non-jurors, notwithstanding that he passed in the world as a layman. From the time of Bodley, Laud, and Selden, he was the greatest benefactor the Library had known; and his only rivals since his own day have been Gough and Douce. In point of numbers, his donation of MSS. far exceeded all. From the short autobiographical notice of himself, given in his own collections for a continuation of the Athenae Oxon. (where he has inserted a small portrait of himself, engraved, without his name, by van der Gucht), we learn the following particulars. He was born Jan. 3, 1688, in the Old Bailey, his father being Sir Thos. Rawlinson, who was Lord Mayor of London in 1706. On March 9, 1707 (having been previously at St. Paul's School and Eton), he was matriculated as a commoner of St. John's College; but in consequence of the death of his father in the same year, he became a gentleman-commoner in 1709; B.A., Oct. 10, 1711; M.A., July 5, 1713; Governor of Bridewell and Bethlehem Hospitals, 1713; F.R.S., 1714; ordained (among the Non-jurors) Deacon, Sept. 21, and Priest, Sept. 23, 1716. He then travelled through the whole of England, except some of the northern parts, and in 1719 went 1 This date is from the Register of Graduates; Rawlinson says, Mich. Term, 1710.

---

2 By Bishop Jeremy Collier, in Mr. Laurence's Chapel on College Hill, London. (See a communication from the present writer in Notes and Queries, 3rd series, iii. 244.) He appears to have endeavoured to conceal from the world his clerical character. In a letter to T. Rawlinson, of Pophills, Warw. in 1736, he requests him not to address him as Rev. (Ballard's MSS. ii. 6.) Some volumes of Sermons in his handinto Normandy, where, while staying at Rouen, he received from Oxford the degree of D.C.L. by diploma of June 30. Thence he went to the Low Countries, where, in Sept., he was admitted into the Universities of both Utrecht and Leyden, and returned into England in Nov. On June 12 in the following year, he started on a longer journey, which he extended through Holland, France; Germany, the whole of Italy, and Sicily, to Malta; and returned on the death of his elder brother Thomas, also a well-known book-collector, in 1726. During his six years' travels, he had seen, he remarks, four Popes. Admitted F.S.A. May 10, 1727. On March 25, 1728, he was consecrated Bishop, by Bishops Gandy, Doughty, and Blackbourne, in Gandy's Chapel. Appointed a Governor of St. Bartholomew's Hospital in March, 1733. He resided at London House, Aldersgate, so called from having been in early days a mansion of the Bishops of London. During his lifetime he was a constant benefactor to the Library; in the years 1733-4-5-7-8-9 and 1750, he is entered in the great Register for special gifts of coins, books, and pictures. Some hundreds of printed books, now in the gallery called 'fur.,' and elsewhere, were given by him at these times; while many of the Holbeins and other valuable portraits in the Picture Gallery came from him. A few MSS. also came from him during his lifetime which are now placed in the general Bodley collection. But at his writing are among his MSS. His writing is of a very broad, rude, and clumsy character; and it is singular that his brother Thomas wrote a hand very similar. Richard usually signs only with his initials, separated by a cross, 'R + R.'

1 The small note-books kept on his journeys, containing epitaphs, inscriptions, accounts of places visited, &c, are preserved (but, unfortunately, in an imperfect series) among his Miscellaneous MSS.

2 See Notes and Queries, 3rd series, i. 225.

3 Two beautiful miniature portraits of James Edward, son of James II, and his wife Clementina Sobieski, which could not, probably, at the time be safely exhibited, have recently been exhumed by the Librarian from the obscurity to which they had been consigned, and are now hung in the Picture Gallery. In Feb. 1738, Rawlinson sent Kelly's 'Holy Table,' a marble slab, covered with astrological figures (engraved in Dr. Dee's Actions with Spirits), which, he says, had been subsequently in the possession of Lilly. It is now in the Ashmolean Museum.
death all his collections came en masse; collections formed abroad and at home, the choice of book-auctions, the pickings of chandlers' and grocers' waste-paper, everything, especially, in the shape of a MS., from early copies of Classics and Fathers to the well-nigh most recent log-books of sailors' voyages. Not a sale of MSS. occurred, apparently, in London, during his time, at which he was not an omnigenous purchaser; so that students of every subject now bury themselves in his stores with great content and profit. But history in all its branches, heraldry and genealogy, biography and topography, are his specially strong points. The printed books bequeathed by him in selection from his whole library (of which those in quarto and smaller sizes are still called by his name) amounted to between 1800 and 1900, but the MSS. to 1 By the terms of his will, dated June 2, 1752, and printed in 1755, he bequeathed all his MSS. of every kind (excepting private papers and letters) to the Chancellor, Masters, and Scholars of the University, to be placed in the Bodleian Library, or in such other place as they should deem most proper, for the use and benefit of the University, and of all other persons, properly and with leave resorting thereto with a view to the public good; and to be kept separate and apart from every other collection. With these he gave also all his books printed on vellum or silk (of which latter kind there are two or three small specimens), all his deeds and charters, and all his printed books containing any MSS. notes, together with various antiquities and miscellaneous curiosities. His MS. and printed music he bequeathed to the Music School. Of the Musical library preserved in this room, a MS. Catalogue was made a few years ago by Rev. Robert Hake, M.A., then Chaplain of New College, now Precentor of Canterbury.

2 Apropos of log-books, it may be mentioned that whereas it appears from the eighth Report of the Deputy-Keeper of the Records, p. 26, 1847, that the earliest log among the Admiralty Records is of the year 1673, there are several of about the same date and a little earlier to be found in Rawlinson's collection.

3 Among the printed books are two copies of Archbp. Parker's rare De Antiq. Eccl. Brit., 1572. One of these is the identical copy described by Strype in his Life of Parker, and which was then in the possession of Bp. Fleetwood of Ely; the other (which was given to the Library by Jos. Sanford, B.D., Balliol Coll., in 1753) was presented to Rich. Cosin by John Parker, the Archbishop's eldest son, Jan. 5, 1593. Owen, the Librarian, notes on the cover that Dr. Rawlinson tells him this copy was bought at the sale of the library of his brother, Thos. Rawlinson, by the Earl of Oxford, for £40. A collection of the original broadsides proclamations issued during the whole of the reign of Queen Elizabeth, in beautiful condition, forms a remarkable and splendid volume; the collection is upwards of 4800, besides a large number of old charters and miscellaneous unsorted deeds.

The staff of the Library being very small at the time, as well as ill-paid\(^1\), and such an accession being completely overwhelming, the officers appear to have contented themselves with duly entering complete, except that a few proclamations, of which printed copies are wanting, are supplied in MS. As far as the year 1577 they are printed by Richard Jugge, sometimes alone and sometimes in conjunction with John Cawood; thenceforward they are printed by the two Barkers, first by Christopher, and afterwards by Robert. They appear to have been collected in the reign of James I. A printed chronological table of contents is prefixed, together with a portrait of the Queen, engraved by Fr. Delaram, with six lines of verse by ‘Jo. Davies, Heref.’ At the year 1559 a leaf is inserted containing the arms of Q. Mary of Scotland quartering those of England (the assumption of which by Mary gave irreconcilable offence to Q. Eliz.), beautifully painted, with the note, ‘Sent out of Franchise, in July, 1559,’ and these lines below:

\[
\begin{align*}
\text{The armes of Marie Queene Dophines of franchise,} \\
\text{The nobilist Lady in earth for till aduance:} \\
\text{Off Scotland queene, and of Ingland also,} \\ \text{Off Ireland als, God haith providit so.} \end{align*}
\]

This leaf is one of two copies executed for Cecil and Q. Eliz. Two, probably unique, ‘red-letter’ books are also among the rarities of Rawlinson’s printed collection. The one is a Sermon on Ps. iv. 7, preached before Charles I at Oxford by Josias Howe, B.D., of Trinity College. It is printed entirely in red, and has no title. It was bought, included in a volume of miscellaneous sermons, out of Dr. Charlett’s library, by Hearne, who says in a MS. note that only thirty copies were printed. A description of it is given by Dr. Bliss in his Reliquiae Hearn., vol. ii. pp. 960–1, where Hearne’s note is printed in full. The other is a volume entitled, The Bloody Court; or, the Fatal Tribunal, being an account of the trial and execution of Charles I. The lengthy title is printed by Dr. Bliss, ubi supra. Some few of Rawlinson’s printed books came to the Library among Gough’s, in 1809.

\(^1\) The salaries being miserably insufficient, the recognised duties of the officers appear to have been simply the cataloguing the few books that were received in ordinary course, and attending upon the readers. Consequently for any other work, for arranging or cataloguing any new collections, &c, special payments were always made. A somewhat amusing instance of this occurs under the year 1722, when the Librarian craved payment for making with his own hand certain new hand-lists, &c, but was refused. However, he carried on his claim from year to year until it was admitted to the amount of £5 15s. 6d. in 1725. And as the funds were insufficient to defray in this way the extra cost of cataloguing such a collection as Rawlinson’s, hence, doubtless, came the neglect which it experienced. Such work was so clearly understood to form no part of the Librarians’ regular duties, that Rawlinson says, in a letter to Owen, Apr. 15, 1751 (MS. C. 989), ‘I think large benefactors should pay the expense of entries into the Bodleian, as their books are useless till so entered.’ the printed books, while leaving the MSS. entirely neglected. About the beginning of the present century some steps were taken towards a Catalogue, and a portion were arranged and numbered; still later, considerably more was done. But it was only on the accession of the present Librarian to the Headship, that the full extent of Rawlinson's collections was ascertained. Every corner of the Library was then thoroughly examined, and cupboard after cupboard was found filled with MSS. and papers huddled together in confusion, while, last not least, a dark hole under a staircase, explored by the present writer on hands and knees, afforded a rich 'take,' including many writings of Rawlinson's Non-juring friends. The whole number of volumes thus brought to light amounted to about 1300.

The classes into which the whole collection of MSS. is now divided are the following:—

1. Class A: 500 volumes, chiefly of English history, with a few theological books. Amongst these are the Thurloe State Papers, in sixty-seven volumes, of which all of importance were published by Birch, in seven vols. folio, in 1742. These papers were found after the Revolution concealed in the ceiling of garrets in Lincoln's Inn, which belonged to the rooms formerly occupied by Thurloe; and they still bear too evident marks of the damp to which they were there exposed. They passed through Lord Somers' and Sir Jos. Jekyll's hands into those of a bookseller, Fletcher Gyles, from whom Rawlinson obtained them in 1751, and who, as Rawlinson says, asked at first an 'immoderate price' for them. Another series is that of Miscellaneous Papers of Sam. Pepys, in twenty-five volumes, containing his correspondence, collections on Admiralty business, &c.1 These, together with many other

---

1 It was chiefly from these that the two volumes published in 1841 under the title of Life, Journals, and Correspondence of S. Pepys were compiled. Unfortunately the editor, or his copyist, appears to have been sometimes unable to read the MSS., and at other times very careless: his book therefore abounds with errors. The volumes which belonged to Pepys (including many curious dockyard account-books of the times of Henry VIII and Queen Elizabeth) were ‘redeemed from thius et odores vendentibus’. Of another acquisition Rawlinson writes thus:—

‘There was lately an auction here of Mr. Bridgeman’s books, curiosities, and MSS., who was formerly clerk of the Council to
K. James II, and register to the Ecclesiastical Commission.
Here I laid out some pence, and picked up some curiosities; the original minute-book of the High Commission, the proceedings every session with the names of those present, by which it appears that Bp. Sprat was not so innocent as he would persuade us in his letter to the Earl of Dorset to think, and that notwithstanding all his shiftings he sat to the penultim. Session of that Court;’
[Letters canvassing the nobility, gentry, justices of the peace, &c, in favour of the repeal of the Test;] ‘3 letters from the D. of Monmouth, two to the King and one to the Queen, desiring an audience in which he would give them such satisfaction, . . . .
very pathetic, and deserved at least some attention; . . .
several volumes of treaties, . . . instructions to ambassadors.
Very remarkable are those to Lord Castlemain on his going to Rome, the King’s two letters to the Pope, a third of revocation, all personal and complement, but no embassy of obedience.
Copy-books of letters, private and public, wrote by K. Charles and K. James II, from which might be collected such a fund of true following is one of the worst, as it libels the memory of a statesman who deserved better treatment: Sir R. Southwell is represented as saying in a letter to Pepys (vol. i. p. 282) that he has lost his health ‘by sitting many years at the sack-bottle,’ whereas the poor man had lost it by sitting many years ‘at the ink-bottle.’ A line or two farther on, Southwell’s occupation with ‘some care and much sorrow,’ is changed into ‘love, care and much sorrow.’ Certain Novelles, or newspapers, which
Mr. Hill sends to Pepys are explained (vol. ii. p. 135) to have been the Novella of Justinian! Throughout the book proper names are frequently made to become anything but proper to their owners.

1 Letter from Rawlinson to T. Rawlins, Jan. 25. 1748; Ballard MS. ii. 115.
2 The same volume (now A. 139b) also contains Monmouth’s acknowledgment, written and signed by himself on the day of his execution, that Charles II had declared that he was never married to his mother; witnessed by Bishops Turner and Ken, together with Tenison and Hooper. This is now exhibited in the glass case at the entrance to the Library.
tho' secret history, that the prize is not to be valued, and will, I hope, be a standing monument of great events, and preserved in Bodley's repository, with the papers of Bp. Turner and other great men at and since the year 1688.

There are also some papers in this class and in Class C which belonged to Archbp. Wake, about which Rawlinson writes, on June 24, 1741:

'My agent last week met with some papers of Archbp. Wake at a chandler's shop; this is unpardonable in his executors, as all his MSS. were left to Christ Church. But quære whether these did not fall into some servant's hands who was ordered to burn them, and Mr. Martin Folkes ought to have seen that done. They fell into the curate's hands of St. George, Bloomsbury.'

2. Class B numbers 520 volumes nominally, but really, including double numbers, 534. They comprise heraldry and genealogy (including MSS. of Sir Richard and Sir Thos. St. George, W. Wyrley, Guilielm, Ryley, Glover, Le Neve, and other heralds) English and Irish history and topography, including several monastic chartularies. Among the genealogical MSS. is a remarkable collection of pedigrees, in twelve volumes, which the present writer ascertained to have been compiled by Thomas Wilkinson, Vicar of Laurence Waltham, Berks, between about 1647 and 1681. They are arranged alphabetically, as far as the letter P in tolerable order and regularity, but thenceforward only in a rough and incomplete state. Unfortunately the handwriting is far from clear, and the ink has often made it worse. Among the volumes relating to Essex, Norfolk, Suffolk, &c., are twelve or thirteen which belonged to William Holman, a voluminous collector for the first-mentioned county, who incorporated the gatherings of Rev. John Ousley and Thos. Jekyll. Morant, the historian of Essex, obtained the larger portion of Holman's books; some are in the British Museum; and the remainder ('the refuse,' says Morant) were bought by Rawlinson in 1752 for £10. Besides the above-mentioned volumes, there are a large number of Holman's MSS. which are kept distinct, and which have been recently bound in fourteen folio volumes, eleven quarto, and five octavo. Under London are some nineteen or twenty volumes of Diocesan papers which belonged to Bp. John Robinson. They formed (with one volume in Class A and several in Class C) a mass which are described by Rawlinson, as follows:

1 In his delight at his new purchase, Rawlinson seems to have exaggerated the interest of these volumes.

2 Letter to T. Rawlins, Feb. 24, 1741: Ballard MS. ii. 78.

3 To the same: Ibid. 59.

'I lately rescued from the grocers, chANDlers, &c. a parcel of papers once the property of Compton and Robinson, successively Bps. of London. Amongst those of the first were original subscription and visitation books, letters and conferences during the apprehensions of Popery amongst the clergy of this diocese, remarkable intelligenCes relating to Burnet and the Orange Court in Holland in those extraordinary times before 1688, minutes of the proceedings of the Commissioners for the Propagation of the Gospel, and a great variety of other papers. Amongst those of Bp. Robinson, numbers of originals relating to the transactions at the treaty of Utrecht, copies of his own letters to Lord Bolingbroke, and originals from Lord Bolingbroke, Lord Oxford, Electress and Elector of Hanover, Ormonde, Strafford, Prior, &c.; letters from the Scots deprived Bishops to Compton, and variety of State papers. They belonged to one Mr. [Anth.] Gibbon, lately dead, who was private secretary to both the afore-mentioned prelates.'

Under Bucks are Rawlinson's own collections for a history of Eton College, and under Middlesex and Oxon. his parochial collections for those counties. The Irish MSS. include many of great antiquity and value which formerly belonged to Sir James Ware, e.g. Tigernach's Annals, Annals of Ulster, Lives of Saints,

1 Gough, Brît. Topogr. i. 370, 345.
2 Letter, June 24, 1741; Ballard MS. ii. 59.
3 Including some letters from Ken while Chaplain to Princess Mary. These papers of Compton are in class C.
Dublin Chartularies, Arms of Irish families, Irish poems, &c. Among them is the often noticed Life of St. Columba by Magnus O'Donnell, written in 1532, which was bought by Rawlinson at the Chandos sale for twenty-three shillings.

Of these two classes a Catalogue, in one volume quarto, was printed in 1862, which was compiled by the writer of this volume. A full index to the contents of all the MSS. has been made, which remains at present unprinted, but may possibly at some time appear in conjunction with a volume describing the contents of the succeeding class.

3. Class C comprehends 989 MSS. of very miscellaneous character, but chiefly consisting of law, history and theology, with a few medical works. Among the theological portion are papers of John Dury, the zealous labourer for union amongst Protestants in the time of Charles I, papers of Bedell and Usher, some volumes of John Lewis of Margate, and some interesting Service-books of English use, including a Pontifical given to Salisbury Cathedral by Bp. Roger de Martivale between 1315-1329, and an early Oseney book. Several volumes consist of papers of Dr. Chamberlaine (author of Notitia Anglica) and Mr. Henry Newman, secretaries of the Societies for the Propagation of the Gospel, and Promoting Christian Knowledge, which, Rawlinson mentions in a letter, dated April 28, 1744, (Ballard MS. ii.) that he had then recently purchased. Some seventeen or eighteen volumes came from the library of Bp. Turner of Ely (together with others in the classes called Miscellaneous and Letters), containing papers of himself and his brother, Dr. Thomas Turner, Dean of Canterbury. These were obtained by Rawlinson in 1742, who in them became master, as he says, of a considerable treasure.

1 For the description of the contents of three of the Irish volumes, the author was indebted to an experienced Irish scholar, Standish Hayes O'Grady, Esq.

2 A volume of collections by him relating to the early versions of the Bible was bought in 1858 for five guineas.
for ten guineas. Early English poets are represented by Lydgate, Rolle of Hampole, William of Nasyngton, and others; and one volume contains a few Welsh verses. A catalogue exists in MS. The volumes relating to English history in classes A and C are noticed in the return printed in the Record Commission Report for 1800, pp. 348–353.

4. The class entitled Miscellaneous numbers about 1400 volumes, and includes the greater part of those which were discovered in 1861. They are so entirely miscellaneous that it is impossible to give in a few lines a real idea of their nature. History, travels, biography, and religious controversy largely prevail. There are papers of Sir Thos. Browne, Dr. Dee, Maittaire, Peter Le Neve, Ashmole, John Dunton, and Bagford, with a very large mass of Hearniana. Of the Non-jurors, there are papers of Grascome, Gandy, Spinckes, Hickes, Fitzwilliams, Howell, and Dean Granville. Some nine or ten volumes are occupied with the accounts of the Royal Surveyor of Works from 1532 to 1545. The Churchwardens’ accounts of Sutterton, Lincolnshire, from 1493 to 1536, and of St. Peter’s, Cornhill, from 1664 to 1689, are also found here. There is a large series of Italian MSS. (amongst other foreign books, chiefly French) which bear on English history, as containing copies of reports made to Rome by Papal agents and to Venice by ambassadors, together with the proceedings at many conclaves. These were bought by Rawlinson at Sir Jos. Jekyll’s sale of the Somers’ MSS. in 1739, for £3 15s. There is also a

---

1 Ballard MS. ii. 87.
2 One curious volume is described by Sir F. Madden in his preface to Syr Gawyna, printed by the Roxburghie Club in 1839.
3 With relation to these Rawlinson says, in a letter dated Feb. 25, 1736–7, that he had bought, about two years since, some of Ashmole’s papers from his heirs, including some of Dugdale’s (Ballard MS. ii. 11).
4 For Parish Registers, see under 1821.
5 Two MS. volumes of the Relations of Venetian Residents in various countries were given to the Library by Will. Gent, in 1600, and Sir Rich. Spencer, in 1603.
mass of papers of J. J. Zamboni, Venetian Resident in England, and a friend of Maittaire. A considerable number of autograph signatures, barbarously cut out from various books, by Thomas Rawlinson, were found in loose papers; these have now been mounted and bound in two volumes. There are not, however, many of interest among them, except several of Ben Jonson.

5. In Letters there are upwards of 100 volumes, comprising all the multifarious correspondence of Hearne with Anstis, Bagford, Baker, Barnes, Dodwell, Smith, &c, the correspondence of Rawlinson, Dr. Thomas Turner, and Bishop Francis Turner, Philip Lord Wharton, and Sir Edm. Warcupp. One volume contains a few letters by Dryden, Pope, Edw. Young, &c. There is also a series of letters in three vols. relating to Dr. John Polyander, of Kerckhoven, Professor of Divinity at Leyden, and eight or nine volumes of Vossius' correspondence, being the originals from which the folio volume published at London in 1691 was printed.

6. The class of Poetry contains 221 volumes, including Chaucer, Hoccleve, Lydgate, Capgrave (Life of St. Catherine), and Rolle of Hampole, with Piers Plowman and the Romance of Parthenope of Blois (both imperfect). The majority are miscellaneous poems and plays of the seventeenth century. One volume, containing the words of anthems with the composers' names, is supposed to be the Chapel-book used by Charles I.

Of the three last-mentioned classes, a brief MS. list was drawn up with great neatness and accuracy by Dr. Bliss, in 1812 (reaching in the case of the Miscell. only as far as No. 407); an index, in continuation, to all the later additions is now in process of formation.

7. Of Sermons there are about 200 volumes; many of which are by Non-jurors, including three by Rawlinson himself. Ten volumes are by Dan. Price, Dean of St. Asaph, 1696-1706; and one volume is said to contain unpublished sermons by Leighton, apparently from notes taken by some auditor at the time of delivery. These have been copied for publication in a proposed new edition (under the care of Rev. W. West, of Nairn, N.B.) of Leighton’s whole works.

8. A selection of Biblical and Classical MSS., with a few others, amounting to 199, are placed in the case marked ‘Auctarium,’ G. Amongst these are a few Greek volumes, with critical Adversaria of Maittaire, Josh. Lasher, and J. G. Grævius. Early copies of Statius, Ovid, Virgil, &c. form part of the classics; while among the Biblical MSS. is a grand eighth-century copy (written in rounded minuscules, in the same style as the Rushworth book) of the Gospels of St. Luke and St. John, and a beautiful eleventh-century Psalter with the commentary of St. Bruno. One other fine book is a Psalter written for Ch. Ch. Cathedral, Dublin, by the care of Stephen Derby, Prior, about A.D. 1360-80, with remarkable miniatures illustrating Psalms xxxix, liii, lxix, lxxxi, and xcvi.

9. Of Missals, Horæ, and other Service-books, there are (besides those which are scattered in Classes C and G Auct.) about 130. These (most of which are of French origin, bought out of the library of Nic. Jos. Foucault, of Flemish, or of Italian) are now incorporated with a large collection of Liturgical books, which are called Canon. Liturg., from their having formed part of the Canonici collection purchased in 1818.

10. A small collection of Statutes, comprising sixty-five volumes, is kept distinct. They consist of the Statutes of various Colleges at Oxford and Cambridge, of the Cathedrals of Lichfield, Hereford, Worcester, Chester, Manchester, Canterbury, Exeter, and the Abbey of Westminster; of the Order of the Garter (various copies); of Hospitals at Croydon, Chipping-Barnet, and Chichester; of the Gresham Charities, together with the Charters of London and Bristol; Statutes made by the Chapter of Paris for the Church of the Holy Sepulchre there in 1421, and an eighteenth-century transcript of the Statutes of the College at Bayeux. But the volume of most interest in this class is the rare printed volume of the Statutes of Thame School, issued in 1575. Of this, only five other copies are known, one kept at the School itself, a second in the custody of the Warden of New College (the Visitor of the School), a third in the Royal Library, Brit. Mus., and the fourth and fifth, both on vellum, in the possession of the Earl of Abingdon and in the Grenville Library, Brit. Mus. Rawlinson's copy, which wants the title, has in it the book-plate of John, Duke of Newcastle.

1 From this library Rawlinson also obtained some French editions of the Horæ, printed on vellum.

11. Of the MSS. of Dr. Thomas Smith, the Non-juror, of Magd. Coll., Oxford, there are 139 volumes, which (with the exception of a few bequeathed by Smith himself) came into Rawlinson's hands together with the rest of Hearne's collections. They are noticed above, under the year 1735.

12. Besides the multitude of books, scattered throughout every class of Rawlinson's library, which belonged to Hearne or were written by him, there are about 150 small duodecimo volumes of Hearne's daily diary and note-books, commencing in July, 1705, and ending on June 4, 1735, the last actual entry being on June 1, and his decease occurring on June 10. The character of this diary is well known from the two volumes of Extracts published by Dr. Bliss in 1857, with the title, Reliquiae Heurniana. But it must not be supposed that these volumes comprehend all that deserves publication; the diary throughout is full of like curious personal history and anecdote, antiquarian gleanings and amusing gossip, mixed, of course, with a good deal of occasional acrimony against those with whom Hearne came in collision either from differences in academic or literary matters, or from their being friends of the 'Elector of Hanover.' There is scarcely a subject falling within its writer's scope of observation on which this Diary may not be consulted; and as it is written in his usual plain and neat hand, with an index to each volume, it is fortunately easy for reference. Hearne bequeathed all his MSS., and books with MSS. notes, to Mr. William Bedford, son of the well-known bishop among the Non-jurors, Hilkiah Bedford; the legatee died on July 11, 1747, and Rawlinson bought them of his widow for £105. Hence it was that they came finally to the place where Hearne would himself have rejoiced to see them deposited. The autobiographical sketch of Hearne's own life, which Huddesford published in 1772, in conjunction with the lives of Leland and Wood, is preserved among the Miscellaneous MSS. Of this Rawlinson says, in a letter dated June 19, 1740: 'Tom's own life was so low and poor a performance that I recommended it to Bedford to burn.' On account, probably, of the numerous reflections which the Diary contained on living persons, Rawlinson ordered in his bequest that it should not be open to inspection until after the lapse of seven years. He laid also the same restraint upon the use of his own papers noticed in the next paragraph.

13. Large collections were made by Rawlinson for a continuation of Wood's Athenae Oxon. These contain much valuable biographical information, derived in very many cases from the actual information of the persons noticed, letters from many of whom are inserted. There are, in all, twenty-five volumes, folio and quarto; among the folios there are two series of notices arranged alphabetically, and one volume (also alphabetical) of notices of Cambridge men admitted ad eundem; the quartos contain 1331 notices, numbered but not arranged in any other order, with one general alphabetical index. These collections, together with Hearne’s Diaries, and Rawlinson’s Non-jurors’ Papers, and notes of his own Travels, were included in a fourth and last codicil, dated Feb. 14, 1755, which directed that all these papers should be kept locked up during a period of seven years. By the same codicil also were conveyed numerous engravings by Vertue, portraits of Englishmen, some paintings, and a collection of Roman, Persian, Italian, and English medals. Some of the Italian medals, particularly a fine set in copper of the members of the House of Medici, are now exhibited in a case in the Picture Gallery. By a codicil of June 17, 1752, Rawlinson had previously bequeathed a series of medals of Popes, of which he remarks, ‘as they are, I take them to be one of the most complete collections now in Europe;’ together with twenty shillings per annum for enlarging and continuing the set.

1 Ballard MS. ii. 41.

14. Finally (as regards MSS.), Rawlinson left a mass of ancient charters, five hundred of which were catalogued by Mr. Coxe some years ago, and of vellum deeds and documents of all kinds, chiefly of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. He left, also, all the copper-plates containing engravings of some of his ancient documents and other curiosities, as well as a large number of impressions from these plates. Many of these impressions were sold at the sale of Bodleian duplicates in 1862. The copper-plates were added to his bequest by a second codicil, dated July 25, 1754, in which he desired that impressions should be taken from them, to be sold in one volume for the use and benefit of the University.

1 The clock, still in use in the Library, made by Robinson in Gracechurch Street, was one of the items comprised in this codicil, where it is described as a ‘table clock,’ then in the custody of Mr. John King, a bookseller, in Moorfields.

2 These were bought, ‘very cheap,’ at Mrs. Kenna’s sale, Feb. 24, 1755, by a dealer named Angel Carmey, who sold them to Rawlinson for £10 10s. Carmey’s letter conveying his offer of sale is preserved in Rawlinson’s copy of the sale catalogue.

3 It does not appear, however, that this sum was ever paid.
A last item in Rawlinson's miscellaneous gifts (besides various bas-reliefs, figures, a Jewish vessel, Muscovite cup, &c.) was a large collection of matrices of ancient conventual and personal seals, chiefly foreign; together with impressions of seals, ancient and modern, in metal and wax, 'most of which,' it is said in the Will (p. 4), 'were of the collection of Mr. Charles Christian, the celebrated seal engraver.' The wax impressions are now exhibited in the Picture Gallery.

Distinct from Rawlinson's other printed books is a curious series of Almanacs, in 175 volumes, extending from 1607 to 1747, which were sent to the Library in 1752. Some volumes in continuation, from 1747 to 1768, were given by Sir Rob. H. Inglis, Bart., in 1846. Another series, between 1571 and 1663, is in the Ashmole collection.

By his second codicil, of July 25, 1754, Rawlinson bequeathed a fee-farm rent of £4 per annum to the Under-librarian, in consideration of his taking charge of the MSS., but clogged with the strange conditions that he should not be a doctor in any faculty, married, or in Holy Orders. The receipt of this sum is entered in the Accounts for 1756, but in no subsequent year.

The following is an alphabetical list of the principal libraries

---

1 A curious, and probably unique, little 'Almanacke for XII yere, after the latytude of Oxenforde,' printed in 48° (measuring two and a-half inches by one and three-quarters), by Wynkyn de Worde, 'in the fleetestrete,' in 1508, was presented by David Laing, LL.D., the eminent Librarian to the Writers to the Signet, Edinburgh, in 1842. The Library also possesses two copies of a sheet Almanack, by Simon Heuringius, for 1551, printed by John Turck, at London; and other almanacs for 1564, 1567, and 1569. A volume containing five almanacs for the year 1589 was bought in 1857.

2 With the same perverse eccentricity he ordered that the recipients of his endowments for the Keepership of the Ashmolean Museum and the Professorship of Anglo-Saxon, should be unmarried (in the former case only M.A. or B.C.L.), not a native of Scotland, Ireland, or the Plantations, nor a son of such native, nor, in the case of the Museum, even educated in Scotland, and not a member of either the Royal Society or the Society of Antiquaries.
From June 1755: MSS. were collected with the dues (so far as ascertainable) to which these accounts were dispensed:

Brian John Senior, 1750.
Brothers Winch. 1750-60, 1759-60.
James Single, 1751.
James Henry, 1752.

Through James.

Coxall Walker, 1753.
Compeau击, 1754.
Dowland No. 1, 1755.
James Compeau, 1755.
Giles Samuel, 1756.
George Rice, of Michigan.

Through Harrison.

Hadley Musgrave, 1757.

Henry Thomas, 1747.
Robert Williams, 1754.
Tate Sir Joseph, 1759.
Le Neve Peter, 1759.
Maurice Michael, 1753.

Hunt Edward, M.D., 1754-5.
Hudson Ten, 1749.
Hunt Senior, 1743-45.
Pepe Samuel, 1751.
Pepe Thomas, 1752.
Pepe Henry, 1753.

Through Henry.

Lawrence Thomas, 1734.
Lawrence Henry, 1755.
St. George Sir Thomas.
Speake Sir Henry.

Speake Rev. Nathan, 1727.
Tanner Henry, 1726.
Tanner Archibald, Through Harrison.

White Archibald, 1756.
Winstan William.

On July 15, a bequest of printed books and MSS. was received from Rev. Richard Furney, M.A., Archdeacon of Surrey, who had been schoolmaster at Gloucester, 1743-1744, and who died in 1753, by the hands of the Rev. John Noel, of Oriel College. The printed books (nineteen in all) consisted almost entirely of early editions of classics. The MSS. (six folio volumes) are thus described in a list made by the Librarian, Humphrey Owen, at the time of their receipt:

1 Autobiographical memoirs by Foucrait, extending to 1719, were published under the editorship of F. Banter, 4th Part, 1561, in the French Government series of Documents medime sur l'Histoire de France. The editor remarks in the preface (p. sii.), 'On ignore en quelles mains la bibliothèque de Foucrait passe après sa mort (1781). Le P. Le Long nous apprend seulement qu'elle fut vendue, et probablement dispersée.'

'1, 2, 3 and 4 contain collections relating to the history and antiquities of the city, church and county of Gloucester. 5, 6, a fair copy, seemingly prepared for the press, of the history and antiquities of the said city, church and county, by the Arch-deacon himself, or some friend of his from whom these papers came into his hands.'

The gift comprised also two ancient brass seals, and eighteen original deeds, amongst which is the original confirmation charter granted to Gloucester Abbey, by Burgred King of Mercia, in 862. This remarkable deed (which is not printed in Kemble's Codex) is in admirable preservation, is written in seventeen lines, with five lines containing seventeen signatures, and measures sixteen inches in width and ten and one-third in length. There are also original grants to the abbey from Hen. II and Stephen, and a confirmation, 29 Edw. I, of Magna Charta, which has a magnificent impression of the beautiful great seal. The deeds are noticed in the Report on the Public Records for 1800, p. 354.

By the death on Sept. 5, 1754, of James St. Amand, Esq.¹ (formerly of Lincoln College), a bequest of books, MSS., coins, &c. which had been made by a will dated Nov. 9, 1749, accrued to the Library, being received in the year 1755. The books consist chiefly of the then modern editions of the classics, and of the writings of modern Latin scholars; such of them as the Library

¹ A record of his birth and baptism is entered in a family register kept by his father on the fly-leaves of a splendid copy of the folio Prayer-Book of 1662. He was the second son; born in Covent Garden, Apr. 7, 1687; bapt. Apr. 21, by Dr. Patrick, the sponsors being Major-Gen. Werden, Sir Peter Apsley and the Countess of Bath. Prince George of Denmark was one of the sponsors to his elder brother, George. He had also a sister, Martha.
ardour, became well known and highly esteemed amongst all of like pursuits. At the age of forty-four he was appointed one of the eight clerks of Magdalen College, being matriculated Dec. 15, 1750, but never took any degree. He bequeathed to the College Library some of his books which were there wanting. The fullest account of him will be found in vol. ii. of A Register of St. Mary Magd. College, by J. R. Bloxam, D.D., pp. 95-102, 1857. Some letters from him are printed in Nichols' Lit. Hist. iv. 206-226.

The very valuable MS. of the letters of Gilbert Foliot, Bishop of London (which are of great importance for the illustration of the history of Thomas à Becket), now numbered E. Musae 247, was given by Sir Thomas Cave, Bart. It is described in the Benefaction Book as 'liber rarissimus; per totam Angliam unum hoc tantum modo exstat exemplar.' The letters were first printed by Dr. Giles, together with the Lives of Becket, in his series of Patriae Ecclesiae Anglicana, in 1845.

A.D. 1756.

Dr. Samuel Johnson presented the account of Zachariah Williams' attempt to ascertain the longitude at sea, which he had published under Williams' name in the preceding year; and, as Warton noted¹, he entered it with his own hand in the Library Catalogue. The entry is still to be seen, with a memorandum of its being in Johnson's hand, in an interleaved, and now disused, copy of the Catalogue of 1738.

A.D. 1759.

Above forty Syriac, Greek and Arabic MSS. are recorded in the Registers to have been presented by Henry Dawkins, Esq., of Standlynch, Wilts, who had collected them while travelling in the East with Robert Wood, whose works on Baalbec and Palmyra he presented at the same time. There are now sixty MSS. in Syriac alone which pass under the name of Dawkins, some of which are of great age and value. They are described in Dr. R. Payne Smith's Catalogue of the Syriac MSS. Mr. Dawkins died in London, June 19, 1814, aged eighty-six.

Swedenborg's Arcana Caelestia, published anonymously, in 8 vols. were sent 'by the author, unknown.' The same donor, still unknown, sent in 1766 Selecti Dionys. Halicarn. tractatus.

In this year and in 1761 published music began to be received from Stationers' Hall, and to be entered in the Register. It remained piled up in cupboards until about twenty-three years ago, when it was all disinterred and carefully arranged by Rev. H. E. Havergal, M.A., then Chaplain of New Coll. and Ch. Ch., and an assistant in the Library (now Vicar of Cople, Beds.), and bound in some 300 or 400 volumes. Since that time two further series of musical volumes have been arranged and bound.

A meagre list of the pictures, &c, in the Picture Gallery and Library was printed by the Janitor (or Under-janitor), N. Bull, and 'sold by him at the Picture Gallery.' It fills twelve duodecimo pages. A new edition, 'with additions and amendments,' including the pictures in the Ashmolean Museum, was issued by him in 1762, in sixteen octavo pages. This was, as it seems, the first list that had been issued since Hearne printed his original Catalogue in his Letter containing an Account of some Antiquities between Windsor and Oxford. A list, equally meagre with Bull's, was published by W. Cowderoy, Janitor, in 1806. He was succeeded in office (before 1825) by —— Lenthall; on whom followed the present Janitor, J. Norris, appointed in 1835. By him a new Catalogue, enlarged with biographical notices, was issued, filling sixty pages; which was reissued, with a few alterations, in 1847.
when such of the pictures as were not portraits had been removed to the new Randolph Gallery. As all the portraits were a few years ago distinctly labelled, but few copies of the Catalogue have, consequently, been since sold, and no new edition has appeared.

A.D. 1760.

The MSS. of the eminent antiquary, Browne Willis, who died on Feb. 5, in this year, came to the Library by his bequest. They were received from his executor, Dr. Eyre, on April 24. There are altogether fifty-nine volumes in folio, forty-eight in quarto, and five in octavo, consisting chiefly of Willis' own collections for his various works, with much correspondence intermingled and a few older historical papers. There is much of value for general ecclesiastical topography and biography, besides his large collections for the county of Bucks, and special volumes relating to the four Welsh Cathedrals. He desired in his will that the books should be placed in the Picture Gallery, 'next to those of my friend Bishop Tanner;' both collections have since been removed to a room on the floor below, but the presses which contain them still adjoin each other. Many of his letters are to be found among Ballard's and Rawlinson's papers, and show throughout both the warm interest which he took in ecclesiastical renovation and religious work generally, but particularly in the state of the Church in Wales, and the continual efforts which he made to rouse slothful and negligent dignitaries to a sense of their duties and responsibilities. The restoration of the ruined and desolate Cathedral at Llandaff was an object especially dear to him. By his will, which was dated Dec. 20, 1741, he bequeathed to the University, besides his MSS., all his numerous silver, brass, copper and pewter coins, and also his gold coins, if purchased at the rate of £4 per oz., as the best return he could make for the many favours he acknowledged to have been conferred on him and on his grandfather, Dr. Thomas Willis, Professor of Natural Philosophy. This latter provision of his will was at once carried into execution; in the following year the University purchased one hundred and sixty-seven gold coins for £150 at £4 4s. per oz., and two more in 1743 for £8 5s. His other coins were given by him in the years 1739, 1740, 1741, 1747 and 1750; and by a codicil to his will dated Feb. 5, 1742, he desired that the whole collection should be annually visited on the Feast of St. Frideswide (Oct. 19), which day he had himself been wont annually to celebrate in Oxford. His first gift to the Library was in the year 1720, when he gave ten valuable MSS., chiefly historical (now placed among the general Bodley Series), together with his grandfather's portrait.

A bequest of £70, towards the purchase of an orrery, was received from Rev. Jos. Parsons, M.A., of Merton College.

A.D. 1761.

Kennicott's collations of Hebrew Biblical MSS., made during the years 1759-60, were received from him on Dec. 17, in this year, according to an entry in the Register. But all his MSS., collations, correspondence, and miscellaneous books (including one in Zend, upon cloth), were subsequently deposited in the Radcliffe Library, whence they were removed, in 1862, together with the other contents of that collection, to the place of their present deposit, the New Museum.

A.D. 1762.

The west, or Selden, end of the Library was re-floored at a cost of £66. Unchaining of those books which hitherto, on account of their accessibility to all comers, were fastened to their shelves, appears to have been commenced in this year.

A.D. 1763.

The Janitor, Rev. John Bilstone, M.A., was deprived of his office by Dr. Owen, the Librarian, on account of his neglecting to perform his duties in person. An action for arrears of salary was subsequently brought by Bilstone against Owen. He died Feb. 13, 1767, at which time he held three livings, besides his Chaplaincy of All Souls' College.

A.D. 1764.

The Editio princeps of Homer, Florence, 1488, was bought for £6 6s.

A.D. 1768.

H. Owen, the Librarian, and Principal of Jesus College, died in March of this year, and was buried in his College Chapel. In his room was elected the Rev. John Price, B.D., of Jesus College, 'after a severe contest with Mr. Cleaver, of Brasenose, afterwards head of that College and Bishop of St. Asaph, who used to say that he was indebted to Mr. Price for his mitre, for he had obtained the Bodleian he should have there continued, instead of becoming tutor in a noble family, and so placed in the road to advancement. In this election the votes were equal, and Mr. Price, being senior, was nominated by the Vice-Chancellor.' Price appears to have been employed in the Library as early as the year 1760, when a payment of £8 8s. was made to him; in 1766 he signs, together with Owen and Thomas Parker, an account of books received from Stationers' Hall.

1 'See papers in Files, 1563; Archiv.' (MS. note in Dr. P. Bliss' Collectanea.)
A.D. 1770.

The Library was largely enriched with books which were then modern, in which it appears to have been very deficient, by the legacy of the library of Rev. Charles Godwyn, M.A., Fellow of Balliol College. The collection, which is still in the main kept undivided (although a few folio and quarto volumes are placed in the general class marked Ars.), consists chiefly of works in English and general history, civil and ecclesiastical, published in the eighteenth century, and includes besides the later Benedictine editions of the Fathers. There is also a series of theological and literary pamphlets; to which have been added of late years upwards of 2400 volumes, of all dates and on all subjects, which are now all alike numbered, for convenience sake, in connection with Godwyn's own. The residue of his property, after payment of all claims and bequests, formed a further portion of his legacy; and the interest upon £1050 which accrued from this source, still forms part of the annual income of the Library.

A.D. 1771.

A payment of £2 12s. 6d. was made in this year (or rather, at the close of 1770) to a glass-painter, named Brooks, for one of the coats of arms in the great east window.

A.D. 1775.

Twenty-four Oriental MSS. and bundles of papers which had been found in the study of Rev. Dr. Thos. Hunt, Reg. Prof. of Hebrew, who died in the preceding year, were given by various persons.

A.D. 1776.

Lord North, the Chancellor of the University, presented to the Library the observations made by Dr. James Bradley, while Astro-
These notes were given to me by Mr. James Peach, son-in-law to Dr. Bradley, while a suit was pending between the Board of Longitude on behalf of the Crown and Mr. Peach respecting his right to their possession. The suit was not then first made in 1765, on the ground that they were the papers drawn up by Bradley in discharge of his private and official duties, but the executor. Mr. James Peach refused to resign them except for some valuable consideration. But after his death, his son, Mr. John Peach, who married Sir Bradley's daughter, presented them to Lord North, with the understanding that the suit should go to the University on condition that they should be forthwith printed. They were consequently immediately put into the hands of Dr. Hornsby, the Savilian Professor of Astronomy, for publication; but the work progressed very slowly, in consequence of his illness, and a correspondence ensued between the Board of Longitude, the Royal Society, and the University, which was printed by the Board, together with a statement of the whole case and of the steps taken by them for the recovery of the papers, in 1795. Several letters from Sir Joseph Banks, as President of the Royal Society, to Price the Librarian, in 1785, on the slow progress of the work, are preserved in a volume of MS. Letters to Librarians, recently bound up by Mr. Core. The first volume at length appeared in 1798, in folio, and the second, edited by Prof. A. Robertson, in 1805, with an appendix of observations made by Bradley's successor, Rev. Nath. Bliss, and his assistant, Mr. Charles Green, to March, 1765, which had been purchased by the Board of Longitude, and were presented by them to the University, in March, 1804. Some further remains of Dr. Bradley were, after Dr. Hornsby's death, found among the papers of the latter, and these (having been restored to the University by his family, on application, about 1829) were published in 1831, under the editorship of Prof. S. P. Rigaud, in one vol. quarto, entitled Miscellaneous Works and Correspondence of Rev. J. Bradley. In 1861, a fresh application for the return of the Observations was made to the University, by Mr. Airy, the Astronomer Royal, on the ground that they were the only volumes wanting in the series preserved at Greenwich, and that they were frequently needed there for reference. By a vote of Convocation, on May 2, this application was acceded to, and thirteen volumes of Observations were returned to, what was certainly their legitimate place of deposit. Some miscellaneous papers, making about thirty parcels, still remain in the Library.

A.D. 1778.

Carte's MSS. See 1753.

A.D. 1780.

On Jan. 22, a Statute was passed which imposed an annual fee of four shillings¹ on all persons entitled to read in the Library and all who had exceeded four years from matriculation, as well as assigned to the Library a share of the matriculation fees. The preamble of the Statute alleges that the funds of the Library were so insufficient for their purpose that of works of importance daily published throughout the world 'vix unus et alter publicis sumptibus adscribi possit.' The Statute also provided for the holding of regular meetings by the Curators, and the issuing of an annual Catalogue of the books purchased during the year, with their prices, together with a statement of accounts. The ¹ By the Statute passed in 1813, and by that on Fees passed in 1855, an annual payment of eight shillings was ordered to be made to the Library out of the total sum (now £1 6s.) paid by each graduate whose name is on the University Books. But these individual fees, varying with the numbers on the Books, were consolidated, in 1861, in one fixed annual sum, from the University Chest, of £2800.

annals of the

A paper in behalf of the proposal was circulated among Members of Convocation. upon a copy of which, preserved by Dr. Bliss with the rest of the annual Catalogues, the latter has noted that it was written by Sir William Scott, afterwards Lord Somerv.

The exquisite portrait of Sir Kenelm Digby, supposed to be in the Gallery, and having recently been cleaned and covered with the glass, appears once more in all the freshness of its original tincture.

The Sub-librarian at this time was John Walters, an undergraduate Scholar of Jesus College. He published in this year a small volume of poems written before the age of nineteen), the chief portion of which consists of a description of the Library, written with a warm description of his subject, and by no means wanting to poetic feeling. It numbers 1188 lines, and is illustrated with some well-selected notes. In 1782, when B.A. and Fellow of his College, he published Specimens of Welsh Poetry to August 1780, with some Original Pieces and Notes. He took Note by Dr. Bliss and Ms. Collectanea, bequeathed by him to Rev. H. O. O. E.

A portrait of Sir Kenelm, which hangs in the Library, was given, in 1692, by Mr. William Pate, a bookseller of London. To this Mr. Pate, Thos. Brown, in 1748, as his nearest friend, his translation from the French of Memoirs of Queen of the Courts and Councils of Spain.
the degree of M.A. in 1784, and died in 1791. We learn from a MS. note in a copy of his Poems, presented to the Library by the present Principal of Jesus College, that he was the son of John Walters, Rector of Llandough (author of a Welsh Dictionary, 1794), by Hannah his wife, and that he was baptized there, July 9, 1760.

A.D. 1785.

George III and Queen Charlotte visited the Library, from Nuneham, on Oct. 13. Price, the Librarian, was in attendance, and kissed hands.

Several Assistants, whose names are not perpetuated in the Library records, are found perpetuated by the inscriptions written by successive generations on the old oak staircases which run from their studies to the galleries above. In June of this year, Thomas Whiting, of Jesus College (B.A. also in this year), does in this way transmit the memory of his service to posterity. E. Thomas (qu. Evan Thomas, of All Souls' College, B.A., 1793?) does the same in 1790.

A.D. 1787.

On May 31, the Reader in Chemistry, Thomas Beddoes, M.D., of Pembroke College, issued a printed Memorial to the Curators 'concerning the state of the Bodleian Library, and the conduct of the Principal Librarian.' The utmost laxity appears from this statement to have prevailed with regard to attendance, and to the hours of opening the Library; the Librarian was always absent on Saturdays and Mondays, as on those days he was occupied in journeys to and from a curacy eleven miles distant, which he held together with a living more remote; and the Library which should

1 Nichols' Lit. Anec. viii. 122.
then in summer have been opened at eight was found unopened between nine and ten, and unopened also after University sermons. The Librarian is charged besides with having discouraged readers by neglect and incivility, with being very careless in regard to the value and condition of books purchased by the Library\(^1\), and with having but little knowledge of foreign publications. An anecdote is related (amongst others) of his lending Cook's Voyages, which had been presented by King Geo. III, to the Rector of Lincoln College, and telling him that the longer he kept it the better, saying 'for if it was known to be in the Library, he (Mr. Price) should be perpetually plagued with enquiries after it'.\(^2\) In consequence of these complaints, the Curators, in 1788, prepared on their part a new form of Statute, while the Heads of Houses prepared another. This separate action led to a paper war between the two bodies, in which the Regius Professors of Divinity, Law, Medicine, one Hebrew and Greek, (Randolph, Vansittart, Vivian, Blayney and Jackson) appeared on the Curators' side of the question, and, as the Hebdomadal Board persisted in pressing their own scheme, they at length (with the exception of Blayney) adopted the strong step on the day when the rival plan was proposed in Convocation on (June 23, 1788), of formally protesting before a notary public against this violation of their privileges. The consequence was that the Statute was withdrawn, and the proposal for a new code abandoned by both parties. The chief points of difference were, that the Curators objected to the proposal being put forward as 'cum consensu Curatorum' instead of 'ex relatione Curatorum,' to the increase of the Librarian's stipend to £150, to the appointment of two Sub-librarians instead of one, and to the leaving the appoint-

---

\(^1\) Among other instances the purchase (in 1784) of Sir John Hill's Vegetable System, at the cost of £140, is mentioned.

\(^2\) It appears incidentally, from this pamphlet, that three o'clock was the dinner-hour at almost every College at that time.
ment of these in the hands of the Librarian (in accordance with Bodley's own Statute) instead of assigning it to the Curators.

Eleven Arabic and Persian MSS. were given by Turner Camac, Esq., co. Down.

A first part of a Catalogue of the Oriental MSS., comprehending those in Hebrew, Chaldee, Syriac, Æthiopic, Arabic, Persian, Turkish and Coptic, was issued in this year, in folio. It was compiled by John Uri, a Hungarian, who had studied Oriental literature under Schultens, at Leyden, and who was recommended for this purpose to Archbp. Secker, by Sir Joseph Yorke, then Ambassador in the Netherlands. Many years were occupied in the preparation of this volume, as Uri appears to have commenced his work in 1766, his signature occurring in the 'Registrum admissorum' under Feb. 17, in that year¹. Sixty closely-printed folio pages of corrections and additions are, however, supplied by Dr. Pusey, in the second part of the Catalogue, which he completed after Dr. Nicoll's death and published in 1835. In his preface to this part, Dr. Pusey remarks that Uri frequently copied with carelessness; and that the whole series of Arabic MSS. was found to need re-examination from the discovery that all kinds of cheats and impositions had been played upon all the purchasers of Eastern MSS., Pococke alone excepted, by the cunning sellers with whom they dealt, particularly in the passing off of supposititious works for genuine ². And upon carrying out this re-examination, the following was found to be the result:—

¹'Varias errorum formas deprehendi, titulis nunc charta coopertis, nunc atramento oblitis, nunc cultro pæne abrasis; auctorum porro nominibus paullulum immutatis quo notiora quædam referrent;

²He died suddenly at his lodgings in Oxford, Oct. 18, 1796, aged upwards of seventy (Gent. Magaz., vol. lxvi. p. 884.)

²The late Dr. Simonides was evidently by no means the first in his art, although probably facile princeps.
The Anatomy School, on the Library staircase, was fitted up in this year as a room for receiving the Greek and Biblical MSS., and fifteenth-century editions of classics. In 1794 it was ordered that it should be distinguished by the name of the Auctarium, a name which it still retains. Mr. John Thomas, of Wadham College, (B.A. 1790, M.A. 1793) was employed in 1790 in arranging the room and making a list of its contents.

Many early editions of the classics were purchased at the sale of the library of Mapheo Pinelli, at Venice. To enable these purchases to be made, the Curators made a public application for loans, to which a liberal response was returned, as noted under the following year.

The increased attention which began to be paid to the Library about this time is thus mentioned in a letter from Mr. Dan. Prince, the Oxford bookseller:

‘Our Bodleian Library is putting into good order. It has been already one year in hand. Some one, two or three of the Curators work at it daily, and several assistants. The revenue from the tax on the Members of the University is about £460 per annum, which has existed 12 years. This has increased the Library so much that it must be attended to, and a new Catalogue put in hand. They have lately bought all the expensive foreign publications. A young man of this place is about making a Catalogue of all the singular books in this place, in the College libraries as well as the Bodleian . . . . We have a young man in this place whose name is Curtis, who was an apprentice to me, who has hitherto only dealt in books of curiosities, in which he is greatly skilled, superior in many respects to De Bure, Ames, or his continuato
He has been employed five or six years in the Bodleian Library, and since at Wadham, Queen's and Balliol. He purposes to publish a Catalogue of little or not known books in Oxford, particularly in Merton, Balliol and Oriel.¹

A.D. 1790.

A very large number of Editiones princeps and other early-printed books were purchased at the sale at Amsterdam of the library of P. A. Crevenna. The first entire Hebrew Bible, printed at Soncino in 1488, was purchased for £43 15s.; and Fust and Schoeffer's first dated Latin Bible (Mentz, 1462) for £127 15s. To enable the Library to make the purchases of this and the preceding year, benefactions were received to the amount of nearly £200, and upwards of £1550 were lent by various bodies and individuals. The repayment of the loans was completed in 1795.

£120 were received for duplicates sold to Messrs. Chapman and King. Other small receipts from similar sales are found under the years 1793, 1794 and 1804.

A.D. 1791.

From this year onwards until 1803, inclusive, the name of Mr. Edward Lewton, of Wadham College (B.A. 1792, M.A. 1794), is found as that of an Assistant employed upon the Catalogues. Further benefactions to the amount of £232, for the purpose of aiding the purchase of early-printed books, were received in this year. The list of all the donors is printed in Gutch's edition of Wood's History and Antiquities, vol. ii. part ii. p. 949.

A.D. 1792.

The collections of notes and various readings made by Joseph Torelli, of Verona, in preparation for his edition of Archimedes, were engraved in the London, H. and J. after a year. They were sent to the London and to Rome in order by the University. Since 1845, the University of Mr. John Thos. was founded and it was necessary that the University remain in the University. The work was consequently printed in the University Press and issued in a somewhat later volume of its text.

¹ Nichols, Lit. Anecd. iii. 699, 701.

From this point to the beginning of the New Church, a new work was begun for the very small sum of about 35 pounds. This work was taken in the first year in the Library. This was the first time that the University Press from the commencement of its new work which remained uncompleted was found in the University Library of Rome.

The first volume of the Bible in German, printed by Eggenberg, was sent to the University of Rome.

A second work completed in the title volumes of a very large collection of old manuscripts which had hitherto been given to the University Library, extending from 1705 to 1740, was also completed by the Rev. Samuel of M. C. B. A. 1795.

The Rev. S. M. B. M. A. 1796, M. A. 1800, was printed in the Library.

For the purpose of a new Catalogue, the Curators of the University have made a first application for returns of books missing in the several College Libraries as were not in the Bodleian, in order thereby to accomplish what would be a most useful work, and is still a great desideratum, a General Catalogue of all the books in Oxford.

A.D. 1795.

A brief list (filling sixty small octavo pages) was printed at the Clarendon Press, of the Editiones principes, the fifteenth-century books, and the Aldines, then in the Library. The name of the compiler does not appear. It is entitled, 'Notitia editionum quoad libros Hebr., Gr. et Lat. quae vel primariae, vel sæc. xv. impressæ, vel Aldinae, in Bibliotheca Bodleiana adservantur.'

Four cabinets of English coins were presented by Thomas Knight, Esq., of Godmersham, Kent. Among them was an ornament (now exhibited in the glass case near the Library door) said to have been worn by John Hampden when he fell at Chalgrove Field. It consists of a plain cornelian set in silver, with the following couplet engraved on the rim:

'A against my King I do not fight,
But for my King and kingdom's right.'

The Curators renewed a request, made ineffectually some time before, that the several Colleges would make out returns for the Library of all such books in their own collections as did not appear in the Bodl. Catalogue. In the year 1801 they acknowledged the receipt of such lists from Magdalen, Balliol, Exeter, and Jesus; Oriel sent a list subsequently (in 1808 ?); but these were all that were ever forwarded.

1 Lord Nugent, in his Memoirs of Hampden, erroneously mentions this as being preserved in the Ashmolean Museum. He also repeats two mistaken readings first given in Miss Seward's Anecdotes, iv. 358 (a volume dedicated to Price, the Librarian), where a small woodcut of the ornament is given.

2 A complete Catalogue of the Library of this College, compiled by Rev. E. M. Macfarlane, M.A., of Linc. Coll., was issued by the College, in three handsomely-printed quarto volumes, in 1860-62. The books of all writers belonging to the College, are entered separately in an Appendix in vol. iii.
A.D. 1796.

A few incunabula and Aldines were purchased at Göttingen.

The annual list of donations was, for the first time, printed in this year. It does not include, however, a large gift which was partly received now, the presentation having been made in the year preceding. It was the gift by Rev. Dr. Nath. Bridges of the MSS. collections made by Mr. John Bridges for his History of Northamptonshire. They number thirty-seven volumes in folio, eight in quarto, and one in octavo; and consist chiefly of extracts from Public Records and from the Episcopal Registers of Lincoln, the volumes in quarto containing Church notes for the several parishes. Some account of them is given in Mr. Whalley's preface to vol. i. of Bridges' History, published in 1791.

A.D. 1798.

The distinguished historical antiquary, Sir Henry Ellis, D.C.L., was appointed in this year, by his friend the Librarian, to be one of the Assistant-librarians; commencing thus, while still an undergraduate Fellow of St. John's (which College he had entered in 1796) the studies and pursuits which eventually led to the post, so long and honourably held by him, of Principal Librarian and Head of the British Museum. In a letter with which the author of this volume was recently favour'd by him ('jam senior, sed mente virens,') Sir Henry mentions that the Rev. Henry Hervey Baber, of All Souls' College (B.A. 1799, M.A. 1805), who was afterwards one of his colleagues in the Museum, and who now (atлат. 92) is Vicar of Streatham, in the Isle of Ely, was his senior in the Bodleian, as Coadjutor-under-librarian, by a year or two. In consequence of the insufficiency of the statutable staff, the place of the one Under-librarian was at this time, and subsequently, shared by two occupants. In 1800 Sir H. Ellis signed, in conjunction with Mr. Price, the return printed in the first Record Commission Report relative to the Historical MSS. possessed by the Library.

A.D. 1799.

Some MSS. papers of the eminent French divine, Pet. Franc. le Courayer, were bequeathed by Rev. Bertrand Russel. Courayer’s portrait, representing him in his alb, was given by Courayer himself in 1769.

A.D. 1800.

The chief purchases in this year were of English and foreign maps, purchases which were continued in 1802 and 1804. For Maraldi’s and Cassini’s Atlas of France, in 2 vols., no less than £104 was paid! The interest now taken in French politics was also shown by the purchase of a set of the Moniteur from 1789, which was bought for £66.

A.D. 1801.

A large and valuable collection of MS. and printed music was received, at the beginning of this year or the close of the preceding, by the bequest of Rev. Osborne Wight, M.A., formerly a Fellow of New College, who died Feb. 6, 1800¹. The MSS. number about 190 volumes. They contain anthems, &c, by Arnold, Bishop, Blow, Boyce, Croft, Greene, Purcell, &c; a large number of the works of Drs. Philip and William Hayes; with very many madrigals and motetts by early Italian and English composers, and some of Handel’s compositions. The printed volumes consist chiefly of the original folio editions of Handel, Arnold's and Boyce's collections, and the works of Playford, Purcell, Croft, Greene, and other English composers. A MS. Catalogue of the whole was made by Rev. H. E. Havergal, M.A., about 1846, when the collection was put in order. The Library also possesses full hand and voice parts of several of the odes and other compositions by both Philip and William Hayes. Besides his books Mr. Wight also bequeathed £1000 in the 3 per cent. to defray expenses. Few additions have been made in the class of old music since his gift. Some rare sets of madrigals have been purchased, specially, in 1836, those of Morley, Watson, Weelkes, Wilbye, and Yonge, for £24 14s. 6d.; Mr. Vincent Novello gave, in 1849, MSS. of Handel's Te Deum in D. and Greene's anthem, 'Ponder my words;' and in the following year a MS. of part of the ancient Gregorian Mass 'De Angelis.' harmonized by Sam. Wesley, in 1812; the Professor of Music, Sir F. Ouseley, Bart., gave some French Cantates in 1856; and two or three volumes have been added by the present writer.

¹ A short memoir of this gentleman is given in Gent. Magaz. for 1800, p. 1212, where it is said that ‘he was eminently skilled in the practice and composition of music, and was probably excelled by no one, whether dilettante or professor, as a sight-singer in vocal execution.’

A.D. 1803.

An Arabic MS., in seven volumes, written in 1764-5, and containing what is rarely met with, a complete collection of the Thousand and One Tales of the Arabian Nights' Entertainments, was bought from Capt. Jonathan Scott for £50. Mr. Scott published, in 1811, an edition of the Tales, in six volumes, in which this MS. is described. He obtained it from Dr. White, the Professor of Hebrew and Arabic at Oxford, who had bought it at the sale of the library of Edward Wortley Montague, by whom it had been brought from the East. It is noticed in Ouseley's Oriental Collections, vol. ii. p. 25.
In this year the last volume (numbered 142) of Dr. Holmes' Collations of MSS. of the Septuagint-Version, was deposited in the Library. This great and important work had been commenced in the year 1789; it was intended to embrace collations of all the known MSS. of the Greek text, as well as of Oriental versions; and for seventeen years, by the help of liberal subscriptions, in spite of the difficulties interposed by the continental wars, the collection of the various readings from MSS. in libraries throughout Europe was carried on. And each year's work was, on its completion, deposited in the Bodleian. During this period, annual accounts were published of the progress of the work, which possess both critical and bibliographical interest; and the results of the whole are seen in the fine edition printed at the Clarendon Press, in five vols., folio, 1808-1827.

The MSS. of the distinguished classical scholar, James Philip D'Orville, who died at Amsterdam, Sept. 14, 1751, were bought for £1025. After the purchase was completed, a question arose whether the University of Leyden were not, by the terms of his will, entitled to them after the death of his son, but it was ascertained that this provision was only made in case his son did not reach manhood. The collection numbers about 570 volumes, containing many valuable Greek and Latin Classics, together with numerous collations of texts, and annotated printed copies. Thirty-four volumes contain correspondence (autograph and in copy) of Is. Vossius, Heinsius, Cuper, Paolo Sarpi, Beverland, and the letters addressed to D'Orville by all the great scholars of his time. And thirty-eight volumes, in folio and quarto, contain Adversaria of Scipio and Alberic Gentilis. There are also six Turkish and Arabic MSS. The gem of the collection is a quarto MS. of Euclid, containing 387 leaves, which was written,
It contains a memorandum by one Arethas of Patras, that he bought the book for four (or, most probably, fourteen,) nummi. A Catalogue of the MSS., compiled anonymously by Dr. (then Mr.) Gaisford, was printed in quarto, in 1806. D'Orville's signature occurs in the Admission-book as having been admitted to read on Aug. 18, 1718.

A form of new Statute was put out on March 28, to be proposed to Convocation in May; but it appears to have been withdrawn, as no fresh Statutes were actually enacted until 1813. The staff was proposed to be increased to the number which was adopted in the latter year, but with smaller salaries; and the Library was to be open from nine to three, throughout the year.

A.D. 1806.

Fifty pounds were paid for some 'Tibetan MSS.' of Capt. Samuel Turner, E.I.C.S., who had been sent by Warren Hastings, on a mission to the Grand Llama, in 1785. Of this mission he published an account, in a quarto volume, in 1800. His MSS. consist chiefly of nine bundles of papers and letters in the Persian and Tartar languages, written in the last century, together with a few Chinese printed books. Capt. Turner died Jan. 2, 1802; but as one of his sisters was married to Prof. White, it was probably through him that the papers were now purchased.

A beautiful copy of the Koran which had been in the library of Tippoo Sahib (now exhibited in the glass case near the door) was presented, together with another MS. from the same collection, by the East India Company. Dibdin speaks of it as a work 'upon which caligraphy seems to have exhausted all its powers of intricacy and splendour,' and adds the following description:—
The preservation of it is perfect, and the beauty of the binding, especially of the interior ornaments, is quite surprising. The first few leaves of the text are highly ornamented, without figures, chiefly in red and blue. The latter leaves are more ornamental; they are even gorgeous, curious and minute. The generality of the leaves have two star-like ornaments in the margin, out of the border. Upon the whole this is an exquisite treasure, in its way.\footnote{Bibliogr. DECAM. iii. 472.}

The Catholicon of J. de Janua, printed at Montz, in 1460, was bought for £63.

The following singular memorandum, relating to this year, is preserved on a small paper:

\footnote{Mem. Not returned, June 24, 1807.}

Oxford, Aug. 29, 1806. Borrowed this day, of the Rev. the Bodleian Librarian, the picture given to the Library by Mr. Peters, which I promise to return upon demand.

\footnote{Nor as yet, Oct., 1808. J. P. (i.e. J. Price).}

\footnote{And never to be retg. (added at some later period.)}

JOSEPH WHITE.

This picture must have been the portrait of Professor White himself, which was painted and presented by Rev. Will. Peters, R.A., in 1785\footnote{Gutch's Wood, II. ii. 979.}. It has never been restored.

On the morning of Saturday, April 19, probably but little after nine o'clock, the statutory time for the opening of the Library, some zealous student stood at the door, but could get no further. No one appeared to give him entrance; the Librarian himself never came on a Saturday, and probably his Assistants were not scrupulous in punctuality; at any rate, the expectant student stood and expected in vain. But ere he departed, he denounced a 'Woe' which perpetuates to this day the memory of his vain expectancy; he affixed to the door the following text, which doubtless... seemed to him naturally suggested: 'Οιοι ἔχουσιν, ἵνα ἐκπομπῆς ἡμῶν ἡ ἡμέρα ἡ ἱερά ἡ ἡμέρα; εἰσέλθων χρῆται εἰσώριθτη, καὶ τῶν εἰσαγγελόμενου εἰσαγόμενον.' The paper is now preserved over the door of one of the Sub-librarians' studies, with this note added: 'Affixed to the outer door of the Library by some scutant inconnus, April 19, 1806.'

A.D. 1807.

A list of the books printed during the year at the University Press is added to the annual account. This was not repeated.

A copy of the Speculum Christiani, printed by Will. de Machlinia, was given by Rev. A. H. Matthews, of Jesus College.

Amongst the names of Assistants, written by them, more Anglicico, on the wood-work of their studies, occurs the name of 'Rob. Fr. Walker, New Coll., Dec. 1807.' Mr. Walker (B.A. 1811, M.A. 1813) was subsequently Curate of Purleigh, Essex, where he died in 1854. He was known as the translator of a Life of Bengel, and other works, from the German. A memoir of him was published by Rev. T. Pyne, from which the account given by Dr. Bloxam in his Register of Magd. Coll. ii. 115-117, was taken. In 1810, John Woodcock (B.A. 1817, M.A. 1818, Chaplain of New College) appears, from the same evidence as Mr. Walker, to have been an Assistant, one Will. John Lennox in 1808, and John Jones, (Ch. Ch.? B.A. 1808, M.A. 1815), in 1809.

A.D. 1808.

The Latin Bible printed by Ulric Zell, at Cologne, in two volumes, about 1470, was bought for £47 5s. The Bible printed at Rome, by Swynheym and Pannartz, in 1471, had been bought, in 1804, for £35; and in 1826 a Strasburgh edition, printed with Mentelin's types, without date, was obtained for £94 10s.
A set of the Oxford Almanacks, from the commencement in 1674 to this year, was given by a frequent donor, Alderman Fletcher.1

A.D. 1809.

The death of the eminent topographer and antiquary, Richard Gough, on Feb. 20, 1809, brought into operation the bequest made to the Library in his will, dated ten years previously. This consisted of all his topographical collections, together with all his books relating to Saxon and Northern literature, 'for the use of the Saxon Professor;' his maps and engravings, and all the copper-plates used in the illustration of the various works published by himself. The transmission of this vast collection was accomplished by Mr. J. Nichols, the executor, in the course of the year; and some of his correspondence on the subject is printed in his Illustrations of Literary History, vol. v. pp. 556-561. The collection (which numbers upwards of 3700 volumes) was placed in the room formerly the Civil Law School, that room having been assigned to the Library a few years previously, and fitted up (at a cost of about £675) for the reception of various historical collections. In the same room are now the Carte, Dodsworth, Tanner, Willis, Junius, and portion of the Rawlinson, manuscripts, with other smaller collections; the name proposed to be given to it, and by which it was designated in Gough's will, was 'The Antiquaries' Closet.' Gough's library consists, firstly, of a large series of maps2 and topographical prints and drawings, in ele-

1 A limited number of copies of the engravings of these Almanacks, from the original plates which remain in the University Press, were re-issued in 1867, under the superintendence of Rev. John Griffiths, M.A.

2 A very full memoir of him is to be found in the Lit. Anecd. vol. vi. pp. 263-343, and 613-626. His miscellaneous library was sold by auction in 1810. Two drawings in sepia, by F. Lewis, of his house at Enfield, were bought in 1861.

3 One of these is a very curious manuscript map of England and Scotland, executed in the fourteenth century, which now hangs, framed and glazed, in the eastern wing.
...fourthly of an extremely large volume series of ancient Service-books of the English C:

The second volume of a copy of Wharton's "Berkshire" was MSS upon Mr. Keble's notes which the first volume was MSS upon Mr. Keble's notes. But both volumes have been used by Got...
before the Reformation, together with a few MSS., chiefly Hora.
The value of this series may be gathered from the following statement of the Missals, Breviaries, Manuals, Processionals, and Hours, which it comprises, besides which there are Graduals, Psalter, Hymns, Primers, &c.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Missals</th>
<th>Salisbury use</th>
<th></th>
<th>30</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>&quot; York</td>
<td></td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>&quot; Rouen</td>
<td></td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>&quot; Roman</td>
<td></td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>&quot; pro sacerdotibus in Anglia, &amp;c. itinerantibus.&quot;</td>
<td>1</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

| Breviaries and Portiforia, Salisbury use |         | 18 |
| " York                                         |         | 2  |
| " Hereford                                    |         | 1  |

| Manuals, Salisbury use |         | 10 |
| " York (MS.)                                      |         | 1  |

| Processionals, Salisbury use |         | 10 |
| " York                                        |         | 1  |

| Hours, Salisbury use |         | 24 |
| " Roman (besides several MSS.)               |         | 1  |

Of several of these books there are more than single copies.

A fifth division of Gough's library consists of sixteen large folio volumes of coloured drawings of monuments in churches of France, chiefly at Paris, in Normandy, Valois, Champagne, Burgundy and Brie, and at Beauvais, Chartres, Vendois and Noyon.
They form part of a large collection extending through the whole of France, which was made by M. Gagnières, tutor to the sons of

---

1 The splendid and, as it is believed, unique vellum copy of the Hereford Missal ('ad usum eccl. Helfordensis,' fol. Rouen, 1502) which the Library possesses, came to it from Rawlinson among the books of T. Hearne, to whom it had been given by Charles Eyton, Esq., of East Hendred, Berks. (Hearne's pref. to Camden's Annales Eliz. 1. xxvii.) This Hereford volume is described, together with many of Gough's books, in a book by Ed. Frère, entitled Des Livres de Liturgie des Eglises d’Angle-erre imprimés à Rouen dans les xv. et xvi. Siècles, 8° Rouen, 1867.
the Grand Dauphin, and given by him to Louis XIV in 1711. Of this collection, now preserved in the Imperial Library, twenty-five volumes were lost amid the troubles of the French Revolution, between 1785 and 1801; but in what way, out of the twenty-five, these sixteen came into Gough's hands, has not been clearly ascertained. The collection is of great value, as most of the monuments were defaced or destroyed by the revolutionary mobs. Gough's volumes contain about 2000 drawings, of the whole of which facsimiles were made in 1860 by M. Jules Frappaz, by direction of the French Minister of Public Instruction, (who made application for the purpose, through Mr. J. H. Parker, in 1859) for the purpose of so far supplying the deficiency in the series at Paris.1

The copy of the British Topography, which Gough had prepared for a third edition (of which a considerable part of vol. i. had been printed, but was burned in the disastrous fire at Mr. Nichols' printing-office in Feb., 1808,) was bought by the Curators of Mr. Nichols in 1812 for £150.2 It has been recently bound in four very thick volumes. A fifth volume contains the proof-sheets of that portion of vol. i. which had been printed, extending to Cheshire, p. 446. The collections for the first edition make three volumes.

By Gough's bequest the Library became also possessed (as mentioned above) of the very valuable copper-plates which illustrated his Sepulchral Monuments, and other works. In 1811, one hundred guineas were paid to Basire, the engraver, for cleaning and arranging 380 of these plates. Amongst these was the actual brass effigy of one of the Wingfield family in the fifteenth century, from Letheringham Church, Suffolk, of which an engraving is found in the Monuments. The brass is now exhibited in the glass case of miscellaneous objects of curiosity in the Picture Gallery.

The Catalogue of the collection was issued from the University Press, in a quarto volume, in 1814. It was chiefly compiled by Dr. Bandinel, to whom fifty guineas were paid for it, in 1813; but Dr. Bliss has noted¹ that the first 156 pages were prepared by himself. In the Bibliographical Decameron (vol. i. p. xciv.) Dibdin has made honourable mention of the 'perseverance, energy, and exactness' with which he found Dr. Bandinel working on a very hot day in the year 1812, in the arrangement of the collection, 'in an oaken-floored room, light, spacious, and dry.'

Some account and survey-books, belonging to University and Magdalen Colleges, which came to the Library among Gough's MSS., were restored by vote of Convocation on March 9, 1814.

The MSS. which the well-known traveller, Rev. Edw. Dan. Clarke, LL.D., had collected during his journeys through a large part of Europe and Asia, were purchased from him in this year for £1000. A first portion of a Catalogue, comprising descriptions of fifty volumes, of which fifteen are in Latin, two in French (Alain Chartier, one being the printed edit. of 1526), and the rest in Greek, was published in 1812, in quarto, by Dr. Gaisford, who printed in full some inedited Scholia on Plato and on the Poems of Gregory Nazianzen. A second part of the Catalogue, containing a description of forty-five volumes in Arabic, Persian, and Æthiopic, was issued by Dr. Nicoll, in 1814. The special feature in the collection is a MS. of Plato's Dialogues, from which the Scholia are printed in the Catalogue, written (on 418 vellum quarto leaves) by a scribe named John (who styles himself Calligraphus) in the year 896, for Arethas, a deacon of Patras, for the sum of thirteen Byzantine nummi. The D'Orville MS. of Euclid was also written for this Arethas (see p. 208).

¹ In his MS. Collectanea, in the possession of Rev. H. O. Coxe.
A.D. 1810.

In March, the Prince Regent forwarded to the University four rolls of papyrus, brought from Herculaneum, burned to a state resembling charcoal, together with engravings of rolls hitherto deciphered, and many facsimile copies, in pencil, of inedited rolls. A committee was appointed from the Curators of the Library and the Delegates of the Press, at the beginning of the year 1811, to have the charge of this gift, and £500 were granted towards publication. Two volumes of lithographed facsimiles were in consequence published at the Clarendon Press, in 1824–5. Some further selections from these papers have recently been published by a German scholar, Dr. Th. Gompertz.

On Nov. 15, it was resolved in Convocation to restore to the Chancery at Durham, on the application of the Bishop of Durham, the MS. Register of Richard Kellow, Bishop of Durham, 1310–16, containing also a portion of the Register of Rich. Bury, 1338–42, which had come to the Library among Rawlinson's collections, and was the only volume wanting at Durham in an unbroken series of Episcopal Registers, of which this was the first. It was borrowed in 1658, as it appeared, by an agent of the Marquis of Newcastle, for the purpose of production in some law-suit affecting his property; remained through the Civil War in his hands; fell subsequently into those of the Earl of Oxford, and was bought by Rawlinson from Osborne the bookseller, in whose sale-catalogue of the Harleian Library in 1743 it was numbered 20734.

In this year Dr. Philip Bliss, the editor of Wood's Athenæ, appears to have entered the Library as an assistant, the entries in the register of books received from Stationers' Hall being partly made by him, in his very clear and neat hand. In 1812 he drew up short catalogues of the St. Amand MSS. and of a portion of the Rawlinson collection (the Poetry, the Letters, and the commencement of the Miscell.) for which a payment was made to him of £21. He afterwards quitted the Library for the British Museum, but returned in 1822, as Sub-librarian, for a short time.
-1813  BODLEIAN LIBRARY.  217

His life-long friend, Dr. Bandinel, entered the Library also in this year. To him, for a list of a further portion of the Rawlinson MSS., £26 5s. were paid in 1812.

A.D. 1811.

Only eighteen books were purchased in this year! The list, scantily filling one page, is consequently the minimum in the series of annual catalogues.

A.D. 1813.

The Rev. John Price, B.D., the Librarian, died on Aug. 11, aged seventy-nine, after forty-five years of office. A short biographical notice is given in the Gentleman's Magazine for Oct., 1813, p. 400, and a fuller account, together with many letters, and an engraved portrait, with facsimile signature, (from a sketch taken in 1798, by Rev. H. H. Baber), in vols. v. and vi. of Nichols' Illustrations of the Lit. Hist. of the 18th Century. The following character of him with regard to his discharge of his official duties is there given (vi. 471), which in some respects forms a strong contrast to the representation of Prof. Beddoes in the year 1787 (see p. 197). 'In the faithful discharge of his public duties in the University, he acquitted himself with the highest credit, and deservedly conciliated the esteem of others by his readiness to communicate information from the rich literary stores over which he presided, and of which he was a most jealous and watchful guardian. He was, from long habit, so completely attached to the Library, that he considered every acquisition made to its contents as a personal favour conferred upon himself.' It was chiefly owing to his assiduous attention to Mr. Gough and his frequent correspondence with him, that the Library was enriched with the bequest of the latter's splendid topographical collections. But there is not much existing to tell of personal work in the Library during his long tenure of office, and the fact that nothing was done till near the close of that period towards arranging and cataloguing the Rawlinson MSS., seems to prove that there was no great activity in the Library under his management. This is corroborated also by the wonderful difference which is immediately seen in the annual catalogue of purchases; the Catalogue for 1813 grows at once from the two folio pages of the preceding year to seventeen, while the sum expended becomes £725 in the place of £261\(^1\).

And the list of books forwarded from Stationers' Hall, and hitherto received only twice yearly, at Lady-day and Michaelmas, becomes in 1815 largely increased, while in the year 1822 the number of yearly parcels is increased to eight. At the present time, as for a long time past, books are received monthly.

The Rev. Bulkeley Bandinel, M.A. (D.D. in 1823), of New College, was elected Librarian by Convocation on Aug. 25. He had been appointed Sub-librarian in 1810, by Mr. Price, who was his godfather; and for a short time previously had been a Chaplain in the Royal Navy, having served with Adm. Sir James Saumarez on board the 'Victory,' in the Baltic, in 1808.

The appointment of a new Librarian was followed by the enacting of a new Statute, passed by Convocation on Dec. 2, which provided for the increase of the Librarian's stipend to £400, exclusive of his share of fees from degrees: for the appointment of two Sub-librarians, instead of one, and these not under the degree of M.A., with salaries of £150: of two assistants, Bachelors of Arts or undergraduates, with salaries of £50: and of the Janitor, with a salary of £20. An additional annual grant, calculated at £680, equal to that which resulted from the provision made by the Statute of 1780, and to be paid, like that, out of the yearly fees of graduates whose names are on the books, was sanctioned, with the triple object of providing for this enlarged staff, for the commencement of a new Catalogue, and for repairs hitherto defrayed out of the general University funds. The state of the roof and ceiling were said to be such as to justify an apprehension that they must at no distant period be entirely constructed anew; happily this reconstruction was only carried out with respect to the Picture Gallery, and the roof of the Library remains as a precious relic still.

\(^1\) Among the purchases is a set of the Gentleman's Magazine to the year 1810 for £42 10s.

The hours at which the Library should be open, were fixed to be from 9 to 4 in the summer half-year, and 10 to 3 in the winter; the only change since made has been the enacting, in 1867, that nine o'clock shall be the invariable hour of opening on all ordinary days.

The junior assistants in the Library in this year were Mr. Francis Thurland, of New College (B.A. 1812, M.A. 1814), and Mr. Sam. Slack, of Ch. Ch. (B.A. 1813, M.A. 1816).

1 This alteration of hours had been previously proposed in a Statute which was to have been submitted to Convocation on Dec. 11, 1812, but which appears to have been withdrawn ere the day came, probably because this larger measure of revision of the old Statutes was already in contemplation. A blank is left in the Convocation Book under that date, by the then Registrar, Mr. Gutch; and his successor, Dr. Bliss, has added a pencil-note to the effect that he supposes from the blank not being filled up, that the proposal was previously abandoned. The Statute of 1769 had required that the Library should be open in summer from 8 to 2 and from 3 to 5, but it was stated in some remarks which accompanied the proposed enactment that these injunctions had 'long been disregarded in practice,' and that the Library had been open throughout the year from nine to three o'clock. But it was added that 'experience' had 'shewn that there is no occasion for requiring the attendance of the Librarians before ten in the winter season.'
A.D. 1814.

The nomination of the Rev. Henry Cotton, M.A., then Student of Ch. Ch., now the venerable Archdeacon of Cashel, as Sub-librarian, was approved in Convocation on March 9. Of the interest which he took in his work, of his qualifications for it, and of the advantages which the bibliographical world has derived from it, his Typographical Gazetteer and List of Editions of the English Bible, afford abundant testimony. He remained in the Library eight years, quitting it when his friend Dr. Laurence, on his appointment to the Archbishops of Cashel, carried him with himself to Ireland.

During his continuance in the Library, a descriptive Catalogue of the Editiones principes and Incunabula was projected by him and Dr. Bandinel; but only one specimen page in octavo was printed, of which a copy has been preserved by Dr. Bliss, with his set of the annual catalogues.

Alex. Nicoll, M.A., of Balliol College (a native of Aberdeen), was appointed Sub-librarian at the early age of twenty-one; the nomination was approved in Convocation on April 27. He at once devoted himself to the study of Oriental languages, and became a proficient in Hebrew, Arabic, Persian, Syriac, Ethiopic, and Sanscrit. His facility in acquiring languages must have been truly marvellous,

1 In a clever and amusing little quib of four pages, which he printed anonymously in 1819, and which is preserved in the Library-collection of University papers, professing to be a ‘Syllabus’ of treatises on academic matters, to be printed at the University Press in not more than thirty vols., elephant quarto, Mr. Cotton satirized himself and his colleagues, doubtless with the more readiness because with no reason. 21. De Bibliothecario et ejus adjutoribus. Captain. What are you about, Dick? Dick. Nothing, sir. Captain. Tom, what are you doing? Tom. Helping Dick, sir. Treatise 24 has for its title the few but emphatic words, ‘De Dodd.’ Lest some future delver in Oxford antiquities should be lost in a maze of conjectures as to the personality and history of this worthy, so evidently then well known, let it here be told that Dodd was the Clerk of the Schools.
for, in addition to these Eastern tongues, and although his death occurred at the early age of thirty-six, it is said that 'he spoke and wrote with ease and accuracy, French, Italian, German, Danish, Swedish, and Romaine.' In 1822 he was, much to his own surprise, appointed, at the age of twenty-nine, to the Regius Professorship of Hebrew, by Lord Liverpool, on the recommendation of Dr. Laurence, who vacated that post in consequence of his appointment to the see of Cashel. Nicoll held the Professorship for only seven years, dying on Sept. 24, 1828. The records of his labours in the Bodleian are found in the Catalogue of Clarke's Oriental MSS. noticed under the year 1809, and in his second part of the General Catalogue of Oriental MSS., published in 1821, q.v.

The total receipts and expenditure of the Library were for the first time fully stated in the annual accounts. Hitherto the practice had been to omit the Bodley endowment and the Crewe benefaction, &c, which were devoted to salaries, repairs and other ordinary expenses (including also the occasional purchase of MSS.), and only to report the amount received from University fees and expended on printed books and incidental charges.

A.D. 1815.

Cedunt arma toga! The effect which the cessation of the war produced, in diverting to quiet academic channels the stream of youth which hitherto had flowed in the turbid currents of continental strife, is shown by the large increase of the Library receipts derived from matriculation fees. These, which previously fell below (and often far below) £250, rose in 1814, on the first sign of peace, to £424, and in this year, on its final establishment, to £633.

In January, Mr. John Calcott, of Lincoln College (B.A. 1814, M.A. 1816, B.D. 1825; Fellow of Linc.; deceased 1864) was appointed Minister in the room of Mr. Francis Thurland, of New College, resigned. Mr. Calcott, however, only held the office for one year, being succeeded, in Feb. 1816, by Mr. Sam. Fenton, of Jesus College (B.A. 1818, M.A., Ch. Ch. 1821).

A.D. 1816.

A very important MS., with relation to Scottish history, was placed in the Library on Dec. 5, in this year. It is a transcript (from the originals,) by Col. J. Hooke, agent in Scotland for James II\(^1\), of all his political correspondence between the beginning of the year 1704 and the end of 1707. It forms two folio volumes, but is unfinished, as the second volume ends with the commencement of a letter from James Ogilvie, of Boyn, to M. de Torcy, Dec. 26, 1707. A brief narrative of Hooke's negotiations, which contains copies of a few of the letters here given, was published in France, in the French language, and a translation was printed in a small volume at Dublin in 1760; but the great mass of the correspondence is as yet inedited. The volumes came to the Library in pursuance of a bequest from the Rev. J. Tickell, Rector of Gawsworth, Cheshire and East Mersea, Essex, who died at Wargrave, Berks, July 3, 1802. The bequest was to take effect upon the death of his wife, which occurred towards the close of 1816\(^2\).

The Curators reported, at the end of the annual list, that considerable progress had been made towards the formation of a new general Catalogue. Further progress was reported in the following year; in which year also Dibdin\(^3\) announced that the Catalogue would be finished, in four folio volumes, by Messrs. Bandinel

---

1 Hooke in 1685 was one of the Chaplains attending Monmouth in his rebellion! Lockhart Papers, 1817, vol. i. p. 148.
2 Gent. Magaz. vol. lxxv. ii. 569.
3 Bibliogr. Decam. iii. 429.
and Cotton under the superintendence of Professor Gaisford. He adds, 'The Prince Regent hath munificently given a considerable sum towards the completion of these glorious labours.' There is no record in the annual accounts of any such donation; but in 1823 and 1824 payments amounting to £420 were made to the Librarian, Sub-librarians, and Assistant, for their work on the new Catalogue, out of 'the Prince Regent's benefaction.' On the proposition of the Chancellor, Lord Grenville, in 1814, Mr. Vansittart, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, had expressed his willingness to apply to Parliament for a grant of £5000 for the purpose; probably this idea was abandoned for the more easily practicable one of a grant from the Privy Purse.

Four Greek MSS. were presented in this year by Rev. Hall, Chaplain at Leghorn; a copy of Lucan's Pharsalia, with MSS. collations by Joseph Addison, by the Warden of Merton College; and a large collection of books in Oriental literature, printed in Bengal, by the East India Company.

A.D. 1817.

The large Canonici collection of MSS. was obtained from Venice in this year, for the sum of £5444, a purchase unprecedented in greatness in the history of the Library. The collection was formed by Matheo Luigi Canonici, a Venetian Jesuit, who was born in 1727 and died in Sept. 1805 or 1806. Indefatigable in his passion for antiquities, he first formed a Museum

---

1 Portions of the Letters A F and P which had been thus prepared were subsequently printed, but the whole work was then for some years suspended, and afterwards commenced de novo. And nearly thirty years elapsed before it was finally completed.

2 Previous grants amounting to £260, had been made in 1820.

3 Three of these are described in Mr. Coxe's Catalogue, cols. 813-14.

4 The money was raised by loans of £2000 from the Radcliffe Trustees and £3644 from the University Bankers. They were both repaid by the year 1820.
of statues and of medals at Parma, but, in consequence of the Jesuits being expelled from the State, this was sold to the government. He then at Bologna set himself to collect religious objects of interest, and had succeeded to some extent, when the rector of his society observed to him that such a collection was little suitable to a poor monk, and he consequently disposed of it to a Roman prince. Finally, at Venice, he commenced the gathering of a library, in which it is said, as one evidence of its extent, there were more than four thousand Bibles written in fifty-two languages.

The MSS. purchased by the Bodleian amount in number about 2045. Dibdin, almost immediately upon the acquisition, noticed it thus:

"They have recently acquired a very curious and valuable collection of MSS., which formerly belonged to an ex-Jesuit Abbé, who intended (had he lived to have seen the restoration of the order of the Jesuits) to have presented them to the Jesuits' College at Venice. Neither pains nor expense were spared among his brethren, in all parts of the world, to make the collection, on that account, as perfect as possible."

In Greek there are 128 volumes, chiefly of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, with a few of earlier date, including two Evangelisteria assigned to Montfaucon to the ninth century. Of Latin classical authors and Medial poets there are 311 volumes; some of those of the former class are of great age and value, notably a Virgil of the tenth century (No. 50). Ninety-three MSS. form the class of Latin Bibles; the finest of these are, one written in 1178 for the church of SS. Mary and Pancras in Ranshoven, and another, in very large folio volumes, written and illuminated in France, in years 1507–1511. Of Latin ecclesiastical writers and Fathers there are 232 volumes; and of Latin miscellanies (chiefly in medicine, philosophy and science, theology, and belles lettres, with scarcely anything of an historical character), 576 volumes. Of all these classes a catalogue was published by Mr. Coxe in 1854, forming part iii. of the new general Catalogue of MSS.

---

1 De Backer's Bibliothèque des écrivains de la comp. de Jésus; quatr. série, p. 8vo. Liège, 1858.
2 Bibliogr. Decam. iii. 429.

Another division consists of Liturgical books. In this class there are now 400 volumes, but about 130 of these were added from the Rawlinson collection. They consist chiefly of Hora, Breviaries, Missals, and Psalters, with a few other service-books; most of those which belonged to Canonici being 'secundum usum Romanum.' No catalogue of this series has, as yet, been made.

A sixth division comprehends 300 Italian MSS. (including five in Spanish) of which a very elaborate catalogue was compiled, as a labour of love, by the Count Alessandro Mortara, during the years of his stay in Oxford1. His MS. was bought after his death from his executor the Abate Giuseppe Manuzzi, of Florence, for £201, in the year 1858; it was afterwards put to press under the care of the accomplished Italian scholar, and intimate friend of Count Mortara, Dr. H. Wellesley, the late Principal of New Inn Hall, and appeared, with an Italian preface by him giving some account of the whole collection, in one volume quarto (158 pages,) in 1864.

The last portion of the collection consists of 135 Oriental MSS., chiefly valuable Hebrew books on vellum. One of these (No. 78) is a copy of Maimonides' Commentary on the Law, in fourteen books, which is dated 1366. Seven of the Biblical volumes are noticed in De Rossi's Variae Lectiones Veteris Testamenti. The few Arabic MSS. are described in Dr. Pusey's Continuation of Nicol's Catalogue.

1 See under the year 1852.
ANNALS OF THE

A curious story of the recovery, amidst these books, of some leaves belonging to a printed vellum Bible already in the Library, will be found related under the year 1750. A few other MSS. from Canonici's library were sold by auction, with some from Saibante's, in London, in 1821. And many relating to Italian and Venetian history, which were at first retained by one of the heirs, passed afterwards into the hands of the Rev. Walter Sneyd, of Baginton, Warwickshire, their present possessor. A MS. volume of notices of the Canonici library, drawn up by Signor Lorenzi, of Venice, was bought by the Bodleian, in 1859, for ten guineas.

A MS. of Suidas, of the fifteenth century, was purchased for £220 10s. Another acquisition was a French translation, made in 1417, by Laurens de Preme, of the Ethics, Politics, &c., of Aristotle. Some specimens of the Javanese language were given by Capt. L. H. Davy.

Among printed books, the most noticeable purchase (besides the Edd. Pr. of Livy, 1469, Lactantius, 1465, &c.) was that of a vellum copy of the first edition of the Hebrew Pentateuch, printed at Bologna in 1482, for £17 10s. Some sets of controversial and political tracts, with other books, which had belonged to Thomas...

1 The first MSS. of Dante which the Library possessed, came in the Canonici collection; they are in number fifteen. This fact is worth mentioning, on account of an extraordinary story told by Girolamo Gigli, in his Vocabolario Ciceronianum, p. cclii. (a book the printing of which was commenced at Rome in 1737, but which was suppressed, by bull, before completion), that in the Bodleian Library at ‘Oxfolde,’ there was a MS. of the Divina Commedia, which, from being employed in enveloping a consignment of cheese (and so imported into England by a mode of conveyance said to have been usually adopted by Florentine merchants, with a view of spreading at once a knowledge of their luxuries and their literature), had become so saturated with a caseous savour as to require the constant guardianship of two traps to protect it from the voracity of mice. Hence, according to this marvellous travellers’ story, the MS. went by the name of The Book of the Moustrap (See Notes and Queries, i. 154.)

2 Bodl. MS. 965.
Brande Hollis and Dr. John Disney, were bought at the sale of the library of the latter.

A.D. 1818.

A return was made to the House of Commons of such books received since 1814, in pursuance of the Copyright Act, from Stationers' Hall, as it had not been deemed necessary to place in the Library. The list is but a trifling one, consisting chiefly of school-books and anonymous novels, with music; but, nevertheless, it is sufficient to show the great need of caution in rejecting any books excepting such as are of the simplest elementary character, and the advantage of erring rather on the side of inclusiveness than exclusiveness. Miss Edgeworth's Parents' Assistant, Mrs. H. More's Sacred Dramas, Mrs. Opie's Simple Tales, and an edition of Ossian, were all consigned to the limbo of 'rubbish.' But the Cambridge Return (which is much more detailed than that from Oxford) shows a recklessness of rejection which speaks little for the judgment of the Librarians for the time being. Besides school-books and music, a large number of pamphlets figure in the list, including some by Chalmers and Cobbett; the Theology includes Owen's History of the Bible Society; the History includes Memoirs of Oliver Cromwell and his Children; the Poetry, Byron's Siege of Corinth, L. Hunt's Story of Rimini, and Wordsworth's Thanksgiving Ode; and the Novels, [Peacock's] Headlong Hall, one by Mrs. Opie, and—The Antiquary! The far wiser plan is now carried out in the Bodleian of rejecting nothing; even the elementary works that do not need entering in the Catalogue, are so kept that access can be had to them at all times and examination made; and the music is from time to time sorted and bound. And this plan was commenced in the year of which we are writing; for, (in consequence, of course, of this return being called for by the House of Commons,) the Curators ordered, on May 27, that all publications sent from Stationers' Hall should in future be entered and preserved.

1 The minuteness of specification is such that 'Turner's Real Japan Blacking, a Label' is duly entered.

A very valuable and curious series of original editions of Latin and German tracts, issued by the German Reformers between 1518 and 1550, in eighty-four volumes, was bought for £95 15s. Additions have been made to this collection at various times subsequently, so that now it probably comprises as complete a gathering of these controversial publications, so easily lost or destroyed from their small extent and often ephemeral character, as can anywhere be found. A kindred collection (although not of like value or interest) was obtained through the gift by Mr. A. Müller, a well-known bookseller at Amsterdam, of a series of tracts, in sixty-two volumes, and chiefly in the Dutch language, on the controversy with the Remonstrants in 1618-19. A MS. Catalogue, by Mr. Müller, dated March 3, is kept in the Librarian's study. Besides the books, Mr. Müller gave a few coins, including one struck on leather during the siege of Leyden in 1574, and some natural curiosities, which latter are now preserved in the New Museum. A black negro baby, preserved in spirits (!) has, however, unaccountably disappeared; let us hope it was decently buried. Seventeen panes of painted glass, probably by disciples of Crabeth, who painted the windows in the Church of Gouda, also formed part of this very miscellaneous donation; these, most probably, are included among the curious fragments which decorate some of the Library windows.

Six Persian MSS. were given by the late venerable Principal of Magdalen Hall, and Lord Almoner's Reader in Arabic, Dr. Macbride. The signature of this gentleman, who has only been removed by death while these sheets have been passing through the press, occurs in the Admission-book of the last century, as having been admitted to read in the Library, while still an undergraduate of Exeter College, on May 10, 1797.

Alderman Fletcher's illustrated copy of Gutch's Wood. See under 1610.

Mr. John Walker, Queen's College (B.A. 1820; Chaplain of New College, M.A., 1823), succeeded Mr. Fenton as minister in July.

A.D. 1819.

A copy of the extremely rare Polish version of the Bible, made by the Socinians at the expense of Prince Nicholas Radzivil, and printed in 1563, was bought for £451; and a folio Psalter, printed by Fust and Schoeffer in 1459, (finished Aug. 29), on vellum, for £70. The second vellum printed book in the Library is a copy of Durandus' Rationale, printed by the same printers in the same year, but completed on Oct. 6. This was bought in 1790 for £80 10s. Large additions were made to the collection of Aldines.

The name of Lady Hester Stanhope occurs among the benefactors as presenting an Arabic MS. of the Romance of Antar, in thirty volumes.

A.D. 1820.

From Messrs. Payne and Foss was bought, for £150, the famous MS. of the Greek New Testament called, from its former possessor, the 'Codex Ebnerianus.' It is a small quarto, containing 425 leaves of fine vellum, in excellent condition and well written, and ornamented with eleven rich paintings, besides occasional arabesque borders, &c. It comprehends all the books of the New Testament except the Apocalypse, and is assigned in date to the twelfth or thirteenth century. The former owner, whose name it perpetuates, Jerome William Ebner von Eschenbach, of Nuremberg, obtained it, it is said, when first brought from the East 'ex singulari Numinis providentia.' While in his possession, a small descriptive volume, comprising forty-four pages and an engraved facsimile, was published by Conrad Schoenleben, under the title of Notitia egregii codicis Graci Novi Testamenti manu scripti, &c. 4º. Norib. 1738. This was incorporated by De Murr in his Memorabilia Bibliothecarum publicarum Norimbergensium, published in 1788, part ii. p. 100, who added thirteen well-engraved plates of the illuminations, binding and text. It was formerly bound in leather-covered boards, ornamented with gold, with five silver-gilt stars on the sides, and fastened with four silver clasps. This cover being much decayed, Ebner cased the volume in a most costly binding of pure silver, preserving the silver stars, and affixing on the outside a beautiful ivory figure (coeval with the MS.) of our Saviour, throned, and in the attitude of benediction. Above the figure, Ebner engraved an inscription in Greek characters, corresponding to the style of the MS., praying for a blessing upon himself and his family.

1 The rarity of this edition was caused by its being bought up and destroyed by the sons of Prince Radzivil.

A MS. of Terence, of the eleventh or twelfth century, which also belonged to Ebner, was bought from Payne and Foss, at the same time, for ten guineas. It is described in De Murr, ubi supra, pp. 135-7.

Fifty Greek manuscripts were bought for £500, which had formerly been in the possession of Giovanni Saibante, of Verona. The library of this collector is noticed in Scipio Maffei's Verona Illustrata (fol. 1731), part ii. col. 48. The MSS. purchased by the Library are described in Mr. Coxe's Catalogue, cols. 774-808.

1 Some MSS. which had belonged to Saibante, together with some of the Abate Canonici's collection, which had been brought to England by the Abate Celotti, were sold by auction, in London, in 1821. The sale of a further portion, which had passed into the hands of P. de' Gianfilippi (also of Verona), took place at Paris in January, 1843.
A collection of Arabic tracts and papers, which had formerly belonged to Dr. Kennicott, was given by Shute Barrington, Bishop of Durham.

A.D. 1821.

The great event of this year was the reception of the famous and extensive collection of English dramatic literature and early poetry, formed by Edmund Malone. It was bequeathed by him on his decease (May 25, 1813) to his brother, Lord Sunderlin, with the expression of a wish that, if not retained as an heirloom in the family, it should be deposited in some public library. In fulfilment of this wish, Lord Sunderlin communicated to the University, in 1815, his intention to transfer the collection to the Bodleian so soon as Mr. James Boswell, to whom it was entrusted in order to assist him in the preparation of a new edition of Malone's Shakespeare, should have finished his use of it. That edition being at length issued in 1821, the library was sent to Oxford in the same year. The character of the collection is too well known to need description; suffice it to say that it contains upwards of 800 volumes, of which by far the greater number are distinguished by their rarity. There are first quarto of many of Shakespeare's plays, and second editions of others; of his collected works there are both the first and second folios. Barnfield, Beaumont and Fletcher, Chapman, Decker, Greene, Heywood, Ben Jonson, Lodge, Massinger, Rich. Taylor the water-poet, and Whetstone are amongst those who are most fully represented. There are also a few MSS. A Catalogue of the collection, in folio (52 pp.), with a life of Malone by Boswell (previously printed in Gent. Magaz. and Nichol's Lit. Hist.), was published in 1836;

1 Malone was the son of an Irish Judge. He was born in Dublin, Oct. 4, 1741, was educated at Trin. Coll. Dublin, where he took the degree of M.A., and became a barrister, but soon retired from legal practice.

2 For notices of the purchase of several early quartos, wanting in this series, see 1834. and in 1854: Mr. J. J. Enslowl printed fifty-one copies of a small edition of the early English measure preserved in it. Various volumes of Malone's two Mss. collections have been subsequently added by purchase, viz., in 1856, some papers relating to the life and writings of Pope, in 1858, his collections for the last edition of his Shakespeare; and for the illustration of ancient manners, together with a portion of his literary correspondence; in 1854 a volume of letters written to him by Bishop Percy, between 1783 and 1812; in 1858 three large volumes of collections made by him at Oxford; and in 1864, a volume of letters to him from Dr. Johnson, Mrs. Siddons, and others. A large series of pamphlets, directly relating to Irish history and to literary matters, consisting of seventy-five volumes, was also purchased in 1838.
Almost all his books are uniformly bound in half-calf, with "E. M. in an unincised monogram on the back: a very few have a bookplate consisting of his coat-of-arms within a square of books, with the inscription in imitation of Groser's) 'Edm. Malone et amicis'; and a notebook from the Manuscript.

A curious instance of the variability and uncertainty of the prices of books is afforded by the purchase-list of this year, when compared with prices paid at the present time. A copy (wanting the preliminary leaves and a few others: of one of the Antwerp editions of Tyndale's New Test. in 1534, which had belonged to Mr. Bery, From, and is mentioned in Herbert's Amst., vol. iii.
p. 1543 was bought for nineteen shillings: Mr. Stevens in 1855 priced another imperfect copy at fifteen guineas. But, on the other hand, £63 were given in this year for the rare Ed. Pr. of Virgil, printed by Swayne and Pannartz in 1469. A somewhat

1 These are now incorporated with the large collection called Godwin's Pamphlets.
A copy of Wood's Ath. Osm. with Mss. notes by Malone, was given by Mr. B.
H. Bright in 1856.

2 Various other ed. prince. were bought in this year, with some Aldines. Also a collection of modern Greek works printed at Venice.
similar instance occurred also in 1826, when Daye's edition of the Apocrypha, printed in 1549 (being vol. iv. of his edition of the Bible in that year), was obtained for fifteen shillings, while £73 10s. were paid for an edition of Virgil printed at Venice about 1473.

The very rare German Bible, printed at Strasburgh about 1466, was bought for £42, and a perfect copy of the first edition of the Bishops' Bible, in 1568, for seven guineas. A volume of interest in typographical history was presented, in the first book printed in New South Wales. It is entitled Michael Howe, the last and worst of the Bush Rangers of Van Dieman's Land; narrative of the chief atrocities committed by this great murderer and his associates during a period of six years in Van Dieman's Land: it extends to thirty-six small octavo pages, and was printed at Hobart Town, by Andrew Bent, in Dec., 1818.

The Catalogue of the Oriental MSS., commenced in the year 1787 by Uri, was continued in this year by the publication by Mr. Nicoll of the first part of a second volume, containing notices of 234 additional Arabic MSS. His premature death occurred before the publication of the second part, which he had printed as far as p. 388; this was completed and edited (with nine litho-graphic plates of specimens of Arabic MSS.) by his successor in the Hebrew Professorship, Dr. Pusey, in 1835. It contains altogether descriptions of 296 Arabic volumes, together with copious additions by Dr. Pusey to Uri's first portion, which are noticed above, p. 199.

---

1. Ofor's copy sold for £41; Lea Wilson's for £61 10s.
2. The present writer has in his possession an early newspaper printed in New Zealand, the Auckland Times, No. 41, for Apr. 6, 1843, not merely curious in relation to the history of the colony, but also as a typographical relic. Its crowning interest is to be found in its colophon (if such a classical word may be applied to the imprint of a newspaper), which states that it was Printed in a mangle.
The Parish Registers of Newington, Kent, and of Bures, in Suffolk, which had come into the Library among Dr. Rawlinson's books, were restored to their respective parishes by a decree submitted to Convocation on Nov. 9. In the Register of Convocation itself, by a singular omission, no mention of the former of these parish books is made (although included in the proposal), and the restoration of that of Bures is alone recorded. But by enquiry addressed to the Vicar of Newington, it has been ascertained that one of the Registers contains a memorandum of its having been returned by vote of Convocation on the day in question.

By a vote of Convocation on July 7, the rooms on the first floor of the Schools' quadrangle, which were formerly used as the Hebrew and Greek Schools, were assigned to the Library; the former (on the south side) now contains, in two rooms, the Bodley, Laud, and other collections of MSS.; the latter (on the north side), also in two rooms, the foreign and English periodicals.

On May 25, a plan for warming the Library was, for the first time, adopted. It consisted in introducing hot air simply at two small gratings at one end of the Library, from pipes communicating with a stove placed (with the consent of Exeter College) where the furnace of the present apparatus is situated, in the wall between the north-west corner of the Library and the Ashmolean Museum. As a means of warming the Library generally the system was wholly ineffectual, no benefit being experienced except by those who remained in the immediate vicinity of the gratings. It remained, however, in use until 1845, when pipes were laid down through a considerable part of the Library for the purpose of warming it by steam. This plan, however, did not give satisfaction, either on the ground of safety or of effectiveness. In 1855 Mr. Braidwood, the late distinguished head of the London Fire

---

1 In Lascelles' Account of Oxford, published in this year, it is said that the printed books in the Library were computed at 160,000, and the MSS. at 30,000.
Brigade, was brought down to survey the apparatus and to examine generally how the Library could best be secured against fire; and, by his advice and that of Mr. G. G. Scott, the pipes were enclosed in slate casings, so as effectually to hinder contact with any inflammable materials, and two fire-proof iron doors were inserted at the entrances to the great Reading-room, in order to cut it off from the rest of the building. But in 1861 steam was discarded for the safer and more effectual system, now in use, of warming by hot water; new pipes (cased in slate) were laid down by Messrs. Haden and Son, and were carried through the Examination Schools on the ground-floor of the quadrangle, as well as through the Library.

In Feb. Mr. J. P. Roberts, New College (B.A. 1821, M.A. 1826, now Minor Canon of Chichester) was appointed minister, vice Mr. P. Barrett, Wadham College (B.A. 1828); and Mr. Robert Eden, of St. John's College (Corp. Chr. Coll. B.A. 1825, M.A. 1827, now Vicar of Wymondham, Norfolk), was appointed vice Walker. From this time there appear to have been two assistants, although it was not until 1837 that that number was formally allowed by Statute.

A.D. 1822.

In July, the Rev. Dr. Bliss returned to the Library as Sub-librarian, in the room of Mr. Nicoll, appointed Regius Professor of Hebrew. And in October the Rev. Rich. French Laurence, M.A., of Pembroke College, succeeded Dr. Cotton, who quitted Oxford for Ireland.

'Tuesday, August 6, 1822, I was at the Library the whole day, and not a single member of the University came into the room, excepting Mr. Eden, the assistant. Oxford race-day.' This note

1 Mr. Braidwood's report was printed in 1856, together with one from Mr. Scott, on the extension of the Library, and the means of rendering it fire-proof.
An account of the Picture Gallery at the University of Bologna, and the muses of variiety and abundance which are associated with the name. A subscription list was raised to purchase and maintain the Picture Gallery and to supply the society with all the finest buildings of Greek and Roman antiquity. The result was that in the present year the Picture Gallery at Bologna, a new series of works, was placed in the Library.

A large number of works in natural sciences, chiefly theological, was bought in Italy by the aid of the Library of New College, B.A. 1822, M.A. 1825. B.D. 1827, was appointed in December to assist in the completion of the new catalogue. But how long he remained in the Library does not appear.
A. D. 1824.

A collection of valuable original papers relating to affairs in Church and State, which had belonged to Archbishop Sheldon, were sold by his great-nephew, Sir John English Dolben, of Finedon, Northamptonshire, to the Library for £40 5s. They are now bound in six volumes, of which three are lettered Sheldon, and three Dolben. Of the first three, two contain letters from English, Welsh, Scotch and Irish Bishops, and the contents of the other are miscellaneous; of the second three, one contains miscellaneous letters and papers commencing at 1585, another has similar papers from 1626 to 1721, and the third contains miscellaneous ecclesiastical letters and documents. Some of the letters are addressed to the Archbishop's secretary, Miles Smyth, Esq. A short letter from Sir John Dolben to Dr. Bandinel, relating to his disposal of these papers, dated Oct. 12, 1824, is preserved in Bodl. MS. Addit. ii. A. 32. He had previously given, in 1822, a fine copy of a quarto Bible which had belonged to Sheldon, containing (1) the Prayer-Book and Metrical Psalms, printed at Cambridge in 1638, (2) the Old Test., printed by Field at London in 1648, and (3) the New Test., Cambr. 1637. At the end are some memoranda by the Archbishop of the births, baptisms, and deaths of members of the Sheldon and Okeover families, and of the legitimate children of Charles II and the Duke of York. The Library more than a century before had received benefactions from a member of the same family of Dolben; Gilbert Dolben, of Finedon, having given some printed books in 1697, together with a manuscript of Gower. And twenty vols. of Chamberlaine's State of Great Britain were given by Mr. J. E. Dolben in 1796. An additional volume of the Sheldon correspondence was given to the Library in 1840, by Dr. Routh, the President of Magdalen
The President takes the opportunity of sending a volume containing the first intaglio of letters sent by Archbp. Sheldon to different persons, together with a few other contemporary papers. They were put into the President's hands by the late Sir John English, D.C.L., and as the University purchased of that gentleman what were commonly called the Sheldon Papers, he thinks they cannot be deposited anywhere more suitably than in the Bodleian Library.

To the annual catalogue for this year was attached a special list, filling thirty-two folio pages, of the books (upwards of 1500 in number) which were bought at the Hague, at the sale of the library collected by the distinguished Dutch scholars and lawyers, Gerard and John Meerman. The sale-catalogue is a volume of more than 1000 pages. The books bought for the Library were chiefly such as supplied deficiencies in foreign history and law, together with some Greek and Latin MSS. for the most part papyraceous and classical. The sum expended was £925. Some rare Spanish historical books in which class of literature, thanks to Dr. Burnet's care in keeping it steadily in view, the Library is now very rich, were bought at the sale of Don J. Ant. Conde.

But the chief distinction of this year lies in the acquisition, by request of Mrs. Elizabeth Dennis Denyer (widow of Mr. John Denyer, of Chelsea, who died in 1800) of a most valuable collection of early editions of the English Bible, numbering altogether about twenty-five. To show the rarity and worth

---

1 These, in number thirty-eight, are described in Mr. Coxe's Catalogue, cols. 714-715. An eighteenth-century copy of Eusebius' Chronicon is among the Latin MSS.
of this collection, it will be sufficient to mention but a few of the volumes which it contains. Imprimis, Coverdale's first edition, 1535, and his second edition, 1537; Cranmer's, in April, 1540 and in 1541, and by Grafton in 1553; Matthew's, by Becke, in 1551; Tyndale's New Testament, in 1536, and another of his earliest editions; Hollybush's English and Latin Testament, 1538, and Erasmus' Testament, 1540. Besides the Biblical collection, Mrs. Denyer also bequeathed twenty-one English theological works, nearly all printed before 1600; including a beautiful copy of Fisher on the Penitential Psalms (by Wynkyn de Worde) and books by (amongst others) Bale, Bonner, Brightwell, Erasmus, Hooper, Joye, and Tonstall.

Mr. L. E. Judge, New College (B.A. 1827, M.A. 1830; Chaplain; deceased 1853), succeeded Mr. Roberts, in March, as assistant; but in July of the next year retired, and was succeeded by Mr. W. Bailey, also of New College (B.A. 1829).

A.D. 1825.

The sale at Paris of the library of L. M. Langlès, the keeper of the Oriental MSS. in the Bibl. Royale, afforded a large accesion of books in that branch of literature which was his specialty.

Mr. Sim. J. Etty, New College (B.A. 1829, M.A. 1832, now Vicar of Wanborough, Wilts), was appointed assistant in the room of Mr. Eden. Mr. Etty remained in the Library until the year 1834. The Catalogue of Dissertationes Academica, which appeared in 1832, was in a great measure his work.

1 Wanting title and map. A title had been supplied by Mrs. Denyer, who in several instances had supplied deficiencies very successfully in pen and ink; a perfect facsimile, however, by Mr. J. Harris, which might pass for the original, were not the minute mark 'Ps. T. H.' seen on the back of the page, has since been substituted. It is a marvel of calligraphic skill. Another imperfect copy came to the Library among Selden's books.
additions were made in 1836 and 1837, but particularly in 1846, when no fewer than 7000 were purchased.

Mr. Henry Forster, New College (B.A. 1832, M.A. 1834; Esquire Bedel of Divinity; deceased 1857), succeeded Mr. Bailey, in March, as Assistant.

1 There is scarcely an imaginable subject in law, theology, or history, on which something may not be found in this vast collection. The something may often be meagre and superficial, but it is still oftener curious, and even in the former case it may be useful as pointing to sources of further information. In days of Ritual controversy, one party or another may be glad to know that in 1735, George Henry Goetz, D.D., wrote on the interesting question whether a clergyman might do duty in his dressing-gown,—Num Verbi ministero toga cubicularia (Schlaffpeltze) induito officio sacro defungi liceat? Those who know what curses were invoked of old upon the heads of stealers of books, may be interested in hearing what one Pipping had to say on the subject in 1721, in his Diss. de Imprecationibus libris ascriptis; while the title of Sam. Schelting's discourse in 1729, De Apparitionibus mortuorum vivis ex pacto factis, will have attraction for not a few. Sometimes the drearest subjects were lightened up at the close with ponderous jokes, or unexpected turns were given to the matter in hand; e.g. those worthy Germans who had gone to sleep at Jena, in 1660, during the reading of a dissertation De Jure et Potestate Parliamenti Britannici, by one J. A. Gerhard, (who must have taken unusual interest in the history of the English Rebellion,) were wakened up at the end by the discussion of the following novel questions in law:—Casus ex jure privato.

It was usual for the friends of the candidate who defended the thesis of the Dissertation (generally written for him by the Press) to attach some complimentary letters or verses. In the case of those published at Upsal, the zeal of the encomiasts frequently breaks out into wild compositions in Hebrew, Greek, French, German and English, affording in the latter instance (and it may be in others) very curious specimens of the language. A laborious trier, named P. Wettersten, compliments a friend, who had read at Upsal, in 1742, a dissertation by Prof. Peter Ekerman on the antiquities of a small town called Norkoping, with a kind of acrostic in twenty-five lines on the verse, 'Nunc erit et seclis Norcopia clara futuris,' which, starting from the centre of the page, may be read upwards, downwards, and in every form of many irregularity; every way, in short, except the right.
...
The great Hebrew collection, which at present forms so distinguished a feature in the contents of the Library, was virtually commenced in this year by the purchase, at Hamburg (for £2080), of the famous Oppenheimer library, consisting of upwards of 5000 volumes, of which 780 are MSS. Many Hebrew works had, it is true, come with Selden’s library, in 1659; but little or nothing had been done since that period to advance upon that beginning. The additions made in this department from 1844 up to about the year 1857, are said, in Dr. Steinschneider’s introduction to his catalogue (col. 50), to have numbered no fewer than about 2100 volumes.

David Oppenheimer, Chief Rabbi at Prague, devoted more than half a century to the formation of his library. On his death, Sept. 23, 1735, it came into the possession of his son, a Rabbi at Hildesheim, and thence into the hands of Isaac Seligmann at Hamburg. Several catalogues were issued during this period, the last being one in octavo, at Hamburg, in 1826, an index to which, compiled by Dr. J. Goldenthal, was printed at the expense of the Library in 1845. The collection would have been dispersed by auction, had it not been bought en masse for Oxford. It possesses extreme interest and value in the eyes of Jewish students, insomuch that for a series of years the Library was never without several foreign visitors engaged in its examination. A very elaborate catalogue of all the printed Hebrew books

---

1 One MS. which had strayed from Oppenheimer’s library previously to its transfer to the Bodleian, was purchased and restored to its place in 1847.

2 A notice of the Oppenheimer collection, and of the other Hebrew portions of the Library is given in the preface to vol. iii. of Fürst’s Bibliotheca Judaica, 8o. Leips. 1863, pp. 42-51. The Catalogus Interpretum S. Script., by Thomas James, in 1635, is here metamorphosed into one by Thomas Jones, in 1735.
ANNALS OF THE 1829

contained in it, and throughout the whole of the Library, was compiled by Dr. M. Steinschneider during the years 1850-1860, and printed at Berlin, where it was published in the latter year in a very thick quarto volume. The book is divided into two parts: the first containing a description of the Biblical, Talmudical, liturgical and anonymous volumes; the second containing the works of miscellaneous authors, in the alphabetical order of their names. Prefixed is a brief list of the Hebrew MSS. in the Library, with the numbers at present attached to them, and references to the catalogues in which they are described. Of several rare books in the Oppenheimer library there are duplicate copies, varying in condition and ornamentation; of some there are copies on red, yellow, and blue paper. Distinguished amongst all is a copy of the Talmud, printed in 1713-28, in twenty-four folio volumes, entirely on vellum. 'Perhaps,' says Archdeacon Cotton, 'this work is the grandest and most extensive vellum publication extant.'

Mr. Robert Bowyer, miniature painter to Queen Charlotte, who had devoted a considerable part of his life to the collection of drawings and engravings illustrating the Holy Scriptures, put forward a proposal for their purchase by subscription with a view to their being deposited in the Bodleian. Their number amounted to nearly seven thousand (including 113 drawings by Loutherbourg), described as being in fine condition and of great value; and they were inserted as additional illustrations in a copy of Macklin's folio Bible, which was enlarged thereby from its original extent of seven volumes to forty-five. Hence the collection passed, and passes, under the name of Bowyer's Bible. Mr. Bowyer, who had spent upon it upwards of three thousand pounds, proposed to dispose of it for £2500, and a committee was formed in London, upon which appeared the names of many distinguished persons, to raise a subscription for the purpose. But upon Mr. Bowyer's despatching an agent to Oxford, the matter met with so little encouragement here, the Librarian, in particular, being (as Dr. Bliss has noted upon his copy of the original proposal) unfavourable to it, that the project fell to the ground. The reasons why Oxford made so little response do not appear; probably the value set upon the collection was deemed to be greatly exaggerated. After the death of Mr. Bowyer (June 4, 1834, aged seventy-six) the Bible came into the hands of one Mrs. Parkes, of Golden Square, by whom it was disposed of, in 1848, in a lottery (together with a few other prizes) for which four thousand tickets were issued at one guinea each. The successful speculator was Mr. Saxon, a gentleman-farmer, near Shepton Mallet. In 1852 it was in the hands of Messrs. Puttick and Simpson, the well-known book-auctioneers, for sale. By them it was announced for an auction on Feb. 26, 1853, and was disposed of, about that time, to Messrs. Willis and Sotheran, the booksellers, for about £500. Since then it has been announced for sale at Manchester.

1 Typographical Gazetteer, p. 349.

A.D. 1830.

A copy of the rare edition of Luther's translation of the Bible, printed at Wittemberg in 1541, was bought, through Messrs. Payne and Foss, for fifty guineas, at the sale, in London, of the library of the Archdeacon de la Tour, of Hildesheim, which was said to have been formerly the property of the English Benedictine Monastery of Landspring, and which was then, it appears, in the possession of Mr. — Solly. It contains some texts on the fly-leaves in the autograph, and with the signatures, of both Luther and Melanchthon, which seem to have been unnoticed at the time of the sale. A facsimile of a part of Luther's inscription is given in plate xxxi. in Mr. Leigh Sotheby's Illustrations of the Handwriting of Melanchthon. The book is now exhibited in a glass case, in one of the windows of the Library.

A.D. 1831.

In December of this year, Viscount Kingsborough presented a magnificent copy (being one of four which were printed on vellum) of his Antiquities of Mexico, or coloured facsimiles, executed at his expense, in seven folio volumes, of Mexican paintings and hieroglyphics preserved in the libraries of Paris, Berlin, Dresden, Vienna, Rome, Bologna, and Oxford (in Laud's and Selden's collections), together with preliminary dissertations. This sumptuous book is exhibited near the entrance of the library, in a case made expressly for its reception.

On June 30, the nomination, as Sub-librarian, of Rev. Ernest Hawkins, M.A., of Balliol, afterwards Fellow of Exeter, (of late well-known for his labours in the cause of Missions, as Secretary to the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel), was approved by Convocation. He succeeded Dr. Besly, who had taken the Balliol College living of Long Benton, in Northumberland.

A.D. 1832.

A twelfth-century MS. of Scholia on the Odyssey was purchased for £100. The collection of Bibles, which had during some time past made some slow progress, was increased by copies of various

---

1 A copy of this edition, with MS. notes by Luther, Melanchthon, Bugenhagen and Major, was sold to the British Museum, at Hibbert's sale in 1829, for £367 15s. 1

2 This learned and spirited nobleman died, in 1837, in a debtors' prison in Dublin, where he was confined for liabilities incurred on behalf of his father, the Earl of Kingston.
early printed versions in European languages, and its further enlargement was steadily kept in view in succeeding years.

Six guineas were given for copies of Servetus' treatise De Trinitatis erroribus and his Dialogi de Trinitate, printed in 1531 and 1532, which are of very great rarity, in consequence of their having very generally shared the fate of their author.

A.D. 1833.

Some precious Shakespearian volumes, consisting of the Venus and Adonis of 1594 and 1617, the Lucrece of 1594 and 1616, with a subsequent edition of 1655, and the Sonnets of 1609, were presented by the well-known collector, Mr. Thomas Caldecott, who had been formerly a Fellow of New College. They are now incorporated with the Malone collection. Several MSS. of Sir William Jones were presented by the brothers Augustus and Julius C. Hare. An interesting and large collection of tracts on the Roman Catholic disabilities, affairs in Ireland, &c, in forty-five volumes, was purchased at the sale of the library of Charles Butler, of Lincoln's Inn.

An anonymous pamphlet, entitled, A Few Words on the Bodleian Library, appeared in this year; its author was Sir Edmund Head, M.A., Merton College. The object was to urge the desirableness of allowing books to be borrowed from the Library, after the example of Cambridge. One of the arguments by which the author supported the proposal, viz. that College tutors were unable to visit the Library in term time during the hours at which it is open, has since been entirely removed by the attachment of the Radcliffe Library as a Reading-room, which remains open until ten o'clock at night. The pamphlet was reprinted in the Report of the University Commission in 1852.
A.D. 1834.

Numerous purchases were made during the sale of Mr. Heber's library. Amongst these were some rare English tracts of the Reformers, Bale, Becon, Tyndal, Knox, &c; a large and valuable collection of booksellers' catalogues and sale catalogues of books and coins between 1726 and 1814; and a mass of some 1100 or 1200 plays, published in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. Numerous early Shakespeare editions were also obtained; inter alia, the first edition (1594) of the first part of the Contention between the Houses of Yorke and Lancaster, for £64; Richard III, 1598, £17; fourth edit. of Henry IV, 1608, £12 12s. 6d., &c. The greater part of the collection of editions of Horace up to the year 1738, formed by Dr. Douglas, a collection which was used in the preparation of the edition published at London, by James Watson, in 1760, was bought for £20. It consists of twenty-seven vols. in folio, thirty-nine in quarto, and 248 in octavo and smaller sizes. Dibdin (Intro. to the Classic) says that the whole collection consisted of 450 editions. A Prayer-Book of 1707, with MSS. collations by Rev. John Lewis, of Margate, of alterations in editions between 1540 and 1637, was bought for £8 8s. One of the chief gems in the Picture Gallery was bequeathed by James Paine, Esq., being the portrait of his father, James Paine, the architect, while instructing his son in drawing, by Sir Joshua Reynolds. This beautiful picture has retained its freshness of colour far more perfectly than 1 Another collection of sale catalogues in forty-five vols. was purchased in 1836.

---

2 Another collection, in twenty-eight vols., of plays chiefly dating from 1630 to 1707, was bought, in 1842, for £6 17s.
3 In 1857, Romeo and Juliet, printed by Smethwicke, n. d., was bought for £3 10s.; in 1840, Richard III, 1605, for £21, and Hamlet, 1611, for £10 10s.; and in 1841 the first edit. 1595, of part iii. of Henry VI, was bought at Chalmers' sale for £13 11.
4 Mr. Paine died in France in 1789, aged 73 years. The picture was painted by Reynolds in June, 1764. Among the buildings erected by Paine were Brocket Hall, Herts; Wardour Castle, Wilts; and Richmond Bridge.
most others of Sir Joshua's paintings; and it has recently, under the direction of the present Librarian, been carefully cleaned, and protected with glass and a curtain, that its brilliancy may incur no risk of deterioration. But this year is chiefly distinguished in the Annals of the Library by the bequest of the Douce Collection.

Francis Douce, the donor of this magnificent library (who died on March 30, in this year), is said to have been induced to make this disposition of his treasures through the courteous reception afforded to him by Dr. Bandinel, upon the occasion of a visit to Oxford, in 1830. The gatherings of a lifetime with which the Bodleian was thus enriched, consist of 393 manuscripts, ninety-eight charters, about 16,480 printed volumes, a very large collection of early and valuable prints and drawings, and some coins. For the most part, the books which thus came were of classes in which the Library was then deficient. Nearly all the finest specimens of Missal-painting which it now possesses are found among the Douce MSS., several of which are exhibited in a glass case at the further end of the Library. Chief among these are three volumes of Horae, one executed, perhaps by G. da Libri, at the beginning of the sixteenth century for Leonora Gonzaga, Duchess of Urbino, a second belonged to Mary de Medici, and the other was completed in 1527 for B. Sforza, second wife of Sigism. I of Poland. These are priceless gems, rivalled only by such as the Bedford Missal. In the same case is a Psalter on purple vellum, probably of the ninth century, which came from the old Royal Library of France, and which, from this circumstance

1 To the British Museum Mr. Douce bequeathed his own Diaries and Notebooks, to remain sealed up until Jan. 1, 1900, in order that all of his own and the succeeding generation may have passed away before the personal histories which they undoubtedly contain are brought to light.
and its age, has sometimes been called Charlemagne's Psalter. The printed books are rich in history, biography, antiquities, manners and customs, and the fine arts. In Bibles (English and French), Horæ, Primers, Books of Common Prayer and Psalters, the collection is very strong. Among the Psalters is a copy of Archbishop Parker's rare metrical version. Early French literature is also a conspicuous feature, in which the Library had previously been very deficient. Of fifteenth-century typography there are no fewer than 311 specimens. The finest of these is a magnificent copy of Christoforo Landino's Italian translation of Pliny's Natural History, printed on vellum by Nic. Janson, at Venice, in 1476. It is enriched with exquisite illuminated borders at the commencement of each book, a specimen of which, together with a description of the volume, is given in Shaw's Illuminated Ornaments, pl. xxxviii. There are also a large number of fragments of works by early English printers, including two by Caxton, which are unique. One of these is a portion (two quarters of an octavo or duodecimo sheet) of an edition of the Horæ, conjecturally assigned by Mr. Blades to 1478, and the other is of an edition of the Booke of Curtesye, probably printed in 1491, consisting of two quarters of pages. There is also one of the two known copies of a curious placard, issued by Caxton, inviting those who were disposed to buy 'ony pyes of two and thre commemoracions of Salisburi vse' to come to him at Westminster, and they should have them 'good

1 In the majority of instances the books bear MS. notes by Douce, which often are valuable for the references they afford to other works and sources of further information. A few specimens of some of the fuller notes of this kind were contributed by the present writer to the early volumes of the second series of Notes and Quaries. One book, viz. John Weever's Epigrammes, 1599, containing notes by Douce, which had somehow escaped from his library before it came to Oxford, was purchased in 1838, for £14.10s. A letter written by Douce in 1804, dated from the British Museum, where he was for a short time Keeper of the MSS., was bought in 1864, and a few other papers in 1866.

2 In the same beautiful volume are facsimiles from three of Douce's MS. Horæ. —— chepe†. The other copy is in the possession of Earl Spencer. A very different, but still very curious, item is a large collection of chap-books and children’s penny books of the last century and commencement of the present; and two folio volumes are filled with black-letter ballads. A catalogue of the library was published in one volume, in folio, in 1840; the part containing the printed books was the work of Mr. H. Symonds, of Magdalen Hall (B.A. 1840, M.A. 1842, now Precentor of Norwich), and that which describes the Fragments, the Charters and the Manuscripts was drawn up by Rev. H. O. Coxe. From the year 1839 until the commencement of 1842, Mr. Thomas Dodd, formerly a well-known London dealer in prints, and author of the Connoisseur’s Repertory, was employed in making a catalogue of the Douce prints and drawings. This catalogue still remains in MS. Four very grand studies of heads, drawn either by Raffaelle or Giulio Romano, have recently been framed and hung at the western end of the Library.

On June 25, Convocation sanctioned the transfer to the Library of the room immediately over the entrance in the gateway-tower of the Schools, (now called the Mason Room) which had been hitherto assigned as the ‘Savile Study,’ on condition that a small room in the adjoining south-east angle of the quadrangle should be prepared at the expense of the Bodleian for the reception of the MSS. and printed books, instruments, &c, which were given to the University by Sir Henry Savile for the use of his Professors. This is the room in which the Savile library (which includes also some books given by Dr. Wallis and Sir Christopher Wren) is still preserved, under the charge of the Savilian Professors of Geometry and Astronomy.

On July 5, Convocation confirmed the nomination of Rev. William Cureton, M.A., of Ch. Ch. (afterwards so well known for his Syriac studies, which gained him the patronage of the Prince Consort and a Canonry at Westminster), to the Sub-librarianship vacated by Rev. E. Hawkins.

† A facsimile of this advertisement is given in the catalogue of the Douce library.

Mr. Edmund Grove, of Magdalen College (who never graduated), was appointed Assistant in April, \textit{vice} Mr. Stephen Exup. Wentworth, of Balliol (B.A. 1833, M.A. 1835). Mr. Wentworth appears to have succeeded Mr. Forster in 1832.

A.D. 1835.

The original MS. of Burnet’s \textit{History of his Own Times}, with a copy prepared for the press, a portion of his \textit{History of the Reformation}, and some other papers by him, was purchased, from a family descended from the Bishop, for £210. An account of these MSS. may be found at p. 474 of the Appendix to Burnet’s \textit{History of James II}, being an extract from the \textit{Own Times} which Dr. Routh edited, with additional notes, when ninety-six years old, in 1852. The copy prepared for the press is expressly mentioned in the catalogue for 1835 as forming part of the purchase; and yet that copy appears from a passage in a letter from Rawlinson, dated Aug. 18, 1743, to have been then in the hands of that collector, whence it would have been supposed that it must have passed at once into the possession of the Library. After mentioning the book, Rawlinson says, ‘I purchased the MSS. of a gentleman who corrected the press where that book was printed, and amongst his papers I have all the castrations.’

The MS. of Lewis’ \textit{Life of Wyclif}, with some additions by the author, was bought for £4 14s. 6d. Various other MSS. by Lewis were already in the Library among Dr. Rawlinson’s collections. The purchases of printed books were chiefly amongst early editions of Classics (Juvenal, Ovid, Virgil, &c), Fathers

\footnote{Ballard MS. ii. 88.}
(Augustine, Jerome), Schoolmen, and a very large series of fifteenth-century editions of the Decretals, Digest, Institutes, and other works in Canon and Civil Law. These were obtained at the sale of the famous library of Dr. Kloss, of Frankfort, whose collection was so remarkably rich in books bearing MS. notes by Melanchthon.

A curious collection of papers and pamphlets, printed and MS., relating to Spanish affairs, and of much interest to students of Spanish history, contained in thirty-two volumes in folio and eighty in quarto, was purchased for £40. It was lot 4583 in Heber's sale, by whom it had been bought at the Yriarte sale for more than £100.

A.D. 1836.

Aubrey's collection of notes and drawings concerning Dravidical and Roman antiquities in Britain, together with some miscellaneous historical notes, entitled by him Monumenta Britannica, in four parts (now bound in two folio volumes), was purchased, for £50, of Col. Charles Greville. Accounts of Abury and Stonehenge, which are important from their early date (the former being the earliest known), are to be found in these curious and interesting volumes¹. The remainder of Aubrey's MSS. came to the Library in 1860, upon the transfer of the books from the Ashmolean Museum. See sub anno 1858.

A collection of about 300 tracts, relating to American affairs and the War of Independence, in forty-one vols., formed by Rev.

¹ A short description of them will be found in Gough's Brit. Topogr., vol. ii. pp. 365-70, and a fuller account in Britton's Memoir of Aubrey, 1845, pp. 87-91. Mr. Britton, however, strange to say, was not aware that the volumes had been for nine years in safe custody in the Bodleian, and consequently deplores their unfortunate disappearance! He describes their contents from an abstract in the Gough collection.
Jonathan Boucher\textsuperscript{1}, was bought for £8 18s. 6d. These are now included in the series of tracts called \textit{Godwyn Pamphlets}, in continuation of those which came, in 1770, from the donor so named. Another large gathering of American tracts, collected by Mr. George Chalmers, when engaged in writing his \textit{History of the Revolt}, was bought in 1841 for £24 13s.; at the same time, the first and only volume of his \textit{History}, which itself was never actually published, was bought for £2 7s.

\textit{Sale Catalogues.} See 1834.

When the new Copyright Act was introduced into Parliament in this year, it was proposed to allow £500 \textit{per annum} to the Bodleian, in the manner adopted with regard to six other libraries, in lieu of the old privilege of receiving a copy of every book entered at Stationers’ Hall. The Curators, however, on May 27, resolved that it would be highly desirable to retain the privilege, but that, should an alteration be made, it would be inexpedient to receive an annual grant by way of compensation; and in consequence of this opinion, the proposed abolition of the privilege was abandoned.

A.D. 1837.

The magnificent series of historical prints and drawings which is called, from the name of its collectors and its donor, the Sutherland collection, was presented to the University on May 4 in this year, although it was not actually deposited in the Library until March, 1839\textsuperscript{2}. The six volumes of the folio editions of Clarendon’s \textit{History of the Rebellion} and \textit{Life}, and of Burnet’s \textit{Old Sun Times}, are inlaid and bound in sixty-one elephant folio volumes.

\textsuperscript{1} An account of Mr. Boucher, who quitted America on account of his royal principles, and afterwards was Head-Master of a well-known school at Chesh., will be found in \textit{Notes and Queries} for 1866, vol. ix. pp. 75, 284.

\textsuperscript{2} MS. note by Mrs. Sutherland in the Library copy of her catalogue. and illustrated with the enormous number of 19,224 portraits of every person and views of every place in any way mentioned in the text, or connected with its subject-matter. The gathering was commenced in 1795 by Alexander Hendras Sutherland, Esq., F.S.A.; on his death (May 21, 1820) it was taken up by his widow, who spared neither labour nor money to render it as complete as possible, and by whom its contents were, consequently, nearly doubled. At length, desiring, in accordance with her husband's will, that the results of her own and his labour should be always preserved intact, Mrs. Sutherland presented the whole collection to the Bodleian. Its extent may be in some degree appreciated when it is mentioned that there are (according to Mrs. Sutherland's statement in the preface to the Supplementary Catalogue) 184 portraits of James I, of which 135 are distinct plates; 743 of Charles I, of which 573 are distinct plates, besides sixteen drawings; 373 of Cromwell (253 plates); 552 of Charles II (428 plates); 276 of James II; 176 of Mary II (143 plates); and 431 of William III, of which 363 are separate plates. There are also 309 views of London and 166 of Westminster. Amongst those of London is a drawing on many sheets, by a Dutch artist, Antonio van den Wyngaerde, executed between 1558-1563. It affords a view which extends from the Palace at Westminster to that at Greenwich, both included; and comprehends also Lambeth Palace and part of Southwark, with the palace

---

1 As early as 1819 the collection numbered 10,000 prints, bound in 57 volumes.
2 Mrs. Sutherland died March 18, 1852.
3 In Mrs. Sutherland's own copy of the catalogue (now in the possession of E. L. Hussey, Esq., Oxford), some of these numbers are enlarged in MS. as follows: Charles II, 557, being 432 plates; Cromwell, 379, 355 plates; William III, 436, 367 plates. Amongst the portraits, there are frequently numerous copies of the same plate, being impressions in all its different states. In a few instances (particularly with regard to Charles I) some of the prints entered in the catalogue have not been found in the volumes.
there of the Protector Somerset, in which the Mint was situated. The whole amount expended on the formation of the series is estimated at £20,000.

The collection is accompanied by a handsomely printed Catalogue, compiled by Mrs. Sutherland, and published in 1837 in three volumes quarto, two containing the portraits, and one the topography. A Supplement to this was printed in the following year, in the preface to which Mrs. Sutherland records her transfer of the collection. She adds that 'the University of Oxford, by the manner in which it has received the collection, has afforded her the high gratification of witnessing the fulfilment, in their utmost extent, of the wishes of its founder; and in the liberal step which its future conservators have taken, to insure a direct and easy means of reference to the prints, she finds proof of their intention to comply with her own earnest desire, that the books should be as freely open to those really interested in them as may be consistent with their safe preservation. Under the superintendence of the compiler, but at the expense of the University, a copy of the Catalogue has been prepared, in which every print is marked with the page which it respectively fills in the volumes; by means of this, every difficulty of reference, and every doubt as to the print intended to be described, is obviated, and the manuscript indices will be preserved from the injury of constant use. In order to prevent the possibility of disappointment in referring from this marked catalogue, every print (with four exceptions only) of which the page has not been ascertained, has been struck out, although probably several of the portraits not at present

1 Ten copies were printed of a larger and finer edition, for presentation to various Libraries, but as only four of these (Bodleian, Cambridge University, British Museum, and Bibl. Royale, Paris) acknowledged the gift (the letters from which are preserved in one copy of the catalogue), no more than five copies were printed of the Supplement. Consequently those Libraries which did not return thanks for the gift have now an imperfect book.
found are still in the volumes.' The following letter of thanks was addressed by Convocation to the donor:

'To Mrs. Sutherland, of Merrow, in the County of Surrey.

'Madam,—We, the Chancellor, Masters and Scholars of the University of Oxford, feel ourselves called upon to acknowledge, in a public and formal manner, the splendid donation recently made by you to our Bodleian Library.

'It is doubtless a source of much gratification to us that our University should have been selected by you as the fittest depository of so valuable a collection; but we are not, on that account, less disposed to appreciate and admire the feeling which has led you to make so considerable a sacrifice, and to relinquish the possession of what has been to you, for many years, an object of constant interest and occupation.

'We shall prize the matchless volumes about to be committed to our care, not merely as being embellished with the richest specimens of the graphic art, but as possessing a real historical character; as enhancing, in no slight degree, the value of works which we have long been accustomed to regard as most important contributions to the annals and literature of our Country.

'Given at our House of Convocation, under our Common Seal, this first day of June, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty-seven.'

1 It is here printed from the original (written in the beautifully neat hand of the late Registrar, Dr. Bliss,) which is now in the possession of a nephew of Mrs. Sutherland, Edw. Law Hussey, Esq., of Oxford, M.R.C.S. It is sealed with the old University seal, described on p. 1 of these Annals, enclosed in a gold box. The late Rev. R. Hussey, Regius Professor of Ecclesiastical History, was one of the brothers of Mrs. Sutherland.

2 A very erroneous notice of the collection, written in a singularly depreciatory tone, was inserted in an article in the Quarterly Review, in 1853, vol. xci. p. 217. The writer appears to have confounded the facts connected with Gough's preference of the Bodleian to the British Museum (as told in Nichols' Lit. Hist.), or possibly Douce's, with the totally different circumstances of Mrs. Sutherland's gift, whose husband had left the collection entirely at her disposal, provided only that it were not dispersed.
A few other books were sent by Mrs. Sutherland at the same time, including Berwick's Shakespeare, Hector's Chronicle, Scott's edition of Gentlemen's Dictionary of Charles II, Faber's Kit-Cat Book, Wilson's Annals of an American, etc. And in 1843 she increased her former gift by the presentation of copies of a large number of illuminated, biographical, and historical works, many of which are in a like manner enriched with additional engravings. The latter among these is a copy of Burke's edition of Walpole's Royal and Wise Letters, damaged from five vols. 12mo to 20 vols. 4vo, by the insertion of plates, portraits, and some of the original drawings. Similar damaged copies of Dr. Johnson's works are also included; together with framed half-portraits of Frederick, King of Bohemia, and of Mr. Sutherland.

A curious collection of rare Dutch tales, in two vols. printed at Amsterdom between 1767 and 1768, and translated into English, Irish, and Scotch dialects chiefly during the Civil Wars, was bought by the 12mo. And an enormous gathering of English narratives, on every kind of subject in prose and verse, between 1000 and 2000, of various depths of genius and which the reconstruction of the same of the well-known bookseller, Mr. Tomkins, was bought of him for about £100. These were not far from being the rarer of the same in smaller and more literary proportions, and containing remained the most specimens of real literary men's work. But a general description of the books is the taking place in the appearance of the whole, because, according to the bookseller, there were the same. And it was, more particularly, incorporated in the general catalogue when they proved to be a valuable work in the same library, containing an idea of them...
A grant was made by Convocation of £400 annually, for five years, towards the expense of the new Catalogue, the printing of which was commenced in the summer. A statute also was passed providing that there should be two 'ministri,' or assistants, with salaries regulated by the Curators.

The Rev. Herbert Hill, M.A., Fellow of New College, was approved by Convocation, on Oct. 26, as Sub-librarian, in the room of Mr. Cureton, who removed in this year to the British Museum. Mr. Hill, however, only held the office for one year. And Mr. Richard Firth, New College (B.A. 1839, M.A. 1849, now, and from 1850, a Chaplain in the diocese of Madras), became minister in the room of Mr. F. J. Marshall, New College (B.A. 1834, M.A. 1837, Chaplain of New College, deceased 1843), who had probably entered the Library in 1834 in the place of Mr. Etty.

A.D. 1838.

One of the 'curiosities of literature' was obtained by the purchase (for £10 10s.) of the System of Divinity, in a Course of Sermons on the first Institutions of Religion, by Rev. Will. Davy, A.B., Vicar of Lustleigh, Devon. It is a work in twenty-six volumes, of which only fourteen copies were printed, entirely by the hands of the indefatigable author himself, between the years 1795 and 1807. It is very roughly executed, the author having purchased only just so much old and worn-out type, as sufficed for the printing of two pages at once; accomplishing in this way the work upon which he had set his heart, 'arte meâ, diurno nocturnoque labore' (as he says in a Latin preface), in consequence of having failed to procure in any other way the publication of his book. The copy in our Library is distinguished by having many additions inserted, printed (in many cases with later and better type) upon small slips.\footnote{Mr. Davy has had a rival, with much more success, within late years in the}
A set of the Monthly Review, from the commencement to 1828, in 16 volumes, in which the names of the contributors are appended to each article, together with a volume of Correspondence with the Editor, Ralph Griffiths, LL.D., between 1798 and 1834, now numbered Addit. MS. Add. vi. D. 36. was bought for £2.4.

Among the acquisitions were: 1. A collection of twenty-one Latin works, printed between 1608-1635 by the East India Company presented by the Directors, and 2. A valuable series, MS. and printed, of the Statutes of various Italian cities, presented by George Browne Esq., the present baronet, who succeeded to the title in 1840, who also in the years 1839, 1841, and 1843, forwarded large additions to the printed series. These volumes are now kept distinct as a separate collection. Altogether there are seventy-eight printed volumes, besides four MSS.

In Nov. 18, a Statute was approved by Convocation which raised the expense of the Sub-librarians from £150 to £250.

From the year 1823 an annual list Catalogue had been printed, containing the list of all the acquisitions occurring in each year.
from purchases, gifts, and the supply of new publications from Stationers' Hall. The issue of these lists was discontinued after the appearance of that for the years 1837 and 1838 jointly; except that in 1843 one for that year was printed in octavo.

A form of declaration and promise for due use of the privilege of admission to the Library, to be made by all graduates upon taking their first degree, in lieu of the oath formerly required, was approved by Convocation, on June 9. In accordance with this form, which is still used, each graduate now promises: 'Me libros ceterumque cultum sic tractaturum ut superesse quam diutissime possint, et, quantum in me est, curaturum ne quid Bibliotheca detrimenti aut incommodi capiat.' The same declaration is subscribed in the Library by all non-graduates who are admitted to read there, with the addition of a promise that they will devote their attention 'ad studia et silentium.' The statutable penalty for any wilful mutilation or abstraction of any book, or portion of a book, is immediate expulsion from the Library and University, 'sine ulla spe regressus.'

On the resignation of Rev. H. Hill, Sub-librarian, in this year, he was succeeded by Rev. H. O. Coxe, M.A., of Worcester College, who had previously worked for five years and a-half in the Department of MSS. in the British Museum. Mr. Coxe's nomination was approved by Convocation on Nov. 16.

A.D. 1839.

An application was made by Magdalen College for the return of a copy of the Statutes of the College, found among the Raw-

1 A previous proposal of this alteration had been rejected by Convocation on March 17, 1836.
2 Mr. Coxe had a considerable share in the compilation of the folio catalogue of the Arundel MSS. preserved in the Museum.
linson MSS., but it was refused by the Curators, on the ground that sufficient evidence was not produced of its having ever been the property of the College.

A.D. 1840.

Ninety specimens of the Aldine press, together with other volumes chiefly printed at Venice by A. de Asula, were purchased at the sale of the library of Dr. Samuel Butler, Bishop of Lichfield. From the same library was purchased, in the following year, a collection of portions of more than twenty of the very earliest editions of Donatus' De Octo Partibus Orationis, many of which were unknown; these had previously come from the library of Dr. Kloss. A ninth-century MS. of St. Gregory's Sacramentary was purchased for £63; and early MSS. of Juvenal, Lucan, &c. A fine and perfect copy of Caxton's Dicte and Sayinges of the Philosophres, printed in 1477, was purchased for £50. It had previously been sold, at Dr. Vincent's sale in 1816, for £99 15s.; this sum, which is marked in pencil on a fly-leaf, having been altered by some practical joker, by the insertion of a figure, to £199 15s., Mr. Blades has in consequence recorded that as being the price at which the Library secured the volume.

The Rev. Rob. J. M'Ghee, Rector of Holywell, Hunts, de­posited in the Bodleian (as also in the University Library, Cambridge, and in that of Trinity College, Dublin,) a collection of thirty-one volumes relating to the controversy with the Church

---

1 As Mr. Blades' valuable work on The Life and Typography of Caxton, 1863, gives most accurate descriptions of all the copies and fragments of our great printer's works which are preserved in the Library, it is only necessary to refer the reader to it for detailed information. A notice of two, however, which were unknown to be Caxtons at the time of Mr. Blades' investigations, will be found in the account of Bishop Tanner's books, p. 155; and two fragments, among Douce's books, are mentioned at p. 250.
of Rome, and to the Moral Theology taught at Maynooth. The volumes consist of editions of the Douay and Rheims versions, of some Irish diocesan Statutes, of Bailly’s Theologia Moralis, and Delahogue’s Dogmatic Treatises, and of various Irish polemical pamphlets; and they are enclosed in a mahogany case, with glass door. In consequence of reference having been made to this collection by the donor, at a County Meeting held at Huntingdon, Dec. 28, 1850, upon the occasion of the ‘Papal Aggression,’ some slight degree of public attention was called to it; and a controversial volume was in consequence published by Mr. M’Ghee, in 1852, entitled, The Church of Rome; a Report on the Books and Documents on the Papacy, deposited in the University Library, Cambridge,’ &c.

Shakespeare; Richard III and Hamlet. See 1834.

The first non-academic minister was appointed in Mr. H. S.

Harper (vice Mr. Firth), of whose valuable services and acquaintance with details the Library still enjoys the benefit. Mr. Harper had acted for three years previously as an under-assistant.

A.D. 1841.

The very large and valuable MS. collections of the Rev. John Brickdale Blakeway, relating to the history of Shropshire, were presented by his widow. Mr. Blakeway was minister of St. Mary’s Church, Shrewsbury, for thirty-two years, and died March 10, 1826. He was long engaged in gathering materials for a county history, and his collections now form fifteen closely-written volumes in folio, nine in quarto, and two in octavo, arranged, and lettered on their backs, according to their several subjects, viz. Pedigrees, County History, Parochial History, &c. A list of them is given at the end of the Annual Catalogue. They were supplemented in 1850 by the purchase (for £42) of a copy of Mr. T. F.
Dukes' Antiquities of Shropshire (4th Shrewsbury, 1844), divided into two large volumes, and enriched by the author with many MS. additions and copies of ancient deeds, and with upwards of 700 portraits and original drawings of churches, fonts, &c. relating to almost every parish in the county. As Mr. Blakeway's collections are not accompanied with engravings or drawings, these volumes largely assist to make the materials for the history of this county complete.

A parcel of 136 early French and Anglo-Saxon coins was presented by Her Majesty the Queen, out of a mass of upwards of 6700 which were found in digging at the bank of the river Ribble, at Cuerdale, in Lancashire, and were adjudged to belong to Her Majesty in right of the Duchy of Lancaster. The largest part of the Saxons coins were of the reigns of S. Edmund of East Anglia (in number 1770) and of Alfred (793); of the Continental, of Charles le Chauve (712) and, apparently, of Charles le Simple (2942).

Some rare and interesting books issued by English printers about the middle of the sixteenth century were acquired in this year; among them, the Boke of Common Prayer, printed by Oswen at Worcester, in 1552, bought for the very moderate sum of £3 16s. Two rare American Psalters were purchased, the one called The Massachusetts Psalter, printed at Boston in 1709, for £2, and the other, the Psalms in blank verse with tunes, printed at Boston in 1718, for £1 19s.

Shakespeare, Henry VI. See 1834.

American Tracts. See 1836.

Donatus. See 1840.

The hitherto somewhat narrow funds of the Library received in this year a welcome increase by the bequest of the large sum of £36,000 in the Three per Cents. from Rev. Robert Mason, D.D., of Queen's College, deceased Jan. 5. He bequeathed also a further sum of £30,000 for a new library to his own College. In commemoration of this munificent legacy, one room, devoted to the reception of costly illustrated works, and works of some degree of value or rarity in various languages, has been styled the Mason Room (see p. 251). The elegant model of the Church of the Holy Sepulchre at Jerusalem, now exhibited in the Library, came by his bequest, together with a painting of the Zodiac of Tentyra, in Egypt, which is hung in the Picture Gallery.

A.D. 1842.

Seven Sanscrit MSS. had been given to the Library in 1837 by B. H. Hodgson, Esq., the British Resident in Nepaul, before which time there were but a very few works in that language scattered through some of the various Oriental collections, and most of them recently acquired. But in this year the real foundation of the present very large and valuable collection was laid, by the purchase for £500 of the MSS. obtained by Professor H. H. Wilson (dec. May 8, 1860) during his residence in India, numbering 616 works and 540 volumes, of which 147 are MSS. of the Vedas. A brief list of them is attached to the Annual Catalogue for 1842, and the whole are fully described in the catalogue of the Sanscrit MSS., compiled by Theod. Aufrecht, M.A., now Professor of Sanscrit in the Univ. of Edinburgh, the second and last part of which was published in 1864. The greater part of Mr. Wilson's collection consists of MSS. written in the last and present centuries.

Some small collections towards the history of Cheshire, made by Rev. F. Gower, were purchased in this year and in 1846.

1 The gift of the first Sanscrit book (described in the Benefaction-Register as being 'Gentuanâ lingual') by one John Ken, in 1666, is noticed at p. 113. The book is now numbered, Walker 214.
In printed books the chief purchase was a copy (at the price of fifty guineas) of the original and hitherto unknown edition of the poems of Drummond, of Hawthornden. It is in quarto, with a portrait, having the letter-press only on one side of the page, and was printed at Edinburgh by Andro Hart in 1614. There are three or four small corrections in Drummond’s own handwriting.

Bowyer. Italian Municipal Statutes. See 1838.
Laing. Almanac by W. de Worde. See 1755.
Old Plays. See 1834.

In March, Mr. J. B. Taunton, All Souls’ College (B.A. 1843, M.A. 1848), was appointed Assistant vice Mr. F. E. Thurland, New College (B.A. 1841, M.A. 1846, now Rector of Thurstaston, Cheshire), who was made an extra, in the place of Mr. Symonds, resigned. Mr. Thurland had, probably, succeeded Mr. Grove in 1838 or 1839.

The stipend of the Librarian was increased by £150, by a statute which passed on May 6. By the same statute an annual payment was ordered of £20 to the Janitor, in lieu of fees hitherto taken for showing the Library or Picture Gallery to Members of the University. These, undergraduates as well as graduates, have now, if wearing their academical dress, the right of free entrance for themselves and friends; other visitors are admitted, by a regulation made five or six years ago, at the very moderate fee of threepence each person. (See p. 134.)

A.D. 1843.

The valuable collection of Oriental MSS. formed by the celebrated traveller, James Bruce, of Kinnaird, was purchased for

---

1 A copy of Blackwood’s Martyre de la Royne d’Escosse (Edinb. 1587), among Rawlinson’s books, has an autograph of Drummond: ‘Gul. Drumnond, a Paris, 1607.’
£1000. It consists of ninety-six volumes, of which twenty-six are in Ethiopic, and seventy in Arabic; there is also one Coptic MS. on papyrus. Included in vol. iv. of an Ethiopic copy of the Old Testament is one of the three copies of the Book of Enoch, which were brought by Bruce from Abyssinia, and which were then (if they be not even still) the only manuscripts of the book to be found in Europe. One of the three had been given by Bruce himself to the University, in 1788, through the hands of Dr. Douglas, Bishop of Salisbury; it is written on forty leaves of vellum, in triple columns, and is now exhibited in the glass case near the entrance of the Library. It was from this MS. that Dr. Laurence, afterwards Archbishop of Cashel, first made the translation which he published in 1821, and then subsequently, in 1838, published the original text. The second copy (‘elegantissimum et celeberrimum’) was given by Bruce to Louis XVI, and is now in the Imperial Library at Paris. By the purchase of the third, the Bodleian is, therefore, the possessor of two out of the three.

Two unsuccessful attempts had previously been made to dispose of the collection by auction. It was first announced for sale by Mr. Christie, for May 17, 1827, to be disposed of in one lot; and a list was issued, abridged from the catalogue made by Dr. Alex. Murray, the editor of Bruce’s Travels. The issue of this proposed sale is recorded by Douce in the following MS. note on his copy of the auction catalogue: ‘These MSS. were put in by the owner at £5500, and after an elaborate eulogium on them by Mr. Christie, no bidding or advance took place, and they were of course withdrawn. Had the owner offered them for £500, I should think the same result would have happened.’ The second attempt was made in 1842, when the MSS. were offered for sale by Mr. George Robins, on May 30, but it appears that even all the eloquence of that most moving of auctioneers failed to elicit a bid corresponding to the expectation of the seller; and so the collection fortunately
A catalogue of the Esquires ANS of the collection was issued in a small quarto volume consisting seven pages, or which we part was of the general Catalogue of ANS. It was compiled by a German scholar and assistant with the utmost of personal interest. In a Jourdain, and contains nineteen books, three of which are ANS; one of Lord's, one of Sarcie's and three others; at all thirty-five.

The same measures for the library of Devon were adopted by the purchase for £150 of the collection made for that purpose by Jeremiah Miles, Esq., Dean of Exeter, and Vice of the Soc. of Antiquaries. The library of Dean Miles was and Feb. 23, 1753, was sold by auction by Mr. Lewis Son and Neph. in April; and these collections comprised in eleven volumes in folio, one in quarto, and one in octavo, formed a principal feature in the sale.

In this year the new Catalogue of the general Library of printed books, &c., of the Gough and Devon Libraries, and the collection of Hebrew books and manuscripts, of which already special catalogues were in print, was completed and published in three books volumes. It had been commenced in the year 1837, and was prepared by the Rev. Arthur Brearley, M.A., Chaplain of Ch. Ch., now a resident Chaplain of the Royal Navy, whose share comprises the letters F—K, and the commencement of S: the Rev. Henry Cary, M.A. (son of the Translator of Dante), then Incumbent of St. Paul's, Oxford, but now, by returning to his previous profession of the Law, a barrister in Australia), who is responsible for the letters F—K, and part of L; and Rev. Alfred Hackman, M.A., Chaplain and Precentor of Ch. Ch., and now Sub-Librarian, who completed the greater part of it, viz. the letters A—R, I (from London)—O, S (from Shakespeare)—Z. The whole charges of the printing of the Catalogue amounted to £2,990 12s. 1; the previous cost of compilation was about £2,000.

Bowyer. Italian Municipal Statutes. See 1838.
Sutherland. Illustrated Books. See 1839.

A.D. 1844.

Sir William Ouseley, the editor of the three volumes entitled Oriental Collections (brother to Sir Gore Ouseley, whom he accompanied when he went as ambassador to Persia in 1810), gathered, during some forty years spent in accumulation, about 750 Oriental MSS., chiefly in Persian, but including also a few in Arabic, Sanscrit, Zend, &c. Of these, in 1831 a catalogue (in 24 pp. quarto) was issued by the owner, who wished to dispose of them collectively, but no purchaser was then found, and they consequently remained in Sir William's possession. After his death, however (in Sept. 1842), they were again proposed for sale en masse, and the Library became a purchaser in this year for the sum of £2,000. Many of the volumes are specimens of the best styles of Persian writing and illumination, while others are of great antiquity and rarity. The printed Oriental collection was also increased by various works printed in the East Indies in 1830–1839, which were presented by the Asiatic Society of Bengal, and by some Sanscrit and Mahratta books given by Rev. G. Pigott, Chaplain at Bombay.

A.D. 1845.

This year is rendered noticeable in the later annals of the Library by the fact that not a single MS. was purchased during its course. But a very valuable collection of Arabic, Persian and Sanscrit MSS. formed by Brigadier Gen. Alex. Walker, during his

1 MS. note by Dr. Bliss. service in India, was presented by his son, Sir Will Walker, of Linnamore. These are seen as a unique collection, like other donations or purchases of similar extent, the Sanscrit portion is described in the catalogue compiled by Prof. Aufrecht. The collection of printed Sanscrit works was increased by the purchase for £31, 10s. 6d. of 24 volumes from the library of the celebrated lexicographer, Josephus, of Hulse, who died Oct. 23, 1843, and whose library was sold by auction at Hulse in Jan. 1844.

Two curious collections of texts were also bought: the one in English, consisting of five volumes, dating from 1688 to 1766, and chiefly relating to the case of the Nuns-Jerries, the Bangorian controversy, and the affairs of the city of London (for £22 10s.); and the other in French, consisting only of four small volumes, but containing a very large number of "Mémoires," strange histories of strange wanderers between 1557 and 1657, of great rarity and singularity. These were obtained at the sale of the library of Mr. Benj. Heywood, Brighton, No. 3796, for £13.

On Dec. 23, the present writer, then a Clerk of Magdalen College, was appointed Assistant to Mr. Tatham, after upwards of five years previous service as a supernumerary, having first entered the Library in June, 1840.

A.D. 1846.

The original MS., or first copy, of Wood's History and Antiquities of Oxford, in English, was purchased for the moderate sum of £8 8s. Already the Library possessed the corrected copy, in the author's autograph, in two large folio volumes, which had formed part of his collection in the Ashmolean Museum, but were transferred to the Bodleian as early as the year 1769. The volume now obtained had been in the possession of Edw. Roberts, Esq., of Ealing, a letter to whom from Mr. Joseph Parker, of Oxford, is inserted, dated July 4, 1827, in which he mentions the sale of the book to Mr. B. Roberts, and says that it was purchased at a sale at Burford, in 1797 or 1798.

1 Gen. Walker, who in the beginning of the century was Governor of Baroda, in March, died at Edinburgh in 1832. His MSS., in the words of Prof. Aufrecht, 'integritate et antiquitate eminente.'

A curious and valuable account-roll of Sir John Williams, Knt., Master of the Jewels to Henry VIII, which specifies all the treasures which were in his custody, was bought for £251.

The department of Italian topography, antiquities and art was largely enriched by the purchase from Rev. R. A. Scott (for £234 6s.) of a collection of 1426 volumes made by his brother the late George C. Scott, Esq., during ten years' residence in Italy.

Dissertation. See 1828.

Gower's Cheshire. See 1842.

Thorkevin. See 1828.

A.D. 1847.

A valuable MS. of Star-Chamber Reports, from June 17, 1635, to June 4, 1638, was purchased for £11. Several similar volumes of Reports are among the Rawlinson MSS. Two curious collections of pamphlets were bought; the one consisting of tracts, broadsides and proclamations relating to the Gunpowder Plot, made by H. Glynn, Under-secretary of State (£12 10s.); the other, a series of State special Forms of Prayer, from 1665 to 1840 (£10 10s.)

Works relating to the history of America, in which the 1 An original account, by the same Master of the Jewels, of the plate and jewels received for the King's use from dissolved monasteries in the years 1540–1542, is preserved in MS. e Musc. 57.

Library is now very rich. It begins in this year to form a specialty manuscript feature in the catalogue of purchases. Many rare works had been of aid in the Library, but much of the completeness of the present collection is due to the energy of the well-known American bibliophile, Henry Stevens, Esq.

A.D. 1848.

A collection of Hebrew MSS., numbering 862 volumes and nearly 240 separate works, was purchased at Hamburg for £1,000. It had been assembled by Heimann Joseph Michael (born Apr 14, 1774; deceased June 10, 1846), who had devoted thirty years to the formation of his library. One hundred and ten volume MSS. are included in it, written for the most part between 1560 and 1670. Michael's preserved books amounted to 5471; these were purchased by the British Museum. A short catalogue of the collection, drawn up from the owner's papers, was issued in Hamburg in 1846, with a preface by Dr. L. Zunz, and an essay by the MSS. by Dr. M. Steinschneider. They will ere long be re-engraved, together with all the other Hebrew MSS. in the library of Dr. Michael, who has now, in the present year, commenced his important task.

A.D. 1848.

The valuable collection of Oriental MSS., formed by Rev. W. H. M. J. P. Rogge, Professor of Hebrew at Cambridge, during his residence in India as Principal of Bishop's College, Calcutta, was purchased from him for £2,000. A small remaining portion of the collection, comprising thirty-six volumes, was bought in 1846, and is now worth £35. In all there are 165 volumes, of which 80 are in Sanskrit. These latter are fully described in the 1847 Annual Catalogue.
The chief purchases of printed books were made at the sale at Berlin, in May, of the library of Professor C. F. G. Jacobs, the editor of the Anthologia Graeca (who died March 30, 1847), whence a large number of classical dissertations, many of them authors' presentation copies, were obtained, and at the sale of the library of Rev. Hen. Francis Lyte (deceased 1847) which took place in July. A collection of 360 sermons, published by Non-juring divines between 1688 and 1750, is an interesting item in the year's list; another is a copy of Pliny's Historia Naturalis, printed at Rome by Sweynheym and Pannartz in 1473, with a MS. collation of three very early codices made by Ang. Politian in 1490, which was bought for £21, at an extremely curious sale at Messrs. Leigh Sotheby's, in Feb., of books 'selected from the library of an eminent literary character' (M. Libri?).

The two statutable Assistants at this time and for one or two years previously were Mr. J. M. Price, All Souls' College (B.A. 1849, M.A. 1852, now Vicar of Cuddington, Bucks,) and Mr. W. W. Garrett, New College (B.A. 1849). The former of these was succeeded about 1850, by the last undergraduate Assistant, Mr. J. C. Hyatt, Magd. Hall (B.A. 1852, now Perp. Curate of Queenshead, Yorkshire). Since then, in consequence of the difficulty of reconciling attendance on College lectures, &c. with attention to the continually increasing work of the Library, the junior Assistants have been taken from the City instead of from the undergraduate members of the University, as had been generally the case hitherto.

In pursuance of an address from the House of Commons, Sept. 4, 1848, on the motion of Mr. Ewart, various returns relative to public libraries were obtained, which were printed by Parliament in 1849, State Paper, No. 18. The following is the reply from Dr. Bandinel there printed:—

1 A separate list of the books purchased at Jacobs' sale is appended to the annual Catalogue.
BODLEIAN LIBRARY,
JANUARY 9, 1849.

SIR,—In compliance with your letter, dated Oct. 27, 1848, desiring certain Returns respecting the Bodleian Library, I have to state—

1. As to the number of books received under the various Copyright Acts, no distinct register of the books so received has been kept, but they have, at the end of each year, been incorporated into the general collection, so that I am unable to give the number of the books so received.

2. The number of printed volumes in the Bodleian Library amounts to about 220,000; but this statement will very inadequately express the real extent of the collection, as so many works have been bound together in one volume.

3. The number of manuscripts is about 21,000.

4. All graduates of the University have the right of admission to the Library; other persons must apply for admission to the regular authorities.

5. No register is kept of persons consulting the Library; accordingly, the number of students who have frequented it during the last ten years cannot be ascertained.

I have, &c.

BULKELEY BANDINEL,
Bodleian Librarian.

George Cornewall Lewis, Esq.,
Under-Secretary of State, Whitehall.

The estimate of printed volumes here given is believed to be as nearly accurate as it was possible to make it, as considerable pains were taken in forming the calculation. The number of separate printed books and tracts may be reckoned as at least treble the number of volumes. With regard to the reply to the fifth enquiry some explanation is requisite. A register is kept of all the octavo and most of the quarto volumes taken out for readers, of all the volumes from special and separate collections, and of all the MSS.; but no account is kept of the folios and other books on the ground-floor of the great room, which are accessible to readers themselves, and frequently used by them without the help of the assistants. Consequently, any return of the number of readers entered on the register would not adequately represent the whole number of students who use the Library, although, of course, it would, with a margin for allowance, afford a very fair approximation. No record, however, of separate visits of readers is kept, as distinct from the books required; so that although a reader may be at work for days or weeks together, yet, if he continue to use only the same books, one entry alone will be made of his name.
-1850

BODLEIAN LIBRARY. 275

A.D. 1850.

The Hebrew collection was still further increased in this year by the purchase of sixty-two MSS., of which fifty-seven had been brought from Italy; and in 1851, by the purchase of some printed books collected by Dr. Isaac L. Auerbach, of Berlin, who had recently deceased. Every year about this time¹ saw additions to this branch of the Library, made chiefly through the agency of the late Mr. Asher, the well-known Jewish bookseller of Berlin, and also through the late Hirsch Edelmann, a learned Rabbi, who was for years a frequent reader in the Bodleian, from whence he commenced the publication of a series of extracts (see under the year 1693). Mr. Edelmann died a few years since in Germany. A series of works illustrating the history, civil and ecclesiastical, the geography, &c. of Hungary, Transylvania, Croatia, and other neighbouring provinces of the Austrian Empire, ¹ In 1845, about 320 printed volumes were purchased from a catalogue issued at Berlin by A. Rebenstein, or Bernstein, and D. Cassel.

Coverdale’s Bible; being pen-and-ink copies of the title, from Lord Leicester’s copy, and of the map of Palestine, from Lord Jersey’s copy, executed with admirable skill by the late well-known facsimilist, Mr. J. Harris.

A Supplemental Catalogue of the printed books, comprehending all the accessions which had been made during the years 1835–1847, was published in this year, in one folio volume, under the editorship of the Rev. Alfred Hackman, M.A., by whom the greater part of the earlier Catalogue had been compiled, as mentioned at p. 268.

On March 27, Convocation voted an addition of £50 per annum to the stipends of the Sub-librarians.

Recovery of Pococke MS. 32. See p. 81.

Malone’s Correspondence. See p. 232.

A.D. 1852.

In the Report of the University Commission, which was issued in this year, various suggestions were embodied which had been made by several witnesses. Sir Edmund Head renewed his plan of allowing books to be taken out of the Library by readers, and was supported by the opinions of Professors Wall and Jowett; but the proposal was met with the strong counter-testimony of Mr. H. E. Strickland¹, Prof. Vaughan, Dr. W. A. Greenhill (at that time a constant reader in the Library), Prof. Donkin, Mr. E. S. Foulkes, and others. And the Commissioners were not prepared to report in favour of a plan which would at once lessen what was described as being one of the great advantages of the place, namely, the certainty of finding within its walls every book which it possessed. At the same time, they were disposed to recommend a relaxation in some instances of the strictness of the rule, and concurred in a suggestion made by Dr. Macbride and Mr. Storey Maskelyne, that duplicates should be allowed to circulate. Most, however, of the suggestions for extension of facilities to readers, as well as of the reasons alleged for alteration of system, have now been answered by the opening (through the liberality of the Radcliffe Trustees) of the Radcliffe Library as a noble reading-room for both day and evening. As the hours during which the Library may be used extend now, in consequence of this addition, from nine a.m. to ten p.m., it is at once apparent that the Bodleian presents greater advantages to students than can anywhere else be enjoyed; to which is to be added the readiness and quickness (specially testified to, in 1852, by Dr. Greenhill) with which, under all ordinary circumstances, readers are supplied with the books which they require. The Commissioners in their Report called attention to a suggestion of Sir Henry Bishop, then Professor of Music, for the establishment of a classified musical library, which should comprehend, not merely the music received by the Bodleian from Stationers’ Hall, but all superior foreign music as well, of every school and every age. Such collections the Professor said were only to be found at Munich and Vienna.

¹ Several important suggestions were made by this gentleman. One, that the Library Books should all be stamped with a distinguishing mark, is now in process of being carried out. Another, respecting the great importance of collecting the most ephemeral local literature, especially for the county of Oxford, and of procuring books printed at provincial presses, relates to a subject which has received much more attention of late years than formerly. A third, on the desirability, acknowledged (as we have seen) in the last century, of having a general Catalogue compiled of the books found in College Libraries which are wanting in the Bodleian, has unfortunately as yet seen no accomplishment.

The Report and Evidence upon the recommendations of the Commissioners, which were issued by the Hebdomadal Board in the following year, did not differ widely in testimony or suggestions from those of the Commission. Dr. Pusey and Mr. Marriott agreed in deprecating the allowing removal of books, speaking (as did several of the witnesses before the Commission) from actual experience as constant readers in the place; and Dr. Bandinel mentioned, in a paper of observations which he contributed, the fact that he had been told by the Librarian of the Advocates' Library at Edinburgh that between 6,000 and 7,000 volumes appeared to have been lost there from the facilities afforded to borrowers. A comparative tabular statement respecting the arrangements and rules of the libraries at Berlin, Dresden, Florence, Munich, Paris and Vienna, drawn up by Mr. Coxe from the Parliamentary Report on Libraries, which showed very favourably in behalf of the Bodleian, was subjoined by Dr. Bandinel to his evidence.

The great feature of this year was the acquisition of the Italian Library of the Count Alessandro Mortara, consisting of about 1400 volumes, choice in character and condition, for £1000. The Count, who was distinguished for his literary taste and knowledge of the literature of his own country, had, although holding the nominal office of Grand Chamberlain to the Duke of Lucca, taken up his abode in Oxford some ten years previously, on account of his desire to examine the Canonici MSS. and of his friendship with Dr. Wellesley, the late Principal of New Inn Hall. He became a daily reader in the Bodleian, where the interest which he took in the place, together with his polished, yet genuine, courtesy, made him a welcome and popular visitor. It was upon returning to Italy (where he died, June 14, 1855, at Florence), that he disposed of his valuable collection. A catalogue, compiled by himself, with occasional short notes, was issued with the purchase-catalogue for the year. He also drew up a catalogue of the Italian MSS. in the Canonici collection, which was published, in a quarto volume, in 1864. (See under 1817.)

Among miscellaneous purchases were a few volumes which were wanted to make the Library set of De Bry's Voyages complete, an imperfect copy of the Oxford Liber Festivalis (see 1691), and a large collection of Dr. Priestley's writings (believed to have been made by himself), in thirty-nine vols.

A. D. 1853.

A portion of the collection of Hebrew MSS. formed by Prof. Isaac Sam. Reggio, at Goritz, amounting to about seventy-two volumes, was purchased for £108. Many other MSS. in this class of literature occur yearly in the accounts at this time. But the great acquisition of 1853 was the Breviarium secundum regulam beati Ysidori, dictum Mozarabes, printed on vellum at Toledo, by command of Cardinal Ximenes, in 1502. £200 were given for this book, which is the only vellum copy known, and which is in most immaculate condition. It is of extreme rarity even on paper, as it is believed that only thirty-five copies were printed.

An imperfect copy of Caxton's Chronicle, 1480, was bought for £21; and a large gathering of Norfolk tracts was obtained at the sale of Mr. Dawson Turner's library.

It was in this year that Dr. Constantine Simonides visited the Library in the hope of disposing of some of the products of his Eastern ingenuity, but failed here, as also at the British Museum, although successful in most other quarters. It is much to be lamented that the talent and ability which he undoubtedly possessed in no small degree were devoted to such unworthy purpose as his history discloses. The story of his interview with Mr. Coxe, then Sub-librarian, is well known, and was reproduced in an article in the Cornhill Magazine for Oct. 1867 (p. 499); and as the version there given appears to be substantially correct, it will be sufficient to borrow it from its pages:—

'On visiting the [Bodleian Library, Mr. Simonides] showed some fragments of MSS. to Mr. Coxe, who assented to their belonging to the twelfth century. "And these, Mr. Coxe, belong to the tenth or eleventh century?" "Yes, probably." "And now, Mr. Coxe, let me show you a very ancient and valuable MS. I have for sale, and which ought to be in your Library. To what century do you consider this belongs?" "This, Mr. Simonides, I have no doubt," said Mr. Coxe, "belongs to the [latter half of the] nineteenth century." The Greek and his MS. disappeared."

An account of this visit was given in the Athenaeum for March 1, 1856, and a full narrative, including a letter from Sir F. Madden respecting the dealings with Simonides on the part of the British Museum, is to be found in S. L. Sotheby's Principia Typographica, vol. ii. pp. 133-136f. ¹

A.D. 1854.

A very interesting series of eighteen autograph letters from Henry Hyde, the second Earl of Clarendon, was presented to the University by 'our honoured Lord and Chancellor,' the Earl of Derby ². They are best described in the following letter to the Vice-Chancellor, which accompanied the gift, and which is now bound in the same volume:—

Knaveley, Oct. 17. 1854.

'My dear sir,—In looking over some old papers here the other day, I found (how they came here I know not) some original and apparently autograph letters, which appeared to me to be curious. They are private letters, addressed by Lord Clarendon, to the Earl of Abingdon, as Lord Lieutenant of Oxfordshire, during, and on the suppression of, the Duke of Monmouth's Rebellion. I have no doubt of their genuineness; and if from the connexion of the University with the writer¹, as well as the locality, you think they would be worth depositing in the Bodleian Library, I shall have great pleasure in offering them to the acceptance of the University for that purpose; and in that case would send with them a miniature pencil drawing of the Duke of Monmouth, which is not too large to be let into the cover of the portfolio which should contain the letters, and for the authenticity of which I can so far vouch that it has been in this house since 1729, at least; since it appears in a catalogue of the pictures and engravings here which formed the collection at that time.

¹ The death of Simonides, from the terrible disease of leprosy, was announced as having occurred at Cairo in last year.

² A portrait of Lord Derby, in his Chancellor's robes, painted by Sir F. A. Grant, was given by him to the University about 1858, and now hangs in the Picture Gallery.

'I am, my dear sir,

'Yours sincerely,

'DERBY.'

The portrait in question, which is a beautifully executed drawing, in an oak frame, marked on the back, 'Duke of Monmouth, by Foster,' is now fixed, as desired, in the present morocco binding of the volume.

A collection of early editions of the Prayer-Book (including Whitchurch's May and June editions of 1549 and that of 1552), of the Metrical Psalter, and of Visitation Articles (amongst others, Edward the Sixth's Articles of 1547, and Injunctions of the same year), with a few miscellaneous books, was bought of the Rev. T. Lathbury, M.A., the well-known writer on English Church history, for £300. Various rare English books were purchased at Mr. Pickering's sale, and foreign dissertations, &c. at that of the library of Professor Godfrey Hermann, the Greek editor and commentator (who died Dec. 31, 1848), at Leipsic, in April.

A.D. 1855.

Three Greek Biblical MSS. of great antiquity were obtained from the collection of Prof. Tischendorf, being Nos. 3-5 of the volumes described in a small quarto catalogue issued (anonymously) by him of Codices Graeci, &c. One of these three is of the ninth century, containing the Gospel of St. Luke, with portions of the other Gospels, which was bought for £125; another of the eighth century, containing the whole of St. Luke and St. John, bought for £140; the third, also of the eighth century, containing the greatest part of Genesis, for £108.

¹ The Earl was High Steward of the University.

A.D. 1856.

A volume containing two autograph letters of Luther was bought for £20, together with a large collection of printed books (formed by — Schneider, of Berlin,) relating to him and the German Reformation, with various editions of his works, for £300. Another volume, with some small additional papers in the Reformer's hand, was subsequently obtained.

The ever-increasing Bible collection received the addition of the very rare ed. princ. of the Bohemian Bible, printed at Prague in 1488, which was obtained for £17 10s., and a still more rare edition of the Pentateuch, with New Test., &c. printed at Wittenberg in 1529, obtained for eighteen guineas. A Roman Missal, printed 'ad longum, absque ulla requisitione,' (i.e. in a kind of 'Prayer-book-as-read' form,) Lyons, 1550, was obtained for £20. It was arranged by Nicholas Roillet, Chanter of the Church of S. Nicetius at Lyons, with the view of avoiding difficulties and delays, 'sacerdotesque expectantibus molestos reddentes, ipsosque erga dictos circumstantes scandalum generantes, qui existimant illos non solum ignaros sed nescientes quid agendum vel faciendam habeant;' and was issued with the papal imprimatur of Paul III. But as Pius V and Clem. VIII subsequently forbade any variation whatsoever from the authorized Roman form, this Missal, like the Breviary of Card. Quignonnes, was, with others, suppressed. And hence its rarity.

Fifty guineas were given for a very large collection of Chinese works, numbering altogether about 1100, which had been gathered by Rev. F. Evans, for some time a missionary in China. Some of the Chinese books in the Library have been subsequently examined and catalogued by Professor Summers, of King's College, London.

On May 22, a new body of Library Statutes was confirmed by Convocation, after a complete revision of the previous regulations. The principal changes, besides the omission of various obsolete requirements, were the adding five elected Curators, holding office for ten years, to the old ex officio body of eight; the providing for the removal of books to the extra-mural 'Camera,' or reading-room, about to be added; the fixing the stipend of the Librarian (including all the former fees and small separate payments) at £700, and that of the Sub-librarians at £300, and the assigning to the former a retiring pension after twenty years' service of £200, and after thirty years', of £300, and to the latter, after thirty years', of £150; and the making a few alterations with regard to the times at which the Library should be closed, these times being lessened by about one week in the course of the year.

A report from the eminent architect, Mr. G. G. Scott, on the means which might be adopted for the enlargement of the Library, and for rendering it fire-proof, dated in Dec. 1855, was printed in this year, together with one from Mr. Braidwood on the warming apparatus (see under 1821). Mr. Scott's report contained suggestions for the extension of the Library throughout the whole of the quadrangle and adjoining buildings, including the Ashmolean Museum, and proposed that the Divinity School should be assigned as a reading room, for which the great degree of light afforded by its large windows appeared peculiarly to fit it. The subsequent assignment, however, of the Radcliffe Library as a reading-room for the Library, removed the immediate necessity for any other extension. In 1858 a paper on the subject, illustrated with a plan of the Library, was printed by the late Dr. Wellesley, who, after considering the various modes then suggested for the enlargement of the Library, recommended the adoption (from the British Museum) of presses running up direct from the ground through all the floors, by which the dangers attendant upon the increase of weight of the wall-pressure would be obviated.

A.D. 1857.

A collection of manuscripts, more interesting as to their history than as to their actual contents, was presented by William and Hubert Hamilton, in memory, and in accordance with the wish, of their celebrated father, Sir William Hamilton. It comprises fifty-eight volumes (thirty-nine in folio, sixteen in quarto, and three in octavo) from the library of the Carthusian Monastery of Erfurt, famous as the place of Luther's early abode. A short catalogue of them, by Joh. Broad, was printed at Berlin in 1841, with a prefatory notice, from which we learn that they were preserved at Erfurt until 1805, when the library was broken up and dispersed on the occupation of the city by the French army, who stabled their horses in the place where the books were deposited, and burned many of them for fuel, while others were carried away and secreted with a view to their safety. Some of the latter were bought by the Count de Buelow, on whose death they were purchased from the subsequent possessors by Broad, and finally sold by him to Sir W. Hamilton. 'Nunc in eam terram demigrant,' says the bibliopolist, 'quæ, quodcunque alicujus pretii est aut materialium

1 For the most part, they consist of medieval sermons and theological treatises by writers of no great fame, together with some of the works of Aquinas.
Another collection of MSS., from the same library as above, was on sale by Mr. J. M. Stark, the well-known bookseller now of London, at Hal. in 1855, who issued a small catalogue of them in medallion.

A unique collection of Italian and Spanish MSS., amounting to about forty-six volumes, came to the Library by the bequest of Rev. Joseph Mendham, M.A., of Southwell, who died Nov. 12, 1837. The most important part of these is a series of twenty-eight volumes relating to the Council of Trent, which were purchased at the sale of the Earl of Gainsborough’s Library in 1830 by Thorpe, the bookseller for £33, and re-sold by him to Mr. Mendham in 1832 for fifty guineas. It was chiefly from the materials afforded by these that Mr. Mendham drew up his Memoirs of the Council of Trent, published in 1834. They are described in Thorpe’s Catalogue of MSS. on sale in 1831, and in the preface to Mr. Mendham’s book.

On June 24, the Rev. Robert Payne Smith, M.A., of Pembroke College, was appointed an Assistant School-Librarian for the Oriental department, in consequence of the increasing infirmities of the late senior School-Librarian, Mr. Ray.

A.D. 1859

On Oct. 18, an offer made by the Trustees of the Ashmolean Museum for the transfer of the printed books, coins, and MSS., there contained to the Bodleian, in order to facilitate the devotion of a part of the building to the purposes of an Examination School, was accepted by the Curators; but a similar offer with regard to the antiquities was declined. The latter consequently remain in their old repository, but the collections in Natural History were transferred to the New Museum. It was not, however, until 1860, that the books were actually received into the Library, where they now fill one small room. Altogether they amount to upwards of 3700 volumes, forming five different series. First are those of Elias Ashmole himself, numbering originally 2175, but reduced by losses before the transfer to 2136, of which about 850 are MSS. This collection is extremely rich in heraldic and genealogical matter, together with an abundance of astrology. The printed books are chiefly scientific and historical; these, with the books in the following collections, are now in process of incorporation into the new General Catalogue of the Library. A list of the MSS. is given in Bernard's catalogue, A.D. 1697; but a very elaborate and minute account, forming a thick quarto volume, was drawn up by Mr. W. H. Black, the well-known antiquary, and published in 1845. As this, however, was destitute of an index, it remained comparatively useless until 1866, when a full Index, edited by the writer of this volume, was published under the direction of the Delegates of the University Press.

The next collection is that of Anthony à Wood, containing about 130 MSS. and 970 printed volumes, which were bequeathed to the Museum by the owner on his death in Nov. 1695. The former are of extreme value for the history of Oxford and the neighbourhood; among the latter are most curious sets of the pamphlets of the time, with the ballads, fly-sheets, chap-books, almanacks, &c. just such 'unconsidered trifles' as most men suffer to perish in the using, but a few, like Wood, lay by for the amusement and information of future generations. There are also seven volumes of his own correspondence, including letters from Dugdale, Evelyn, &c. Of the MSS. a list is to be found in the old Catalogue of 1697; a fuller and better one, compiled by

---

1 This number includes some fifteen or sixteen volumes given by subsequent donors, but incorporated with Ashmole's own books.

2 About fifty volumes out of Wood's whole number were missing when the Library became possessed of them.
William Huddesford, M.A., the Keeper of the Museum, was printed in a thin octavo volume, in 1761, which was reprinted by Sir Thomas Phillips, at Middlehill, Worcestershire, in 1824. There are also bundles of charters and deeds, chiefly monastic, but nearly all more or less mutilated or injured by damp and dirt, so as to be partially useless.

The third collection is that of Dr. Martin Lister, physician to Queen Anne, who died Feb. 2, 1714. Besides his books, he was the donor of various other gifts to the Museum, in return for which he was created M.D. of Oxford, in 1683. The books are chiefly medical and scientific, and number in a written catalogue 1451 volumes (including thirty-two MSS.), but thirty-five of these were missing when the transfer from the Museum was made.

The collections of Sir William Dugdale, which form a fourth series, number forty-eight volumes. A list of these is in the old Catalogue of 1697.

In the fifth place there are the MSS. of the well-known antiquary, John Aubrey. These are about twenty in number, of which fifteen are in his own hand, and are described in Britton's Life of him, printed for the Wilts Topographical Society, pp. 88–123. Collections for the history of Wiltshire, entitled Hypomnemata Antiquaria, form one of Aubrey's own works¹, but unfortunately the second volume (marked with the letter B) is missing. It was borrowed from the Museum, in 1703, by William Aubrey, the author's brother, and was never returned. A paper on the subject was inserted by Rev. J. E. Jackson, in 1860, in vol. vii. of the Wiltshire Archaeological Magazine, and a reward for information as to the present locale of the missing volume was subsequently publicly offered, but to no purpose, by the same gentleman. A small MS. of Horae, which had belonged to Sir Thomas Pope, the founder of Trinity College, is among Aubrey's books. A MS. of Matthew of Westminster, (now e Mus. 149) had been given to the Library by Aubrey, in 1675, through Ant. à Wood.

¹ These were printed by the Wiltshire Archaeological Society in 1862, in one volume quarto, under the editorship of Rev. J. E. Jackson.

There are also five or six MSS. which were given to the Museum by William Kingsley before 1700. Some few others, which were given by E. Lhuyd and Dr. W. Borlase, together with a volume of W. Hudesford's correspondence, are now incorporated with the Ashmole MSS., and are described in Mr. Black's catalogue, as well as the latest gift of this kind which was made to the Museum, viz. a little volume of Private Thoughts, by Bishop Wilson, of Sodor and Man, which was presented in 1824 by Lieut. Brett, R.N.

Thirty-nine choice Persian and Arabic MSS., which had formed part of Sir Gore Ouseley's collection, were bought from his son, Sir Fred. Gore Ouseley, Bart., the present Professor of Music, for £500. The rest of the collection came by gift, as will be seen under the following year.

At the sale (in June—Aug.) of the library of Dr. Bliss, a large number of volumes (still kept separate) were purchased, including a volume of original letters of Charles I, Clarendon, &c, and poems by Lord Fairfax (see p. 97); together with many from the series of books of Characters collected by Dr. Bliss, and from his like series, both of books printed in London shortly before the fire of 1666, and of books printed at Oxford. The Library obtained by his bequest his own interleaved copy of the Athenæa, with many MS. additions ¹.

¹ A very valuable Index of notes and references on all kinds of biographical, historical, and antiquarian matters, contained in forty small covers, which had been the growth of the many years of Dr. Bliss's literary researches, was bequeathed by him to Rev. H. O. Coxe, by whom it is kept in the Library for the use of readers. Several references are made to this Index in the earlier part of the volume.
A copy of the octavo Bible printed by Barker in 1631 (not 1632, as generally said), in which the word 'not' was omitted in the seventh commandment, was bought for £40. For this error (which looks very much like a wicked jest) the printer was fined 1000 marks by the High Commission Court, and the edition was rigidly suppressed, all the copies which could be found being condemned to the flames.

Another purchase was a large collection of political tracts in seventy volumes, chiefly relating to foreign affairs, which had been formed by Mr. — Hamilton, of the Diplomatic Service.

A.D. 1859.

Numerous MSS., chiefly classical, patristic, or Italian, were purchased at the sale of M. Libri's collection in London, in March. Amongst them was a Sacramentary, of the commencement of the ninth century, which was obtained for £43; and a copy of S. Cyprian's Epistles, also of the ninth century, for £84. Four volumes of the correspondence of Scholars at home and abroad with E. H. Barker, of Thetford, were also added to the Library from the sale of Mr. Dawson Turner's library. They are now numbered Bodl. MSS. 1003-1006. And the munificent gift of a very valuable collection of 422 volumes of Arabic and Persian MSS. was received from J. B. Elliott, Esq., of Calcutta. These chiefly consist of the MSS. which Sir Gore Ouseley (who died Nov. 18, 1844,) obtained during his diplomatic service in the East, commencing his collection when stationed at Lucknow, and completing it while ambassador in Persia; of which Mr. Elliott had been the purchaser. A small remaining part had previously been bought by the Library, as noted under 1858. In 1860, Mr. Elliott added to his former gift a series of Eastern coins, and various handsome specimens of Eastern weapons; the latter are now exhibited in a case in the Picture Gallery. Five Sanscrit MSS. were received from Fitz-Edward Hall, Esq., of Saugur, who, at the same time, expressed his munificent intention of presenting hereafter the whole of his large collection.

1 In Burn's High Commission Court, 1865, it is said (from the Reports of proceedings in the Court) that the fine inflicted on Barker was £200 and on Lucas £100. 'With some part of this fine Laud causeth a fair Greek character to be provided, for publishing such manuscripts as time and industry should make ready for the publick view; of which sort were the Catena and Theophylact set out by Lyndsell.' Heylin's Cyprianus Anglicus, p. 228.

In this year, after considerable enquiry had been made respecting different modes of cataloguing, and Mr. Coxe had reported on the arrangements adopted in the great libraries at home and some of those abroad, it was resolved by the Curators, upon that gentleman's recommendation, that the plan in use in the British Museum should be immediately introduced, for the purpose of commencing a new General Catalogue of all the printed books (excepting the Hebrew, of which a separate catalogue had been made) in the whole Library. By this plan, three or five copies, according as the case may be that of a single or double entry, are written simultaneously on prepared paper, as with a manifold-copier, the transcribers writing out in this way the entries of titles previously examined and corrected by the cataloguers. The separate titles are then mounted, arranged in alphabetical order, and bound in volumes. By this plan two copies of the Catalogue are at once written with the labour of one, while surplus slips are also provided for the formation hereafter of a classified catalogue as well. The use of the Catalogue, however, is thus confined to the Library itself; and the literary world in general must still refer to the printed Catalogues of 1843 and 1851. A commencement of the new undertaking was made in this year; but it was not until 1862 that the present staff (as to numbers) of assistants was employed, and the work completely organized. At present the letters A—E, G—H are catalogued; and the extent to which the whole Catalogue will run may be estimated from the fact that the letters B, C, and G fill sixty, sixty-five, and thirty-four volumes respectively. All the books are seen and examined separately; anonymous authors are, if possible, traced out; many errors in previous catalogues are corrected, and the number of entries is very largely increased.

A.D. 1860.

The resignation of the Librarianship by Dr. Bandinel, after forty-seven years of office in the capacity of Head, and a total of fifty of work in the Library, forms a leading feature in the Bodley Annals of this year. At the age of seventy-nine the natural infirmities of age were felt by himself to be incapacitating him for the duties which he had so long and so regularly discharged, while at the same time the continually increasing pressure of work and enlargement of the Library, made those duties much more onerous than they had been even a quarter of a century before. And so he resolved to withdraw at Michaelmas from the place to which he had been so heartily and entirely devoted, and which under his headship had been doubled in contents. The parting was not without a great struggle; it was the abandoning what had been the cherished occupation of his life, and with the ceasing of that occupation he felt a too-certain foreboding (which he expressed to the writer of these pages) that the life would soon cease as well. A well-merited tribute was paid to him by Convocation in June, in both increasing the amount of his statutable pension, so that he retired on a full stipend, and in specially enrolling him among the Curators of the Library. But he was seldom seen in the old place after his resignation; on two or three occasions only did he again mount the long flight of stairs which had of late tried both his strength and breath severely; and then, when only seven months had elapsed, on Feb. 6, 1861, he passed away. And little more than a fortnight previously, on January 20, his old colleague, Professor Reay, departed this life, at the age of seventy-eight. He also had retired on his pension at Michaelmas, 1860, and had been succeeded as Oriental Sub-librarian by Rev. R. Payne Smith (Assistant-librarian in the same department since 1857), whose appointment was confirmed by Convocation on Nov. 22. Memoirs of Dr. Bandinel and Mr. Reay are given in the Gentleman's Magazine, (1861, pp. 463–6), which do justice, in the case of the former, to his watchful solicitude for the Library and his thorough acquaintance with it; and in the case of the latter (evidently from intimate personal acquaintance), to his great kindliness of heart, and simplicity and gentleness of character.

The Convocation for the election of Dr. Bandinel's successor was held on November 6, when, with unanimous consent, the Rev. H. O. Coxe, M.A., Sub-librarian since 1837, was appointed to the office.

A most seasonable and valuable enlargement of the Library was effected, by an addition which henceforth marks an æra in our Annals. On June 12, Convocation thankfully accepted an offer from the Radcliffe Trustees (which had been first mooted by Dr. Acland in 1856), of the use, as a Bodleian reading-room, of the noble building hitherto under their control, the existing contents of which had (for the most part) been removed to the New Museum. Dr. Radcliffe's own original intention had been the building an additional wing to the Bodleian rather than the erecting a library of his own; and subsequently the idea had been entertained of devoting his structure to the exclusive reception of manuscripts¹. Its appropriation, therefore, to the Bodleian

¹ In prosecution of this idea several valuable collections of Oriental MSS. were obtained, which still form part of the stores of the old Radcliffe Library. They
upon the removal of the library of medicine and natural history, was, in some sort, a return to the founder's first design. And the return came most seasonably, when the old walls of the Schools' quadrangle were well-nigh bursting from a plethora of books, and still the cry 'They come' daily caused fresh bewilderment as to whither those that came should go. It was resolved that the new reading-room thus opportunely gained should be appropriated to new books (arranged under a system of classification) and magazines; that it should be called the 'Camera Radcliviana;' and that it should be open from ten A.M. to ten P.M., thus affording the facilities for evening use of the Bodleian which had often been desired for those who were occupied in college work during the day. It was at the close of the year 1861 that the building began to be filled by its new occupants, and on Jan. 27, 1862, (the necessary alterations and preparations having been completed in the short space of the Christmas vacation) it was announced by the Vice-Chancellor to be open as a Reading Room in connection with the Bodleian. A grant of £200 per annum towards the expense of management was made by consist of the Arabic, Persian, and Sanscrit MSS. collected by — Frazer and by Sale, the translator of the Koran, which were obtained (as we learn from Sharpe's Prolegomena to Hyde's Dissertationes, 1767, vol. i. p. xvii.) through Professor Thomas Hunt, at the suggestion of Dr. Gregory Sharpe; and of the collations of the MSS. of the Hebrew Old Test. by Dr. Kennicott (Librarian 1767–1783), together with his correspondence and miscellaneous codices. The Sanscrit MSS. of Frazer and Sale are described in Prof. Aufrecht's catalogue. Other collections in the Radcliffe Library are the classical and historical (as well as medical) books of Dr. Frewin, a physician and Camden Professor of Anc. History; and the law books of Mr. Viner, founder of the Vinerian Professorship and Scholarships; together with the works of J. Gibbs, the justly famous architect of the building in which they were kept, and some coins bequeathed by Wise, the first Librarian. Two volumes of Clarendon MSS. were bought for the Library in 1780, but were united some years since to the mass of those papers preserved in the Bodleian. It was not until the year 1811 that the Library was specially assigned to Medicine and Natural History. (See Report on the transfer of the Radcliffe Library to the Univ. Museum, by Dr. Acland, 1861.)
Convocation on Nov. 28, 1861, which was increased to £300 in 1865, the remainder of the charge, consisting of the incidental expenses, being defrayed from the general funds of the Library.

A large additional space for the reception of books was gained by the closing up the open ground-floor (through which was the former entrance to the reading-room), converting the spaces between the outer arches into windows, and lining the walls within with book-shelves, thus affording accommodation, according to the present reckoning, for about 50,000 volumes. The whole building may probably be reckoned as capable of containing altogether about 75,000 volumes¹.

The terms on which the Radcliffe Trustees made their offer, and which were accepted by the University, were these:—1. That the Radcliffe Building should be a reading-room to the Bodleian, or be used for any other purpose of the Bodleian Library. 2. That it should remain the property of the Trustees, being esteemed a loan to the University. 3. That no alteration should be made in the building without consent of the Trustees or a Representative approved by them. 4. That the expense of maintaining the building should be borne by the Trustees.

The transfer of this magnificent room afforded a rare opportunity for developing the usefulness of the Library to which it is now attached, and all who frequent it will acknowledge that that opportunity has been well and worthily improved under the direction of the present Librarian.

On Oct. 25, leave was granted by Convocation for the lending two Laud Manuscripts, 561 and 563, being copies of the ¹ An account of this assignment and arrangement of the Radcliffe Library, as also of the transfer of the Ashmolean books to the Bodleian, appeared in the Athenaum for Jan. 1865, p. 20.

Historia Hierosolimitana, by Albert of Aix, to the French Government.

At the sale of the library of Dr. Wellesley, Principal of New Inn Hall, a copy of Boccaccio's Corbaccio, 1569, was purchased, on account of its possessing the autograph of Sir Thomas Bodley, to whom it had been given by the editor, J. Corbinelli.

A rare Salisbury Primer, printed at Rouen by Rob. Valentin in 1556, was purchased for £22. Its title affords an amusing specimen of a foreigner's mode of printing English; it runs thus—This prymer of Salisbury use is se tout along with how- tonyser chyng, with many prayers & goodly pycyters. It is intended hereby to be conveyed to the English reader that, without any searching, he will find his prayers and psalms set out in their proper order.

A.D. 1861.

One hundred and four volumes of Tamil MSS. were purchased; as well as four Samaritan MSS. of the Pentateuch, of the twelfth century, which had been brought to England by a native of Samaria.

The Syriac MSS. of the well-known Orientalist, Dr. Bernstein, were purchased by the Delegates of the Press, with a view to assisting in the great work of a Syriac Lexicon, upon which Mr. (now Dr.) Payne Smith was (and still is) engaged.

The printing of the Annual Catalogues of purchases was discontinued, after the issue of the Catalogue for this year. Written registers are now kept in the Library of all the books bought in the course of each year; and 'only a list of benefactors, with the statement of accounts, is annually printed for circulation in the University and amongst donors.
A D. 1862.

A large collection of British Essayists and Periodicals was presented by the late Rev. F. W. Hope, D.C.L., the munificent benefactor to the University Museum, the founder of the Professorship of Zoology, and the donor also of a large collection of engraved portraits and other prints. The collection was one which had been formed by John Thomas Hope, Esq., the donor’s father. It contains some 760 specimens of its class of literature, belonging chiefly to the eighteenth century. Special thanks for the gift were returned by Convocation, on Feb. 20. A catalogue, which had been drawn up for Mr. Hope by Mr. Jacob Henry Burn, containing notices in detail of the various publications, was printed at the University Press, in 1865, in an octavo volume.

A Hebrew MS. of the Pentateuch, probably of the thirteenth century, was bought for £32 10s. Some tracts relating to the period of the Great Rebellion were bought at the sale of Dr. Bandinel’s extensive Caroline collection.

On March 4, the Curators accepted the gift of a bust of Rev. F. W. Robertson, late incumbent of Trinity Chapel, Brighton, which had been purchased by subscription. It is now placed in the Picture Gallery.

A large number of purchase-duplicates, which had accumulated during the course of many years, were removed from the Library and sold by auction, in London, by Messrs. Sotheby and Wilkinson, in May. Among them were some of great rarity. The sale, which lasted five days, produced £766 2s. 6d.; of which £110 5s. were given for a specimen of the St. Alban’s press, the 1 These engravings are deposited in the gallery of the Radcliffe, under the charge of a separate Keeper, the Rev. J. Treacher, M.A. They do not belong to the Bodleian.

Rhetorica Nova of Gul. de Saona, printed in 1489. A second and smaller sale, containing many English works of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, took place on April 12, 1865, at which a copy of Chettle's Kind-Harts Dreame (1593), produced £101, and Decker's Guls Horne-Booke, 1609, £81. The proceeds of the whole sale amounted to £750 18s. 6d.

The Rev. Alfred Hackman, M.A., Chaplain and Precentor of Ch. Ch., and P. C. of St. Paul's, Oxford, and an Assistant in the Library of twenty-five years' standing, was approved by Convocation, on April 12, as Mr. Coxe's successor in the Sub-librarianship; after a discussion, which led to the abrogation by Convocation, in February, of a provision in the Statutes forbidding the holding cure of souls in connection with that office or that of Head-librarian without special licence from the Curators.

A.D. 1863.

Among the purchases made in this year were the following: Card. Ximenes' rare treatise entitled Crestia, printed at Valenti in 1483 (£25); Court-Rolls of Tamworth, Solihull, and other neighbouring places, obtained from Mr. Halliwell; and a collection, in three thick folio volumes, of placards, hand-bills, &c, relating to the town of Coventry, formed by Mr. W. Reader, a printer in that place.

Capt. Montagu Montagu, R.N., who died at Bath, on July 3 in this year, bequeathed a collection of about 700 volumes, in various branches of literature, which was received at the Library about the beginning of 1864. There are about ninety editions and versions of the Psalter, with works on Psalmody, including a metrical version by Capt. Montagu himself; a large number of editions of Anacreon, Horace, Juvenal, Phœdrus, Petrarch, Boileau, and Fontaine's Fables; a few MSS. of Juvenal, Petrarch, &c. with a large series of autograph letters, chiefly obtained at Upcott's sale. There are, besides, a number of topographical and biographical works illustrated, more Sutherlandico, with additional engravings, together with many parcels of separate prints arranged for the same purpose. One item of particular interest which accompanied the collection is a small sketch of Napoleon I, in profile, admirably executed by the well-known Italian artist, Giuseppe Longhi. It now hangs, framed and glazed, in the Library, together with a letter from Longhi himself, in French, dated at Milan, June 4, 1828, in which he narrates the occasion on which it was taken. He attended, in 1801, at Lyons, as a member of the 'Consulte Cisàlpine,' for the settling the affairs of the Republic of Italy, under the presidency of the First Consul. It happened that during the delivery of a long harangue, full of tedious flattery, Napoleon sat vis-à-vis with the orator; and Longhi saw that an opportunity for exercising the cunning of his pencil had come. The light, which streamed in through the great window of the Church (l) where they were assembled, brought out the profile very clearly; there was little fear of being cut short by the speaker's suddenly ceasing his declamation, or of being interrupted by movement on the part of the unconscious subject of the operation, for the latter sat immersed in thought upon matters far away, while regarding the speaker with a pensive air; and so, while Napoleon sat pondering, Longhi sat sketching. And everybody, he declares with a pardonable pride, at Lyons and Paris, pronounced the likeness to be excellent. A small bust of Napoleon, now placed in the great window, came to the Library at the same time. A catalogue of Capt. Montagu's books, comprising forty octavo pages, was printed and circulated with the Annual Statement for 1864.
A.D. 1864.

The chief acquisitions in manuscript books were various Hebrew volumes (for £159), and a series of letters to Malone from Dr. Johnson, Mrs. Siddons, and others; and in printed books, a perfect copy of Cromwell's Great Bible, printed by Grafton in 1539, which was bought of Mr. Fry, the well-known collector, for £100.

A sixth part of the general catalogue of MSS. was issued, containing the Syriac, Carshunic and Mendean MSS., in number 205, which had been drawn up by Rev. R. Payne Smith, M.A., and to which several facsimiles were appended. And the eighth part, containing the Sanscrit MSS., in number 854, appeared under the editorship of Theodore Aufricht, M.A., now Professor of Sanscrit in the University of Edinburgh. A first fasciculus of this had been issued in 1859.

A.D. 1865.

At the beginning of January, a sale was held in London by Messrs. Sotheby and Wilkinson, of the stock of the late Mr. William Henry Elkins, a bookseller, of 41, Lombard Street. At this sale, the Library was the fortunate purchaser of what appears to be a genuine Shakespeare Autograph. The book is Ovid's Metamorphoses, printed by Aldus, at Venice, in October, 1502, in octavo; and on the title is the signature 'Wm. Sh.' in a hand bearing no resemblance whatever to that of the Ireland forgeries, but not unlike that of the signature attached to Shakespeare's will. Opposite to the title, on a leaf pasted down on the original binding of the book, is the note, most certainly a genuine memorandum of the date to which it professely belongs, of which a faithful facsimile is given with that of the autograph.
OVIDII METAMORPHOSEON
LIBRI QVINDECIM.

This little Anchor, Ene, was given to me by the late Mr. Shakespeare. It was once in my possession.

1652
itself, in the accompanying lithograph. That the note itself is no forgery is admitted by all who have examined it; the volume, therefore, is certainly, by tradition, one which belonged to the poet. The only question is, whether the name may not have been forged in consequence of the existence of this note. To this, which is the opinion of some, it may fairly be replied, that, seeing no contracted form of Shakespeare's signature is known to exist, a forger would hardly have invented one for the occasion, but would have given the name in full; while, on the other hand, if the signature be real, what more natural than that a subsequent owner should record the tradition that the indefinite 'Shr.' of this unimportant title-page was no other than the very definite 'Shakspere' himself? The names mentioned in the note are names, as every one knows, connected with the poet's history. Hall was the marriage name of his daughter Susannah, to whom he left his house in Henley Street; and one William Hall, a glover, appears from the Stratford Records printed by Mr. Halliwell, to have had a house in that street in 1660. He, doubtless, was the donor of the volume. Susannah Hall's daughter, Elizabeth, was married to a Thomas Nash, who died in 1647; but though he died without issue, the initials 'T. N.' may well stand for some member of the family who bore the same names. That, therefore, a Hall should possess the book, and subsequently give it to (most probably) a Nash, goes far to establish its genuineness as a Shakespeare relic. In a full account of the volume, supporting its pretensions, which appeared in the Athenaum for Jan. 28, 1865 (p. 126), it was pointed out that the two references to the story of Baucis and Philemon, which are found in Shakespeare's Plays, show that he was not unacquainted with the Metamorphoses. To this may be added a better proof of his knowledge of Ovid's writings in the fact that two lines from the Amores (I. xv. 35, 36) form the motto to the Venus and Adonis. As the volume is somewhat dirty, and has a well-worn air, it may possibly have been used by Shakespeare during those school-keeping experiences of which Aubrey tells us; possibly, however, the wear and tear may be due to an older owner, who has plentifully interspersed his MS. notes in, apparently, a foreign hand, on many of the pages. Owing to a generally-entertained suspicion throughout the auction-room on the occasion of the sale of the volume, that the autograph must be a forgery, the Library became its possessor for the small sum of £9!

---

1 The lithograph represents the lower half of the title-page.

A small volume, containing several papers in the handwriting of Luther, was bought for £45. The first edition of Coverdale's New Testament, printed at Antwerp, by Matthew Crom, in 1538, was added to the Biblical collection. Two interesting and important series of newspapers were obtained; the one, a set (not quite perfect) of the London Gazette, from 1669 to 1859, bought for £200; and the other, a collection of London newspapers, from 1672 to 1737, arranged in chronological order in ninety-six volumes, obtained also for £200. This very curious collection had been formed by Mr. John Nichols; its escape from destruction by the disastrous fire at his printing-office in 1808, is mentioned at p. 99 of the Gentleman's Magazine for that year. It is accompanied by a MS. index, drawn up by Mr. Nichols himself. Many unknown contributions by Defoe to the journals of his time, have recently been traced in this series by a gentleman who has made a special study of the Defoe literature, Mr. W. Lee.

---

1 The purchase of it, as of a relic 'which there is little doubt is genuine,' is noticed in an article on Books and Book-collecting in the Cornbill Magazine for Oct. 1867, p. 496.

2 The only portions of the London Gazette previously to be found in the Library, were of the reign of Charles II; and these only came by the transfer of the Ashmolean Library.
Considerable assistance in completing the Library sets of the Public and Private Acts of Parliament was afforded, in this year, by the late Mr. W. Salt.

Specimens of the first books printed in the Dyak language, which were issued at Singapore in 1862, were given by Rev. J. Rigaud, B.D., of Magdalene College.

On the appointment of Dr. Jacobson to the See of Chester, Mr. R. Payne Smith became his successor in the office of Regius Professor of Divinity. Professor Max Müller, M.A., was thereupon nominated to take Mr. Smith's place as the Sub-librarian in special charge of the Oriental department, and the nomination was confirmed in Convocation on Nov. 7.

A.D. 1866.

There is not much to notice under this year, save that the Vulgaria quedam abs Terencio in Anglicam linguam traducta, printed at Oxford before 1483, was obtained, in a volume containing also two tracts printed by J. de Westphalia, at the sale of the library of Mr. Thomas Thomson, of Edinburgh, for £36. Although complete in itself, it appears to have formed a part of a larger work, as the signatures run from n. to q., in eights.

A.D. 1867.

The closing year of these memorials is distinguished by the acquisition of a volume described by Archdeacon Cotton, in his Typographical Gazetteer, as being 'of the very highest rarity.' It is a fine copy of the Breviarium Illerdense, printed at Lerida, in Spain, in 1479, by Henry Botel. Besides being remarkable from its rarity, there is special interest attaching to the volume from the fact that it was printed at the sole expense of the bell-ringer of the cathedral! The colophon states that 'Antonius Palares, campanarum ejusdem ecclesiae pulsator, propriis expensis huius securit. The volume was bought from Mr. Boone for £36.

A somewhat imperfect copy of the rare Bible printed at Edinburgh by Arabinhott and Bassandynne in 1579, being the first edition printed in Scotland, was another purchase of the year; as were also two thick volumes of recent transcripts of the Stuart correspondence, preserved in the Imperial Library at Paris.

Within the last few years considerable attention has been paid by the Librarian to the formation of a series of editions of the English Bible. The number now collected is very large, and approaches very nearly to a complete gathering of every edition before 1800, which has any claim to regard either from date, imprint, variety of size, correctness, or incorrectness. Early Quaker tracts have also been largely collected, together with editions of Cotton Mather’s works and those of John Bunyan.

A portrait of the Prince of Wales, in academic dress, painted by Sir J. Watson Gordon, was presented towards the close of the year to the University by the Prince, in memory of his academic days, and now hangs conspicuously at the entrance of the Picture Gallery, to which it forms the latest addition.

Prof. Max Müller having resigned his Sub-librarianship on account of health, the Rev. J. W. Nutt, M.A., Fellow of All Souls’ College, was approved by Convocation, on June 25, as his successor in the charge of the Oriental department.

The number of printed volumes at present in the Library may be estimated at nearly 350,000. It was returned to Parliament, in 1848, as about 220,000; and with a view to this return a calculation as nearly accurate as possible was then made. An estimate has now been made of the additions received since that date; and from this it appears that some 79,500 volumes have been placed in the old Library and 45,000 in the Camera Radeliviana, making a total for the whole collection of about 345,000 volumes. Within the same period about 5000 additional manuscripts have been obtained, making a total of nearly 25,000. The number was returned in 1848 as being about 21,000, but this appears to have been somewhat in excess of the fact. The proportion was singularly over-estimated in 1819, for Clarke, in his Repertorium Bibliographicum published in that year (p. 68), states that the Library contains upwards of 160,000 volumes, of which 30,000 are manuscripts! The annual rate of ordinary increase of printed books at present, apart, of course, from the accession of any entire collection or special purchase, may be reckoned at about 3000 volumes, exclusive of magazines, of which two-thirds come from Stationers' Hall under the provisions of the Copyright Act.
APPENDIX A.

Account of the Muscovite Cloak mentioned at p. 40. Extracted from vol. vi. of B. Twyne’s Collections (among the University Archives), f. 97.

‘Mr. Smyth’s Relation of the Tartar Lamskinne garment in Bodleiana, Oxon.

‘Sir Rich. Lee, knight, about the later ende of the raigne of the late Qu. Elizabeth, being by her Maiestie sent ambassador into Russia, amongst other novelties of the cuntry found by the information of the inhabitants, that in Tartaria, a cuntrie neere adjoyning to Muscovia and Russia, and vnder the gouernement of the Emperour of Russia, there did some yeres growe out of the ground certaine livinge creatures in the shape of lambs, bearinge wooll vpon them, very like to the lambs of England, in this manner; viz., a stakle like the stakle of an hertichocke did growe vp out of the ground, and vpon the toppe thereof a budd, which by degrees did growe into the shape of a lambe, and became a liuinge creature, resting vpon the stakle by the navell; and as soone as it did come to life, it would eate of the grasse growinge round about it, and when it had eaten vp the grasse within its reach it would die. And then the people of the cuntry as they finde these lambs doe fleue of their skins, which they preserue and keepe, esteeminge them to bee of excellent vse and vertue, especially against the plague and other noysome diseases of those cuntries.

‘Vpon this information, Sir Rich. Lee was very desirous to haue some of the skyns of these Tartar lambs for his money, which at that time was not to be gotten for money; for that whensoeuer any of those lambs were at any time found, it was very rarely; and then also when they were found, they were presented to the Emperour, or to some other great man of the cuntrie, as a present of great worthye.

‘At this time the Emperour had a gowne or longe cloake, made after the fashion of that cuntrie with the skins of those Tartar lambs; which garment the then Duke, and since Kinge, of Swethland was very desirous to haue and offered great summes of money for, but could by no meanes obtayne his desire.
APPENDIX A.

'At this time also Sir Rich. Lee had an agat of so great biggenesse that he made thereof a pestle and a mortar, whiche the Emperour hauinge notice of, was desirous to haue for his money. Sir Rich. Lee, vnderstandinge thereof, sent it to the Emperour as a present from him, which the Emperour would not accept as a gift, neither would he haue it but for his money. Sir Richard, being willinge the Emperour should haue the pestle and the mortar, yet lothe to playe the marchant at that time, did therefore deliuer this pestle and mortar, into the hands and custodie of the Emperour's physitian to beate his physicke in it for the Emperour; which manner of giuinge this pestle and mortar did so please the Emperour, as that he caused secret enquiringe to be made whether there were any thinges in those cuntres which Sir Richard was desirous to haue, and by that means had notice that Sir Richard had endeououred to haue gotten some of their lambeskyns. Whereupon the Emperour, after Sir Richard had taken his leave of him, and had receaued a great gift of him as an Ambassador, and was departed one dayes journey toward England, the Emperour sent after him the before mentioned garment so made with their Tartar lambraceyns as aforesaid, and with it some fewe skynnes loose, and gaue them all vnto him freellie.

'Sir Richard Lee, travaylinge homewards, came to the Kinge of Swethlandes court, who demaunded of him of diverse thinges of the cuntre of Muscovia; and, amongst other thinges, asked him whether he had seene the aforesaid garment, and he answered, that he had not only seene it, but had it in his possession; whereat the Kinge of Swethland admired, sayinge he had longe laboured to get it for loue or money, but could never obtayne it.

'Sir Rich. Lee in this iourney had not onely gotten this garment and Tartar lambeskyns, but diverse other rich furres and other rarities of great price; the greatest part whereof the Queene tooke of him, and promised him recompence for them, which she neuer performed; which was partly the cause that he concealeed this garment from her duriinge her life. And when Sir Rich. Lee died himselfe, he by his will gaue it to the Library in Oxford, to be kept as a monument there, beinge, as he conceived, the fittest place for a jewell of so great worth and estimation as that is or ought to be.

'Sir Rich. Lee was the neere kinseman of my wife; by reason whereof, I was very familiarly acquaynted with him; and vpon conference had with him about his trauayles at sundry times, I had the true relation of all the premisses from his owne mouth. And I comminge to Oxford to the Act, and findeinge this garment in Sir Tho. Bodley's studdie or closet, without any expression made of the raritie or worth of this garment, did discouer so much as I haue herein written to Mr. Russe, the Keeper of the Library; at whose request I haue set it downe, in writinge. And in testimonie of the truthe thereof, I haue herevnto subscribed my name, the 13th of July, 1634.

EDWARD SMYTHE.

'Transcribed out of the originall with Mr. Russe.
'This Mr. Smyth was a Counsellor of the Temple.'

It appears from this account that the box of scented wood ordered by the Curators in 1614 had never been provided, and that the cloak was already beginning to be neglected. Doubtless suspicion had been early excited as to the truth of the traveller's story which had accompa- nied the gift, and which could scarcey have obtained real credence later than the days of Marco Polo or Sir John Mandeville. In the Ashmolean Museum a painting is preserved which represents the Agnus Scythicus in its fabled state; a full-grown lamb poised on the top of a vegetable stalk, with its legs dependent in the air. But the key to the mystery is attached in the label on the frame: 'Polypodium Baromets. Linn.' It is, in truth, only a large fern found in Tartary, of which the rhizoma is covered with the woolly fungus-like growth, found in greater or less degree on many species of ferns. If the plant be dug up and inverted, the roots being uppermost and the fronds pendent, a strong imagination might find some resemblance in the former to a wool-clad body, and in the latter to limbs, while some of the young fronds with their spiral convolutions might be compared to the horns of a ram, such as are duly represented in the painting mentioned above. A specimen of the plant may be seen in the green-houses of the Botanic Garden, Oxford, where it is still known by the name which the fable imposed, Agnus Scythicus. So great is the woolly growth found upon one species of tree-fern in New Zealand, that (as the writer was informed by Mr. Baxter, the Keeper of the Botanic Garden) tons of it are yearly imported into this country for the purpose of stuffing cushions. A finer and silkier substance is found on a fern indigenous in Mexico.

1 For acquaintance with this picture the author is indebted to Mr. Rowell, whose scientific knowledge so well fits him for the post he worthily holds as Under-keeper of the Ashmolean Museum. In Tradescant's Catalogue of the first contents of this Museum as formed by himself, published in 1656, occurs 'a coat lyned with Agnus Scythicus,' but it does not now exist in the collection.
APPENDIX B.

List of Books printed on Vellum, which have been added to the Library since the year 1830.

1476. Historia Naturale da Plinio, trad. per Chri. Landino. fol. Ven. Nic. Janson. The borders at the commencement of each book, with the principal initial letters, are exquisitely painted and illustrated with the portrait and arms of Ferdinand II of Sicily, to whom the work was dedicated, as well as those of — Strozzi, for whom this copy was probably executed. Bequeathed by Mr. Douce. Exhibited in the glass case at the end of the Library.

S. A. A small duodecimo book of prayers, in German, without any title; with woodcuts. Printed with the types of Hans Schönspurger, of Augsburg. Bequeathed by Mr. Douce.

1 Supplemental to the list appended to Archdeacon Cotton's Typographical Gazetteer in 1831. That numbered 180 separate books; the present additions amount to fifty-four, of which all but nineteen are in the Douce collection.
APPENDIX B.

1629. Rituale monasticum secundum consuetudinem congregationis Vallisbrunnæ. Fol. Florent. Bought in 1843 for 7l. 17s. 6d.

1642. Bibliotheca Eliotæ. Eliotis Librarie. Londini, anno Verbi incarnati M.D.XLI. A fragment, consisting of title, Proheme to Henry VIII in English, address to the reader in Latin, and table of errata; in all, five leaves.

1861. The Souldier's Pocket Bible; an exact reprint of the original edition of 1643, with a prefatory note by George Livermore. 12mo. Cambridge [U.S.], printed for private distribution. This copy was given by Mr. Livermore to Archd. Cotton, and by him to the Library. It was reprinted from a copy in the possession of the editor; only one other is known to exist.

The following vellum-printed Horæ were all bequeathed by Mr. Douce:

1498. Les heures a lusaige de Rome. 4to. Par., pour Simon Vostre.

— — 4to. Par., per Gillet Hardouyn.
1498. Hore secundum usum Sarum. 8vo. Par., per Phil. Pigouchet.

1502. —— By the same printer.

1508. Hore secundum usum Romanum. 8vo. Par., Thielman Kerver.
1511. —— 8vo. Par., Guili. Anabat.
1511. —— 8vo. Par., Thielman Kerver.
[1512.] Les beures a lusaige de Rome. 8vo. Par., per Joh. de Brie.
[1512.] Heures a lusaige de Sens. 4to. Par., Jehan de brye.

— Another edition by the same printer in the same year, but without name or date.
1517. Hore ad usum Romanum. 8vo. Par., Thielman Kerver.
1522. Hore secundum usum Romanum. 4to. Par., Thielman Kerver.

1527. Hore in laudem B. V. Marie, secundum consuetudinem ecclesie Parisiensis. 8vo. Par., per Sim. du bois.

S. A. Hore B. Marie. 8vo. M. E. Jehannot.

— Another edition by the same printer.
S. A. Les beures a lusaige de Rome. 4to. Par., per Guili. Godar.
S. A. Les beures a lusaige Dangiers. 8vo. [Par.] Simon Vostre.
S. A. Heures a l'usaige de Soissons. 8vo. [Par.] Simon Vostre.

List of MSS. formerly in the possession of Cathedrals, Monasteries, Colleges, and Churches in England, Scotland, and Ireland 1.

Aberdeen Cathedral. Ashmole, 1474.
Abingdon. Digby, 39, 146, 227 (fine Missal, with Calendar).
——— John Crystall, Monk of. Rawlinson, C. 940.
Alban’s, St. Auct. F. II. 13; Bodl. 569; Laud Lat. 67; Laud Misc. 279, 358, 363, 370, 409; Rawlinson, C. 31; Rawlinson, Auct. 99 (obtained through Brother Hugh Legat, and given by Abbot John Stoke).
——— Sub-prior. Bodl. 467.
——— Sub-sacrist. Ashmole, 1796.
Alvingham, Linc. Laud Misc. 642.
Athydar, Kildare. Rawlinson, C. 320.
Barking. Laud Lat. 19.
Beauvale, or Bellavalie, Notts. Douce, 114.
Belvoir, Linc. E Mus. 249.
Blisington, Kent. Bodl. 127 (given by John, Vicar of Newchurch).
Boxgrave, Sussex. Rawlinson, A. 411.
Bradsole, near Dover, Priory of St. Radegund. Rawlinson, B. 336.
Bridlington. Auct. D. infra, II. 7; Bodl. 357.
Byland, or Bellalal, Yorkshire. Bodl. 842 (bought from a carpenter);
Laud Misc. 149.
Canterbury, Ch. Ch. Bodl. 214, 379; Laud Misc. 165; Tanner, 18, 223; Rawlinson, C. 168 (Missal, given by Archbp. Warham).
——— W. Bonyngton, a monk, 1483. Rawlinson, B. 188.
——— St. Augustine’s. Bodl. 299, 381, 391, 464, 600; E Mus. 223; Laud Lat. 65; Laud Misc. 225, 396; Wood Donat. 13; Ashmole, 1431; Barlow, 32; Hatton, 94; Maresch. 33; Rawlinson, C. 7, 117, 159.

1 This list does not profess to be complete. But it is believed to comprehend most of the MSS. which afford distinct evidence of former ownership of this kind.
APPENDIX C.

Carlisle Cathedral. Bodl. 728.
—— (a House at). Laud Misc. 582.
Chichester Cathedral (?). Bodl. 143. ('de dono Seffri. Episc.')
Cirencester, St. Mary's Abbey. Barlow, 48.
Cokersand, Lanc. Rawlinson, C. 317.
Croyland. Rawlinson, C. 531.
Dore, Hereford. Laud, 138; E Mus. 82.
—— Hosp. of St. Bartholomew. Rawlinson, B. 335.
Dublin, Cathedral of Ch. Ch. or Holy Trinity. Rawlinson, B. N. Auct. 185 (a magnificent Psalter, written by direction of Prior Stephen de Derby; see p. 179).
—— Abbey of St. Thomas. Rawlinson, B. 500.
—— Hosp. of St. John Bapt. Rawlinson, B. 498.
—— St. Mary's Abbey, near Dublin. Rawlinson, B. 495, C. 60;
Rawlinson, Misc. 1137.
Dulci Corde, or Sweet-Heart, Galloway. Fairfax, 5, (belonged to 'Dervorgoyl de Bayll'[iol], the foundress of this house, and of Balliol College. Bought by Fairfax at Edinburgh in 1652).
Dunfermline (?). Fairfax, 8.
Dunbrothy, Wexford. Rawlinson, B. 494.
Durham Cathedral (St. Cuthbert). Laud Lat. 12; Laud Misc. 368, 489; Rawlinson, C. 4.
—— Thomas Dune, a monk. Douce, 129.
Edmund's, Bury St. Bodl. 216, 240, 297, 715, 737, 860; E Mus. 6, 7, 8, 9, 26, 27, 31, 32, 33, 36, 112; Laud Misc. 742; Rawlinson, C. 697 (all between the 11th and 15th century); Misc. Liturg. 310 (MartYROLOGIUM; given by Rich. Fuller, Chaplain, and Rich. Aleyne, Kerver, in 1472. Bequeathed by Rawlinson).
Ely. Laud, 112.
Evesham. Auct. D. I. 15; Laud Lat. 31; Barlow 7 (Officia Eccles.); Rawlinson, B. N. Auct. 16.
Exeter Cathedral. Auct. D. II. 16, F. III. 6; Bodl. 579, 708 (these given by Leofric); Auct. D. I. 7 and 12 (given by Hugh, Archd. of Taunton); 9 (given by Adam de St. Bridget, Chanter), 13, 18; D. II. 8; D. infra, II. 9 (?); D. III. 10, 11 (?); Auct. F. I. 15; Bodl. 92, 137, 147, 148, 149, 150, 162 (given by Richard Brounste, Vicar Choral), 206, 272, 273, 279, 286, 287, 289, 311, 314, 315, 333, 335, 377, 380, 393;
APPENDIX C.

Exeter. Hosp. of St. John Bapt. Laud, 156.
Finchale, Durham. Laud Misc. 546.
Ford, Devon. Laud Misc. 606.
Fountains' Abbey. Ashmole, 1398, 1437; Laud Misc. 310, 619.
Garendon, Leic. Ashmole, 1516.
Gisburne, Yorkshire. Laud Lat. 5.
Glastonbury. Laud Lat. 4; Laud Misc. 128 (belonged to Thomas Wason, Abbot).
Hanworth (Middlesex?); Richard, Rector. Rawlinson, B. N. Auct. 165.
Hatfield Peverel, Essex. Rawlinson, B. 189 (given by John Bebseth), Prior.

Hereford Cathedral. Rawlinson, C. 67.
—— Vicars Choral. Rawlinson, C. 427.
Hexham ("Hextildesham"). Bodl. 236.
Hickling, Norfolk. Tanner, 194, 425.
Holme Cultram, Cumb. (S. Mar. de Holmo); Hatton, 101.
Jorevall, Yorkshire. Bodl. 514.
Kenilworth, or Kelyngworth, Warw. Auct. F. III. 13 (bequeathed by John Alward, Rector of Stoke Bruerne).
Kilmainham, Dublin. Hosp. of St. John Bapt. Rawlinson, B.

Kirkstall. Laud Lat. 69; Laud Misc. 216; E Mus. 195.
Langley, Norfolk. Bodl. 242 (Registrum).
Leicester, St. Mary of the Meadows. Laud Misc. 623, 625.
Lesnes, or Lyesnes, or Westwood, Kent. Bodl. 656; Douce, 287.
Lichfield Cathedral. Ashmole, 1518.
London, St. Paul's Cathedral. Digby 89 ('Liber Magistri Thomæ Lysiaux, decani Sancti Pauli').
—— The Carmelites. Laud Lat. 87.
—— Hosp. of St. Mary of Elyng, now Sion College. E Mus. 113.
Louth Park, Linc. Fairfax, 17.
Maxstoke, Warwickshire. Bodl. 182.
Merton, Surrey. Digby, 147; Ashmole, 1522.
—— John Ramsey, Canon of. Seld. supra, 39.
Mottenden, or Motynden, Kent. Bodl. 643 (bought by Brother Richard de Lansyng in 1467 for 26s. 8d.)
New Place, Sherwood. Laud Lat. 54; Laud Misc. 458.
Norwich Cathedral (Holy Trinity). Bodl. 151, 787; Fairfax, 20;
Douce, 366, (see infra, p. 329.)
Nutley, or Notley Abbey, Bucks. Douce, 183, iii.
Oseyne, Oxford. Bodl. 655; Digby, 23 (bequeathed by Henry de Langley); Rawlinson, C. 939 (Officia Eccles.).
Osyth, St., Essex. Laud Misc. 329.
—— Exeter College. Bodl. 42; Digby, 57*
—— (Hertford College. Printed Tracts on the Bangorian Controversies, 8vo. I. 237, BS.)
—— Lincoln College. Bodl. 198 (‘ex dono doctoris Thome Gascoigne’).
—— Merton College. E Mus. 19 (given by William, Bishop of Chichester); Bodl. 50 (bequeathed by Thomas English), 689 and 757 (given by Henry Sever, Warden, in 1468), 700 and 751 (given by Richard Fitz-James, Bishop of Chichester); Digby, 155 (given by John —— St. Edmund Hall. Rawlinson, C. 900 (given by Hen. VIII).
—— St. Mary’s College. Bodl. 637.
—— Staple Hall. Ashmole, 748.
—— The Minorites. Digby, 90 (given in 1388, by John de Teukesbury, with the assent of Thos. de Kyngusbury, ‘Minister Anglie’).
—— (name cut off), Bodl. 215.

1 Pius Mirandula de Provenientia Dei, 1508. Given to the library of the Church by Rich. Sparchoford, Archdeacon of Salop, Oct. 19, 1557. It had previously belonged to Linacer.
2 Hunc librum emis . . . . . a magistro Philip, rectore collegii Exon, a. Xi.
1468, una cum volvella solis et lune.’
3 Galani Consiliiato Eccl. Armanda cum Romana, 1650. It is satisfactory to be able to add, that the Bodleian obtained this book, as Bishop Booth obtained the Robertsbridge MS. (infra) ‘modo legitimo;’ a memorandum records that it was ‘bought of Fletcher the bookseller.’
APPENDIX C.

Paington Parish, Devon. Rawlinson, C. 314 (Canons of Bishop Quivil).

Pershore. Bodl. 209; Barlow, 3; Rawlinson, C. 81.

Peterborough Cathedral. Barlow, 22; (see infra, p. 328.)

Pipewell, Northampton. Rawlinson, A. 388.

Pleshey, Essex, Trinity College. Bodl. 316.

Pontrufc, Holy Trinity Hospital. Barlow, 49.

Ramsey. Bodl. 883.

—— Welles, a monk of. Bodl. 857.

Reading, St. Mary's Abbey. Auct. Digby, B. N. 11; Digby, 148, 200; Bodl. 125, 197, 200 (given by W. de Box), 241, 257, 550, 570, 713, 730 (?) 772, 781, 848; Laud Misc. 79, 91, 725; Auct. D. I. 19; D. II. 12; D. III. 12, 15; Auct. F. III. 8; infra, l. 2; Rawlinson, A. 375.

Robertsbridge, Yorkshire. Bodl. MS. 132 (written by Will. de Wodecherche, 'laicus quondam conversus Pontis Roberti').

Roche, or de Rupe, Yorkshire. Rawlinson, C. 329.

Rochester Cathedral. Laud Misc. 40.

Rossevalle, Kildare. Rawlinson, C. 33 (Ordo servitii).

Salisbury Cathedral. Digby, 173 (given by Peter Fadir, Vicar Choral); Bodl. 407, 516, 756, 765, 768, 835; Rawlinson, C. 400 (Pontificale, given by Bishop Martivall).

Selby. Fairfax, 12.

Sempringham. Douce, 136 (?)

Shene, Surrey, Carthusian Priory. Bodl. 797; Rawlinson, C. 57 (8vo. H. 36 Th. Bs., a book printed in 1608, belonged apparently to some foreign branch of this house: 'Domus Shene Anqlorum').

Shrewsbury, St. Chad. Rawlinson Misc. 1131. (Martyr. and Obit.)

1 On the last leaf of this MS. there is a list, faintly written with a style, of some twenty MSS. (including 'triplices cantus' for the organ), written by one monk, to which the memorandum is added: 'Hec sunt opera fratris W. de Wicb. per quadrinium apud Leom. (i.e. Leominster, a cell to Reading) commorantia.' The list commences, 'Nota quod frater W. de Wicb. (probably Wicunbe), precibus domini J. de Abend, tunc precentoris, hortatu vero et precepto domino R. de Wygorn, tunc supprioris, collectarium cotidianum secundum usum Radig corrext et de duobus usum fecit.' The book may have belonged to either Reading or Leominster.

2 The usual anathema is subjoined on any one stealing the book from the house of St. Mary 'de Ponte Roberti,' or in any part mutilating it; which is followed by this self-exculpatory note on the part of a subsequent possessor: 'Ego Johannes, Exon. episcopus, nescio ubi est domus prædicta, nec hunc librum abstulii, sed modo legittimo adquisivi.' Th's John would seem to be John Booth, who was Bishop of Exeter from 1466 to 1479.

3 The name of Peter Fader is found also in MS. Arch. Seld. B 36.
APPENDIX C.

Sion, or Syon, Middlesex. Bodl. 630.
Southwark, St. Mary Overy. Ashmole, 1285.
——— John de Lecchelade, a Canon. Rawlinson, B. 177.
Stafford, St. Mary. Auct. F. V. 17; Hatton, 74.
Staindrop, Durham, The College. Rawlinson, A. 363 (given by Thos.
Heddon, Vicar of Gainford, in 1515).
Tattershall, Linc. Bodl. 419.
Thorney, Cambr. Bodl. 680; Laud Misc. 364; Tanner, 10.
Titchfield, Hants. Digby, 154.
Trentham, Staff. Laud Misc. 453.
Tynemouth. Laud Misc. 657.
Valle Crucis, De, Denbigh. E Mus. 3.
Waltham. Laud Lat. 109; Laud Misc. 515; Rawlinson, B. N. Auct.
62 (given by Peter, Archdeacon of London); Rawlinson, C. 330.
Wardon, Bedfordshire. Laud Misc. 447.
Warter, Yorkshire. Fairfax, 9.
Waverley, Surrey. Bodl. 527.
Winchcombe, or Winchelcumbe, Glouc. Douce, 368.
Winchester Cathedral (Domus S. Swythini). Bodl. 767.
Windsor. Bodl. 208, 822.
Witham, or Wytham, Somerset. Bodl. 801 (Ex dono Joh.
Blacman).
Worcester Cathedral. Auct. F. infra, I. 3; Digby, 150 (?); Bodl. 861
.removed in 1590), 868; Junius, 131.
——— Fratres Praedicatorum. Rawlinson, C. 780.
York Minster (?) Rawlinson, C. 775.
——— Succentor (?) Douce, 225.
——— St. Mary’s Abbey. Rawlinson, B. N. Auct. 11; Arch. A. Rot.
21; (see p. 329.)
—— Hosp. of St. Leonard. Rawlinson, B. 455.
[Many of Laud’s MSS. came from a Carthusian Monastery near Mentz, and from the Monastery of Eberbach, in the Duchy of Baden.
It is worth mentioning that No. 233 amongst his Miscellaneous MSS.
belonged to John Lydgate, and No. 576 to John Foxe. Several others had been previously in the possession of Archbp. Usher, and of Lindsell, Bishop of Peterborough.
No. 76 of Digby’s MSS. was bought by Dr. John Dee, at London,
May 18, 1556, ‘ex bibliotheca Joh. Lelandi.’]
APPENDIX D.

List of MSS. and Miscellaneous Objects of interest exhibited in the Library.

GLASS CASE NEAR THE ENTRANCE OF THE LIBRARY.

1. A Telugu MS. on palm-leaves, brought from India by Sir Thos. Strange, formerly Chief Justice of Madras, together with a style employed for writings of this kind, and a pocket-knife. Given by Sir T. Strange’s daughter, Mrs. Edmund Foulkes, in 1864.

2. Drawings and engravings of Buddhist idols; brought from a Joss-house in a Llama monastery in Pekin, in 1862, and given to the Library by Lieut.-Col. Gibbes Rigaud, of the 60th Rifles.

This book commences at the year 1820. Among the autographs which it contains may be mentioned the following in particular:

Her Majesty the Queen, Nov. 8, 1832, with the Duchess of Kent; Dec. 12, 1860.

The Prince Consort, June 15, 1841; June 4, 1856; Jan. 9, 1857 (in company with his three eldest children); Dec. 12, 1860.

Prince of Wales, Jan. 9, 1857; March 27, 1860; June 18, 1863.

Princess of Wales, June 18, 1863.

Gul. Gesenius, Aug. 5, 1820.

Sir John Franklin, 1839.

Sir D. Wilkie, June 14, 1834.

Bishop Selwyn, June 30, 1837.

Chevalier Bunsen, Jan. 24, 1839; Aug. 20, 1844.

Princes of Ashantee, June 10, 1840.

Henry Hallam, Oct. 16, 1840.

Bishop of Malabar, Mar Athanasius Abdelmesih, June 12, 1841.

M. Berryer, Nov. 23, 1843.

W. H. Prescott, June 24, 1850.

Alfred Tennyson, June 11, 1855.

A Siamese Prince, June 29, 1858.

Lord Brougham, June 20, 1860.

Lord Palmerston, July 2, 1862.
Queen Emma of Honolulu, Aug. 14, 1865.
Chinese Ambassadors, June 7, 1866.
Until the year 1861 it was also the custom for all graduates of Cambridge and Dublin who were admitted ad eundem to enter their names in this book; it is to this custom that we owe possession of the signature of the ex-Metropolitan of New Zealand.

4. New Testament, said to be bound in a piece of a waistcoat of King Charles I. See p. 53.

5. Another, bound by the Sisters of Little Gidding. See p. 53.

Many autographs of distinguished literary men are found in the old Registers of all the persons admitted to read in the Library, since in these the readers themselves generally entered their own names. The first 'Liber admisrorum' contains the names of both graduates and non-academics, the names in the first case being only in part autograph; it commences about the year 1610, and ends, in the case of graduates, arranged under their several colleges, about 1676; in the case of strangers, at 1692. The second Register, which is 'peregrinorum et aliorum admisrorum' alone, begins at 1682 and ends at 1833. The first existing register of books used by readers begins Jan. 3, 1647-8, and ends Dec. 30, 1649. The following are some of the names, of some special mark, which are found in the Admission-books:

George Bull, 'SS. Theol. Studiosus, per dispensat.' July 5, 1656.
Andrew Marvell, Sept. 30, 1665.
Henry Dodwell, Oct. 20, 1666.
Thomas Rymer, June 20, 1683.
Edmund Calamy, 'Londinensis,' Aug. 18, 1691, and in 1722.
Sir George Mackenzie, Dec. 14, 1694, and several times subsequently.
Thomas Madox, Sept. 21, 1705.
Joshua Barnes, July 22, 1706.
William Whiston, Sept. 28, 1710.
C. Wesley, 'Edis Xti alumnus,' April 19, 1729.
George Ballard, Dec. 9, 1747.
Edw. Rowe Mores, Commoner of Queen's College, Aug. 29, 1748.
John Uri, 'Korosini, Hungarus,' Feb. 17, 1766.
Joh. Schweighäuser, June 13, 1769.
J. J. Griesbach, March 22, 1770.
John Macbride, 'ex Coll. Exon. (the late venerable Principal of Magd. Hall, who was only removed by death at the beginning of the present year), May 10, 1797.
Philip Bliss, Feb. 9, 1809.
APPENDIX D.

7. Bacon’s Essays; in a worked binding. See p. 51.

8. Specimen of the early Block-books, or books printed from engraved blocks before the invention of moveable types; being the Apocalypse, represented in a series of rudely-engraved scenes, with short explanatory descriptions.

This is a copy of the edition called by Mr. S. Leigh Sotheby, in his Principia Typographica, the Second; it belonged to Mr. Douce, who bought it for thirty-one guineas at Mr. Inglis’ sale.¹

A copy was sold at the auction of the library of the Duke of Sussex, in 1841, for the moderate sum of £190; when the same copy, however, was re-sold at the auction of the library of Dr. Daly, Bishop of Cashel, in 1858, it produced no less than £506.

10. A copy of the first book printed in the English language, being The Recuyell of the Histories of Troy, printed by Caxton, most probably at Bruges, about 1472.

This copy wants three leaves; it was given to the Library in 1750, by James Bowen, a painter of Shrewsbury, well known as a local antiquarian. A second copy, which wants seven leaves, is also in the Library. A copy, wanting forty-four leaves, was sold at Uterson’s sale in 1852 to the Earl of Ashburnham for £155.

11. The English Bible, translated by Myles Coverdale from the Vulgate, and printed abroad in 1535.

This copy of the first complete Bible printed in our language, is one of the largest and soundest known to be in existence, although, like almost all other copies, it wants the title. It was formerly in the possession of Selden. A facsimile title, engraved by Mr. Fry, of Bristol, from the Marq. of Northampton’s copy, accompanies it, together with another leaf in facsimile, from the Earl of Leicester’s copy. Another and more imperfect copy came to the Library among the books

¹ Of this xylographic Apocalypse the Library possesses two other editions; one being that called by Mr. Sotheby the Fourth, which was given by Archbp. Laud, and the other being that called the Fifth by Sotheby, but ‘Edizio princeps’ by Heinecken, which was bought in 1853 for £120 5s. Other Block-books in the Library are, (1) two editions of the Biblia Pauperum, or Scenes from Bible History; one coloured, the other (which belonged to Douce) uncoloured; (2) the Historia B. M. V. ex Canico Cantico, being the edition called the Second by Sotheby; (3) Propugnaculo, seu Turris Sapientiae, a broadside, bought in 1853 for six guineas. A facsimile of this is given in vol. ii. of Sotheby’s Principia; (4) Speculum Humanæ Salutis in. In this book, which is the second Latin edition of the work (formerly described as the Edizio princeps), twenty pages are taken off from wood-blocks, and the rest from moveable type. The copy belonged to Douce. It came previously ‘ex Musmo Pauli Girardot de Prefond,’ but is not mentioned in De Bure’s catalogue of that library, published in 1757. It is said that a copy of this book has been sold for the large sum of 300 guineas.
APPENDIX D.

bequeathed by Mrs. Denyer. In 1854 a copy nearly perfect, having only two leaves in facsimile by Mr. Harris, was sold at Mr. Dunn Gardner's sale for the large sum of £364; and a very imperfect copy was sold for £190 in 1857.

14. The original MS. of Addison's Letter (in verse) from Italy to Lord Halifax.

A Rawlinson MS.

The same volume contains various other letters from the same to the same, which were printed by Curll in 1737; one by Dryden, three by J. Norris of Bemerton, three short notes from Young, and several letters by Ladies Hester Pakington and Mary Chudleigh. It belongs to the Rawlinson collection of MSS.

16. Letter from Archbp. Laud to Sir W. Boswell, the English Resident at the Hague; dated from Lambeth, Nov. 26, 1638.

It refers to libels printed in Holland, and particularly to one against Laud, supposed to be then printing at Amsterdam, entitled, The Beast is Wounded. 'I thank God I trouble not myselfe much with these things; but am very sorry for the Publicke, which suffers much by them.' Bought in 1685 at a sale at the Hague for £7 17s., together with a letter on diplomatic business signed by Sir Thomas Bodley, and dated at the Hague, April 11, 1589, which is now bound in the same volume.

17. Archbp. Laud's formal Letter of resignation of his office as Chancellor of the University, signed by himself, and dated from the Tower, June 22, 1641. In Latin; on parchment.

Endorsed by Ant. à Wood with this memorandum: 'Given to me by Rob. Whorwood, of Oxon, Gent., 29 Feb., 1679.'

1 A touching letter, in English, dated June 28, which Laud forwarded, together with this formal document, is printed in vol. ii. of Wharton's edition of his Remains, p. 217. In the same volume are included copies of all the letters which accompanied the Archbishop's gifts to the Library. The following reply (ibid. p. 177) to a notification from the Vice-Chancellor, Dr. Frewen, of the visitation of his collection, and of the giving special charge to the Librarian respecting their safe custody, seeing that they stood unchained, and in a place frequented by strangers who came to see them, should have been noticed in its due place in the Annals.

'SIR,

'I thank you heartily for your care of my books. And I beseech you that the Library-keeper may be very watchful to look to them since they stand unchained. And I would to God the place in the Library for them were once ready, that they might be set up safe, and chained as the other books are; and yet then, if there be not care taken, you may have some of the best and choicest tractats cut out of the covers and purloin'd, as hath been done in some other libraries.'

'W. CANT.

'Lambeth, Nov. 15, 1639.'
APPENDIX D.

18. Lord Clarendon's Letter, resigning the same office upon his going into exile; written in a secretary's hand, but signed by himself. Very touching and beautiful. It runs as follows:—

"For Mr. Vicechancellor of Oxford.

"Good Mr. Vicechancellor,

"Having found it necessary to transport myselfe out of England, and not knowing when it will please God that I shall returne againe; it becomes me to take care that the University may not be without the service of a person better able to be of use to them, then I am like to be; and I doe therefore hereby surrender the office of Chancellor into the hands of the said University, to the end that they make choice of some other person better qualified to assist and protect them then I am, I am sure he can never be more affectionate to it. I desire you, as the last suite I am like to make to you, to believe that I doe not fly my Country for guilt, and how passionately soever I am pursued, that I have not done any thing to make the University ashamed of me, or to repent the good opinion they had once of me, and though I must have noe farther mention in your publique devotions (which I have always exceedingly valued) I hope I shall be always remembred in your private prayers as

"Good Mr. Vicechancellor,

"Your affectionate servant.

"Calice, this 47 Dec. 1667."

CLARENDON.

19. A volume of the Papers of W. Bridgeman, Under-secretary of State to James II (bequeathed to the Library by Dr. R. Rawlinson; see p. 173), open at a leaf containing the original declaration written and signed by the Duke of Monmouth, on the day of his execution, of the nullity of his claim to the Crown.

The following is a copy:—

"I declare ye ye title of King was forct upon mee, & ye it was very much contrary to my opinion when I was proclam'd. For ye satisfaction of the world I doe declare that ye late King told mee that Hee was never married to my Mother.

"Having declard this I hope ye the King who is now will not let my Children suffer on this Account. And to this I put my hand this fifteenth day of July, 1685.

MONMOUTH.

"Declard by Himselfe, & sign'd in the presence of us.

"Fran. Ellen. [Turner].

"Tho. Bath & Wells [Kem].

"Tho. Tenison.

"George Hooper."

Beside it is placed the Proclamation of James II, ordering the apprehension of all persons dispersing the Declaration issued by Monmouth upon his landing in England; dated but one short month previously, June 15, 1685.

The same volume contains two letters from Monmouth to the King, begging for his life, and one to the Queen. These have been frequently printed.

20. A Sanscrit roll, written at the end of the last century, containing extracts from the Bhagavadgita; with paintings representing the incarnations of Vishnu, &c.

In a wooden case. One of the Frazer MSS.

21. A magnificent folio volume, containing a series of illustrations of Scripture History from Genesis to Job; written about the beginning of the fourteenth century.

Each page contains, in double columns, four pairs of miniatures painted, in medallion-form, upon a gorgeous ground of gold; the first of each pair represents some historical scene, which the second treats allegorically, and applies to the condition of the Church or of individual Christians. Two other volumes are to be found in the British Museum, and in the Imperial Library at Paris.

22. A small oaken platter, bearing the following inscription: 'This Salver is part of that Oak in which his Majesty K. Charles the 2d, Concealed himself from the Rebels, and was given to this University by Mrs. Letitia Lane.'

The donor was the daughter of Col. John Lane, the chief agent in the King's escape from Worcester; she died in 1709.1

23. Specimen of Javanese writing, being a letter from a Javanese Chief to the Resident of Soorabaya. The seal bears the date of 1780.

24. Small specimen of an Arabic MS.

25. A fragment in large Persian characters.

26. A specimen of Malabaric writing, upon a palm-leaf, three feet in length. 'Aug. 9, 1630. Ex dono Jo. Trefusis, generosi Cornubiensis, e Coll. Exon.'

27. A Russian painting upon a shell, representing a female saint called S. Parasceve, η Παρασκευή, who is found in the Greek Menology, but whose history is believed by the Bollandists to be a pious fiction.

28. A Hebrew Bible, beautifully written in the fourteenth century; in triple columns, with the Masoretic commentary written in very minute characters, and frequently in fantastic figures, round each page.

One of the Oppenheimer MSS.

29. Hours. An illuminated MS. of the middle of the fifteenth century, in 4to., probably by a French scribe and artist.

From the Canonici collection.

30. Another MS. of the Hours, in folio, of the fifteenth century, beautifully illuminated, with many miniatures varying in the treatment of some of the scenes which they represent from the common type.

Traditionally said, but on what evidence does not appear, to have belonged to Henry VIII.

APPENDIX D.

From the Rawlinson collection.

32. A fourth MS. of the Hours, very early in the fifteenth century, or about the close of the fourteenth.
Also from the Rawlinson collection. All these copies of the Hours appear to be of French execution.

33. A pair of long white leather gloves, worked with gold thread, which were worn by Queen Elizabeth when she visited the University in 1566¹.

34. A Latin exercise book, in 4to., which appears to have been filled up by Edward VI and his sister Elizabeth, jointly.

Sentences written by the former are dated from Jan. 1548-9 to Aug. 1549.
The boy-monarch has written his own name in several parts of the book. It came to the Bodleian 'ex dono doctissimi viri P. Junii, Bibliothecarlii Regii, A.D. 1639.'
Patrick Young also gave another book in Edward's handwriting in folio, containing Greek and Latin phrases, written very neatly in 1551-1553².

35. Mexican Hieroglyphics; painted on a long skin of leather.

37. Two Runic Primstaves, or wooden Clog-Almanacks: one in the form of a walking stick; the other, an oblong block, with a handle.
See pp. 105, 161.

An engraving of the second may be found in the Anglican Church Calendar illustrated, published by Messrs. Parker. And a description of these primitive Calendars is given by Plut in his Natural History of Staffordshire, 1686, pp. 418-432, where there is an engraving of a Clog which was still in use in Staffordshire at that time.

38. Eight small wooden tablets, apparently a 'pocket-edition of a Clog-Almanack, with very quaint figures.

Given by Archbp. Laud.

40. A Persian poem, by Jami, on the history of Joseph and Potiphar's wife. Written A.D. 1569, and decorated with some very good paintings and arabesque borders³.

One of Greaves' MSS.

¹ No. 7762 in the catalogue of the South Kensington Museum, in 1862.
² Mr. John Gough Nichols, in his collection of the Literary Remains of Edw. VI, printed by the Roxburghe Club in 1857 (vol. i. pp. ccxxxiii–ccxxxv), describes these volumes at length, and assigns the whole of both of them to the pen of the King, but some part of the first volume corresponds much more closely with the usual style of Elizabeth's early writing, and a memorandum by Hearne testifies that it was regarded in his day as having been written by her.
³ The poem of Joseph and Zuleikha, in the Public Library at Oxford, is perhaps the most beautiful MS. in the world; the margins of every page are gilt and 41. A specimen of Telugu writing on palm-leaves; being an almanack for the year 1630.

Given by Archbp. Laud.

42. A French panegyrical poem, presented to Queen Elizabeth, in 1586, by Georges de la Motthe, a French refugee; with a prefatory address in prose.

Enriched with an exquisite portrait of the Queen, in all the grandeur of her wide circumference, and with golden hair of very pronuncis hue; and with a great variety of beautifully-executed monograms, symbols, &c. around each page. The binding is richly tooled and covered with designs; while in the centre on either side, protected by glass, are brilliant bosses, said to be composed of humming-birds' feathers.

'Ex dono ornatisimis, simul ac optimæ spei, juvenis D. Johannis Cope, armigeri, equitis aurati, baronettì f. nato maximi, olim Reginensis Oxon, Almae Matris ergò. 4 Cal. Jan. 1656.'

On a fly-leaf at the end is attached a fragment from some English theological treatise, in wonderfully minute, although clear, handwriting.

43. The Koran, on a long and narrow roll, very elegantly written in minute characters.

Given by Archbp. Laud.

44. A Syriac fragment, on three leaves of paper.

45. A specimen of Chinese printing, on rice-paper.

46. A specimen of the Papyrus-plant, in its natural state.

47. A fine MS. of the Koran, from the library of Tippoo Sahib at Seringapatam.

Given by the East India Company in 1806; see p. 208.

48. A small Egyptian mummy-figure, of baked clay.

Given by Archbp. Laud.

49. A Burmese MS., written in large black characters on thirty-nine gilded palm-leaves.

'Taken from a priest's chest in an idol-house of the deserted village of Myanoung, on the Irawaddy, thirty-five miles below Prome, April 17, 1825.' Given by Rev. Joseph Dornford, Oriel College, Nov. 8, 1830.

IN THE OPPOSITE, OR NORTH, WING.

A large glass case containing a series of MSS. executed by English scribes, arranged chronologically, so as to exhibit the progress and development of the arts of caligraphy and illuminating in England, adorned with garlands of flowers, and the handwriting is elegant to the highest degree.' (I. Disraeli's Romances, 1799. P. 52.)
APPENDIX D.

This case was added by the present Librarian three or four years ago. The following are its contents:—

1. King Alfred’s Anglo-Saxon version of the treatise De cura pastorali of Pope Gregory the Great, being the copy sent by the King to Werfrith, Bishop of Worcester.

Given by Lord Hatton; see p. 100.

2. A beautiful Latin Psalter of the tenth century, written in Anglo-Saxon characters, with an interlinear translation, and decorated with grotesque initial letters.

Junius MS. 37. The volume is frequently called Codex Vossianus, from its having been in the possession of Isaac Voss, who gave it to Junius. Facsimiles are given by Professor Westwood, in his Palæographia Sacra, and in his new and splendid book of Fac-similes of the Miniatures and Ornaments of Anglo-Saxon and Irish MSS.

3. The Four Gospels, in Latin, written in Anglo-Saxon characters, about the beginning of the eleventh century.

It appears to have belonged to the abbey at Barking, a gift of tithes at Laleseie, by Adam, son of Leomar de Cochefeld, being entered on a leaf at the end by order of the abbess Ælfira. Now numbered Bodl. 155.

4. The famous Anglo-Saxon metrical paraphrase of parts of Genesis, Exodus, Daniel, &c. by Cædmon; illustrated, as far as Abraham’s journey into Egypt, with a very curious series of drawings.

The MS. is considered to have been written about A.D. 1000. The latest description of the volume is in Westwood’s magnificent book of Fac-similes. See p. 102.

5. The Psalter, Canticles, &c, in Latin, with a Calendar; written in the first half of the eleventh century.

Noticed in Westwood’s Miniatures and Ornaments, &c, p. 122. Douce, 266.

6. A twelfth-century volume containing, besides various historical works, a Bestiary, or Natural History of Beasts, illustrated with very curious drawings.

Given by Archbp. Laud.

1 This book, which has appeared since the earlier sheets of this volume were printed, contains descriptions, with facsimiles, of the Leofric, Dunstan, and Mac-Regol MSS. and of the Rawlinsonian Life of St. Columba, besides those noticed above.

2 Cædmon was a monk of St. Hilda’s Abbey, and died in 680. Bede (Eccl. Hist. iv. 24) tells the well-known story of his being miraculously enabled by a vision to compose vernacular verses, when previously he had been entirely unable to compose or sing a line, so that when present as a layman at feasts-where, on the principle of “no song, no supper,” every one was expected to raise a lay in his turn, he was wont, when he saw the harp coming round, to rise from his place and go home supperless.
APPENDIX D.

7. A Bestiary of the beginning of the thirteenth century, enriched with many very curious paintings upon a ground of brilliant gold. Ashmole, 1511.

8. Another Bestiary, of slightly later date, illuminated in the same manner. Bodl. 764.

9. The Apocalypse, illustrated in a series of very curious drawings, lightly coloured. Executed about 1250. These illuminations have been pronounced by Mr. Coxe, to be, with little or no doubt, executed by the same hand as those of MS. Ee. III. 59. in the University Library, Cambridge, a volume which contains a Life of Edward the Confessor, in French verse, and which was printed in 1858, under the editorship of H. R. Luard, M.A., in the series of Chronicles published under the authority of the Master of the Rolls. In this Life is found a particular description of Westminster Abbey, which is not elsewhere met with, and it is consequently inferred that the writer was a monk of that church. And in the course of the restorations which are now being carried on in the Chapter House (which was built about 1250), a series of mural paintings, illustrating the history of St. John, has been brought to light, one of which is a representation similar to that in the Bodley MS. of St. John 'ante portam Latinam,' and in both cases the cauldron bears the same inscription of 'Doloris ferventis olei.'

10. A Primer, written about the middle of the fourteenth century. The arms of Edw. III (England 1 and 4, France 2 and 3) are painted on the first leaf. One of Rawlinson's MSS.

11. A beautiful Psalter, which belonged to Peterborough Cathedral. 'Psalterium fratri Walteri de Rouceby,' followed by the Canticles, Athanasian Creed, Litany, &c. A Calendar is prefixed, with Peterborough obits, from which it appears that Rouceby died May 4, 1341. A series of nineteen miniatures, illustrating the life of our Blessed Lord and of the Virgin Mary, precedes the Psalter. The arms of Edward III appear at the head of Ps. 1. One of Bp. Barlow's MSS.; in 1604 it belonged to one John Harborne.

12. A Psalter, with Canticles, Hymns, &c, written in the latter half of the fourteenth century. Apparently one of Rawlinson's MSS.

13. 'Ye Dreme of Pilgrimage of ye Soule, translated out of French [of G. Guileville] into Inglissh, with somwhat of addicions of ye translatour, ye zeere of our Lord, 1400.' Illustrated with curious coloured drawings. A precursor of Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress, with which it has been compared. It was printed by Caxton in 1483, and his edition was reprinted in 1859. This MS. was given to the Library, apparently in Bodley's time, by Sir James Lee, Knt.

14. Commentary on the Passion of our B. Lord ('Scripta super totam Passionem Christi a quatuor Evangelistis formatam'), by Michael de Massa, of the order of Augustinian Hermits.
APPENDIX D.

Written (as a final colophon records) by Ralph de Medytone at Ingham (Suffolk?), A. D. 1405, for Sir Miles de Stapilstone. A drawing of the Crucifixion at the beginning. Bodd. MS. 758.

15. The Mirrour of the Worlde, that some calleth Vice and Vertu; translated from the Latin of Laurence the Frenchman (Laur. Gallus), and illustrated with some drawings of remarkable grace and spirit, supposed to be by some Flemish artist.

A MS. of the early part of the fifteenth century; on paper. Bodd. 283.

17. Treatise of Roger Bacon, de retardacione accidentium senectutis; with two drawings. Middle of the fifteenth century. Bodd. MS. 311.

18. An English astrological Calendar, in six divisions, folded for the pocket; written in the latter half of the fourteenth century.

Extremely curious; contains prognostications of the weather, fatality of the seasons, &c, accompanied with innumerable figures of saints, illustrations of prognostics, the symbols found on the Runic Clog-Almanacks, the occupations of the several months, the signs of the Zodiac, and two quinst figures respectively labelled 'Harry ye Haywarde' with his dog 'Talbat,' and 'Ferus ye Fyndare.' Formerly kept in a qin box. It contains the following note by T. Hearne: 'Oct. 17, 1719. This strange odd book (upon which I set a very great value, having never seen the like) was given me by the Rt. Reverend Father in God William [Fleetwood] Lord Bishop of Ely, to whom I am oblig'd upon many other accounts.'

19. An Historical Roll, upwards of thirteen feet long, showing the descent of the English Kings, from the expedition of Jason in search of the Golden Fleece to the accession of Edward I (1272). Formerly belonging to the Abbey of St. Mary at York.

Illustrated with representations of various scenes up to the landing of Brute in the Isle of Wight, and thereupon with portraits of the monarchs.

In the Douce collection. Engraved in facsimile during the past year, 1857, for the Roxburghe Club, to illustrate the Itineraries of William Wey, which were edited by Rev. G. Williams, B.D., for the same Club, from Bodd. MS. 565, in 1857. The Map in many points agrees very closely with the latter, but contains also some discrepancies, and is somewhat earlier in date.

21. A Psalter, with the usual Canticles, Litany, &c; written about the middle of the fourteenth century.

This magnificent volume was given by Robert de Ormesby, a monk of Norwich, to the choir of the Cathedral Church, 'ad jacendum coram Suppriore qui pro tempore fuerit in perpetuum.' It is illustrated with illuminations most beautifully executed.
but, at the same time, containing the most grotesque and profanely inappropriate figures, resembling those sometimes found on the Misereres of collegiate churches. It is bound in a large covering of sheepskin, which by overlapping the volume has no doubt greatly contributed to preserve its freshness and beauty of condition. A facsimile from one page is to be found in Shaw’s Illuminated Ornaments, 1833, with a description by Sir F. Madden. It belongs to the Douce collection.

In a separate glass case adjoining the preceding (in which was formerly exhibited a fine specimen of the typography of the Royal Press at Berlin, in a German Bible given by the King of Prussia) is now displayed a fine Bible printed at Glasgow in 1862, in two folio volumes, and illustrated with very beautiful photographs by Frith, which was called the Queen’s Bible from its being dedicated by permission to Her Majesty.

In a glass case in the adjoining window is a German Bible, printed in 1541, with texts on the fly-leaves in the handwriting of Luther and Melanchthon, whose signatures, although much defaced by some possessor, are still very legible. See p. 245.

---

IN A GLASS CASE, WEST END OF THE LIBRARY.

   From the Douce collection. See p. 250.

2. Breviary and Psalter according to the use of the Carthusian Order; written about 1480.
   A specimen of Italian art, from the Canonici collection.

4. Psalter, on purple vellum, written about the close of the ninth century. From the old library of the kings of France. See p. 249.
   A MS. of the Horæ, written on purple vellum, about 1500, is among the Canonici MSS.

5. Boccaccio’s Il Filocolo; in folio, of the fifteenth century.
   A beautiful MS., with five exquisite miniatures, and interlaced arabesque borders of the richest character. A facsimile, with a notice of the book, will be found in Shaw’s Illuminated Ornaments. From the Canonici collection.

   From the Douce collection.

7. Horæ, small quarto; end of the fifteenth century. The illuminations possess exquisite softness and delicacy.
   Also from the Douce collection.

8. The Miracles of the B. Virgin, in French. A Douce MS., in folio, executed about 1460, for Philip the Good, Duke of Burgundy, and enriched with most beautiful paintings of the tint called 'Camaieu gris.'
9. Horæ, in quarto. A beautiful Douce book, the work of a French scribe in and about the year 1407.
10. Horæ, in duodecimo. Another gem from the Douce collection, executed about the year 1500, for the Emperor Maximilian and Mary of Burgundy his wife.
The margins are adorned with charming figures of birds, and in one instance a border is filled with representations of pottery and glass.
11. Horæ, in quarto, of the commencement of the sixteenth century; from the Douce collection. An exquisite specimen of Flemish art.
It belonged to Mary de Medici.
12. Horæ, in small folio. A most sumptuous volume, executed about 1410. The illuminations are of the school of Van Eyck.
The borders of birds, butterflies, flowers, landscapes, &c, are marvels of nature in art; and many of the initials are distinguished by the utmost delicacy in design and finish in execution. Also from the Douce collection.
13. Quatuor Evangelia; commencement of the seventh century.
See p. 24.
14. Letters of Queen Henrietta Maria to Charles I before their marriage; in French.
The volume forms part of the Clarendon State Papers, and contains fifteen of the Queen's letters, besides some from the King, and other documents.
15. Latin Translation by Queen Elizabeth, while Princess, of an Italian sermon by Bern. Ochini, De Christo; written entirely by herself, and sent as a New-year's gift to her brother Edward VI.
It forms a small 8vo. volume of thirty-six pages, on vellum, and was given to the Library by J. Bowle, of Idmerston, Aug. 15, 1765. The following dedication (hitherto unprinted) is prefixed by the Princess:—
'Augustissimo et serenissimo Regi Edvardo Sexto. Si aliquid hoc tempore haberem (Serenissime Rex) quod mihi ad dandum esset accommodatum, & Majes-tatis tua congruens ad accipiendum, equidem de hac re vehementer lenterar. Tua Maiestas res magnas & excellentes meretur, et mea facultas exigua tantum suppeditare potest, sed quamvis facultate possim minima, tamen animo tibi maxima prestare cupio, & quum ab alis opibus superer, a nenie amore & benevolentia vincor. Ita iubet natura, authoritas tua commouet, & bonitas me hortatur, ut cum princeps meas sis te officio observem, & cum frater meas sis vicinus & amantissimus, intimo amore afficiam. Ecce autem pro huius noui anni felici auspicio, & obser-vantiae meae testimonio, offero M. T. breuem istam Bernardi Ochini orationem, ab eo Italicè primum scriptam, & a me in latinum sermonem conversum. Argumentum

1 This MS. is noticed by Warton in his Life of Sir T. Pope, p. 73, where he also quotes Hearne's account of Elizabeth's New Testament, which is described at
p. 53 supra.
quum de Christo sit, bene conuenire tibi potest, qui quotidiem Christum discis, & post eum in terris proximum locum & dignitatem habes. Tractato ita pia est & docta, ut lectio non possit non esse vtilis et fructuosa. Et si nihil alius commendaret opus, authoritas scriptoris ornaret satis, qui propter religiones et Christum patria expulsus, cogitur in locis peregrinis & inter ignotas homines vitam traducere. Si quicumque in eo mediocre sit, mea translatio est, quae profecto talis non est qualis esse debet, sed qualis a me efficci posset. At istarum rerum omnium M. tua inter legendum iudex sit, cui ego hunc meum laborem commendo, & vna meipsam etiam dedico, Deumque precor vt M. tua multis nouos & felices annos videat & lucris ac pietate perpetuo crescat. Enfeldiae, 30 Decembri.

'Maestatis tue,
'humilis soror,
'& serus,
'Elizabet.'

16. A Persian treatise, in prose and verse, on ethics and education, entitled, Bebaristan, or, The Season of Spring; by Nuruddin Abdurrahman, surnamed Djami.

The MS. was written at Lahore, for the Emperor of Hindustan, A.D. 1575, by Muhammed Hussein, a famous scribe, who was called the Pen of Gold; and illustrated by sixteen painters. Its modern velvet binding is adorned with gold corners and bosses; and a bag in which it was kept lies beside it. From the collection of Sir Gore Ouseley.

17. Evangeliarium, MS. in folio; of the tenth century.

A fine MS., which formerly belonged to the abbey of St. Faron, near Meaux; bought at the sale of M. Abel-Remusat's library in 1833, by Mr. Payne, and sold to Douce, apparently for the sum of £35 10s. On the cover is an ivory diptych; in the centre, a figure of our Blessed Lord treading on 'the lion and adder, the young lion and dragon;' around, twelve scenes from His life and miracles.

18. Ivory triptych eleven inches high; North Italian work, of the fifteenth century.

In the centre the Blessed Virgin and Child between St. Leonard and another saint; on the wings, St. John the Evangelist and St. Lawrence.

19. Evangelia, secundum Matt. et Marc. A fine Douce MS. of the eleventh century, bound in thick boards, overlaid on one side with a brass plate, whereon are engraved the four Evangelists, with angels; in the centre, an ivory carving of our Lord, with the Evangelistic symbols.

i. Crucifix; enamelled.

ii. The Martyrdom of St. Sebastian; small, on brass.

iii. Four enamelled round tablets, bearing portraits of 'Le

1 Lent to the South Kensington Museum in 1864, from the catalogue of which exhibition (under No. 202) the above description is taken.
APPENDIX D.

Conte de Flandres, le Conte de Champagne, le Conte de Tholoze, Duc de Normandie.'

iv. Two small enamelled representations of March and May.

v. Dolphin, with boy on his back (the Dauphin); motto, 'Qui pense ma . . . . vy advient.'

vi. Heads, enamelled, of the following Roman Emperors; Julius Caesar, Augustus, Claudius and Otho.

vii. English pocket-almanac, in brass, 1554-1579, with tidal tables for English ports, a compass, &c. On one side of its case is the following inscription:

'Aske me not, for ye Gett me not.—R. P.'

viii. A small copper figure of our Blessed Lord, crowned and robed, with eyes open, and arms extended.

The following account is given by Hearne in a volume of his MS. collections:

'About five years since the workmen in digging the gardens that formerly belong'd to St. Frideswyd's, Oxford, found a crucifix; the figure in pontifical robes, enamelled and gilt, with stones in the arms and breast. It came afterwards into the hands of Mr. Edw. Thwaites of Queen's College, who gave it to the Bodleian Library, where in the Physick schoole 'tis now reserved, and seems to be very ancient.'

A drawing of the figure made for Thwaites by J. T. [alman] lies beside it, which was given to the Library by the late Dr. Wellesley. The figure resembles a crucifix found at Lucca, of the seventh century.

Bound in solid silver, on which are engraved the Annunciation and the Coronation of the Blessed Virgin, seen beneath a coloured transparency which gives an appearance of great richness to the otherwise uncoloured silver.

A beautifully decorated volume, given by Sir Rob. Cotton to William Butler, M.D. of Cambridge, in 1614; and to the Bodleian, July 15, 1648, by Dame Anne Sadler, wife of Ralph Sadler, of Stonden, Herts.

The following objects of interest are dispersed in various parts of the Library:

AT THE EAST END.

1. A drawing by Holbein, framed and glazed, being a design for a cup.

On the back is the following note:—'This is an original drawing by Hans Holbein, was actually executed, and in the possession of Queen Anna Bulleyn,'
APPENDIX D.

A.D. 1534. D. Logan.' It bears, however, the initials H. and J., and was therefore executed, not for Anne Boleyn, but Jane Seymour. 'The cup was carried into Spain by George Villiers, Duke of Buckingham, when he accompanied Charles, Prince of Wales, on his romantic expedition to Madrid.'

2. The original drawing, as is supposed, by Raffaele, for his picture of Attila stopped on his approach to Rome by the apparition of SS. Peter and Paul. Framed and glazed.

This and the preceding form part of the Douce collection.

5. Small marble bust of Napoleon.
Bequeathed by Capt. Montagu in 1863. See p. 299.

7. Egyptian scroll.

[Five other Egyptian fragments hang at the other end of the Library.]

9. An armillary sphere, in bronze, supported by three lions.

10. Two small bronzes; one representing Narcissus contemplating his face in the stream; the other, Cupids disporting themselves on the backs of Tritons.

11. A plaster cast of young Bacchanals leading the goat.

12. A wood carving, coarsely executed, representing Hercules spinning, and exposed by Omphale to the ridicule of two female visitors.

15. A geometrical, eleven-sided figure, inclosing an open and hollow iron ball with sixty sides, and surmounting a small pillar representing the five orders of architecture. Around the base of the column are eight other geometrical figures, with vacant spaces for two which have been lost.

[Probably all the preceding articles, 10-15, came from Rawlinson.]

Bequeathed by Dr. Mason in 1841. See p. 265.

1 Catalogue of the South Kensington Exhibition. 1862, p. 672.
APPENDIX D.

17. Four specimens of papyrus-rolls from Herculaneum, burnt to a crust.

Presented to the Library by George IV. See p. 216.

18. Piece of wood from the south side of the curious timber Church at Greensted in Essex, built A.D. 1013.

Presented by Mr. James Dix, of Bristol, Feb. 10, 1865.

19. Specimen of ornamental writing by Mr. Hormuzd Rassam, whose name is so well known in England, first, from his having accompanied Mr. Layard during his Assyrian researches, and next from his, now happily ended, captivity in Abyssinia; consisting of various chapters from the Old and New Testaments, in Chaldee, Arabic, and Turkish, beautifully written in the form of two angels supporting a cross, within a border.

Presented by Mr. Rassam on leaving Oxford in January, 1849, after a stay of some months, as a mark of thanks for the manner in which he had been received. It occupied only forty-eight hours in execution, as he himself told the present writer.

AT THE WEST END.

21. Maps of Oxford and Cambridge, by Ralph Aggas; the former dated 1578, the latter 1592; about three feet by four in size.

These extremely curious and valuable maps were bequeathed by Dr. Rawlinson. Having become decayed and dilapidated by exposure, they were some few years ago carefully mounted on canvas, on a wooden frame, and covered with glass; by which means they are effectually secured from further injury of the same kind.

22. Four drawings of heads by Raffaele, or Giulio Romano. See p. 251.

IN THE LIBRARIAN’S STUDY.

23. A Roman inscription on a brazen plate:

FLORA

T I. PLAVTVS DROSVS

MAG. II.

V. S. L. M.

Given by Dr. Rawlinson. An engraving is extant, among the many which were executed for Rawlinson of various relics in his miscellaneous collection. It is described on the engraving as being ‘Ex regis Christianæ thesaurus.’

1 Another specimen of Mr. Rassam’s calligraphic skill is to be seen in the Common Room of Magdalene College (in which College he was entertained for some time), where the College arms are represented in the same manner.
APPENDIX D.

24. A small plaster cast of the head of Torquato Tasso, from a wax model made by Mr. N. Marchant from a cast taken after Tasso's death, and preserved in the Convent of St. Onofrio at Rome, where his death occurred.

IN THE OPPOSITE SUB-LIBRARIAN'S STUDY.

25. A warrior on horseback, enamelled on copper, and marked 'Ezechias.'
27. Another Greek painting on wood, on a gold ground, apparently representing two angels bowing before the Blessed Virgin, &c.
29. A Phenician inscription, on stone. See p. 162.

The following Portraits hang in the Library:—

2. All the Librarians from James to Bowles; with a small engraved sketch of Price, and a photograph of Dr. Bandinel, taken in the year of his resignation of office.

There are no portraits of Fysher or Owen.

3. Archbishops Usher and Laud; Bishops Crewe and Atterbury; Deans Nowell, Aldrich, and Hickes; Erasmus, Wanley, Lye, Gassendi, Sir Thos. Wyat, two of Chaucer, Gower, Junius (sketch by Vandyke), two of Selden (with his arms painted on panel), Sir K. Digby, Queen Elizabeth of Bohemia; Frederick, Elector Palatine; Mr. Sutherland.

Bequeathed by Rawlinson

The following note is written on the back:—

'This picture was drawne for mee at the Earle of Westmoreland's house at Apethorpe, in Northamptonshire, by the greate (tho' little) Limner, the then famous Mr. Cooper of Covent-Garden, when I was eighteen years of age.

THOMAS ALCOCK, Preceptor.'

6. Pencil drawing of Pope.

Bequeathed by Rawlinson.

7. Drawing of F. Douce.
8. Engraved portrait of Camden.

Eighteen Oxford Almanacs, between the years 1812 and 1833, decorate the middle of the room.
APPENDIX D.

PICTURE GALLERY.

A Catalogue of the Pictures (which are now exclusively Portraits) was printed some years ago by the Janitor. Since then, the following additions have been made:\footnote{Besides some restorations from the Randolph Gallery of portraits formerly removed thither.}

Froben, the printer. By Holbein.
Bequeathed by Rawlinson.

Oliver Plunket, Roman Catholic Archbishop of Armagh; executed in 1681. On panel.
Bequeathed by Rawlinson.

James Edward, the 'old Chevalier,' and his wife Clementina Sobieski.
See p. 169.
Bequeathed by Rawlinson.

Sir R. Chambers, Chief Justice of Bengal.
Sir R. H. Inglis, Bart. By Richmond.

Dr. Routh, President of Magdalen College. By Thomson.
Dr. Daniel Wilson, Bishop of Calcutta.
The Earl of Derby. By Grant. See p. 281.

The following Curiosities and Models are exhibited in the Gallery:—

1. Chair made from the wood of Sir F. Drake's ship. See p. 94.
2. Chair of Henry VIII. See ib.
4. A series of casts of various ancient Temples and other buildings.
See p. 236.

5. Model, in teak wood, of a subterranean palace and reservoir, in Guzerat; beautifully carved, and exhibiting the whole of the interior construction and arrangement.
6. Cases of Italian medals, medals by Dassier of English sovereigns, &c. See p. 182.
7. Two plaster casts of monuments from Nineveh, now in the British Museum, with cuneiform inscriptions.
8. Model, in papier-maché, of the Martyrs' Memorial, beautifully executed.
Presented in 1844 by the late Rev. Vaughan Thomas, B.D.
Presented by the same donor.
10. Casts of the Elgin marbles.
APPENDIX D.

11. Alabaster model of the Cathedral at Calcutta.

Given by the late Bishop Wilson in 1846. This beautiful model was executed at Pisa; it was exhibited in the Italian department of the Great Exhibition in 1861.

12. A large and fine model in cork, of the Amphitheatre at Verona; by Dubourg.

14. Glass case, containing:—

i. Two Chinese rolls, one silk, the other paper, containing coloured drawings of the banks of the river Tsing-Ming, with scenes illustrating the manners and amusements of the country.

ii. Collection of Indian weapons presented by Mr. Elliott. See p. 291.

iii. Series of clay figures, coloured, representing all degrees of rank, &c. among the Chinese.

Brought by Col. Gibbes Rigaud, of the 60th Rifles, the donor, from Tien-tsin, and given in 1862.

v. Small Chinese figure of a deity, in brass; from Pekin.

Found in the Redan at Sebastopol, when that battery was stormed on Sept. 9, 1855. Given by Rev. F. J. Holt Beever in 1856.

15. Portrait, on a large roll, of the late Emperor of China, seated, with a bow and arrow in his hands.

Above is an autograph inscription by the Emperor, in verse, in praise of archery. Brought by Col. Rigaud from the 'Summer Palace.'

16. Another glass case, containing:—

i. A series of carved and coloured ivory tablets, representing Chinese life and manners, partly broken; with some grotesque figures, probably of deities, carved in wood.

Believed to have been bequeathed by Rawlinson.

ii. A series of small Chinese paintings on ivory.

From the Douce collection.

iii. Three sets of wooden roundels, or trenchers, of which two 1 An engraving of a roundel (then, with others, in the possession of John Fenton of Fishguard) of which the exact counterpart is found in one of these sets, is given in the Gent. Magaz. for 1799, p. 465. As it is not known how long the Library has been in possession of its present collection, it is possible that Mr. Fenton's series may now be included in it. A description of a set of the time of James I may be found in vol. xxxiv of the Archaeologia, pp. 225-230; and a notice of the Bodleian trenchers in Notes and Queries, 1866, p. 472, and other communications on the subject in the first volume for 1867.

APPENDIX E.

are round (numbering thirty plates), the other square (numbering twelve); with mottos, in the former case in verse, in the latter consisting of precepts from the Bible.
One of the round sets belonged, in 1599, to Queen Elizabeth.
The verses are sometimes humorous, sometimes moral, and strongly dehortatory from marriage; not, however, out of any flattering deference to the condition or supposed inclination of the 'Virgin Queen,' but chiefly in accordance with the opposite view taken by some hard-hearted misogynist. Of the two classes of motto, let these stand as specimens:—

'If that a bachelor thou bee
   Keppe thou so, still be ruled by mee,
   Leaste that repentance all to late
   Reward thee with a broken pate.'

'Content thyselfe with thyn estate,
   And send noo poor wight from thi gate:
   For why this counsell I thee give
   To learme to die and die to lyve.'

17. Model, in wood, of the Temple at Paestum.
Carved by Mr. Thomas Wyatt, of Oxford, about 1830.

-----------

APPENDIX E.

Numismatic Collection.

The collection of Coins and Medals was commenced by the gift from Archbishop Laud of five cabinets of coins, in 1636, to which he subsequently made some additions. These were accompanied by a very full MS. catalogue, which is now preserved among Laud's MSS.,
No. 554. In 1657 a large addition was made by Mr. Ralph Freke (see p. 88), and numerous small gifts came from many donors in

1 Amongst these are several rare Hebrew specimens. Laud's letter of gift, dated June 16, is printed at p. 94. vol. ii., of his Remains, edited by H. Wharton. A curious collection of Roman weights came among early benefactions; they are entered in Wise's catalogue.
following years. A catalogue, upon which Francis Wise had been engaged for a long period, was published by him in a folio volume, in 1750, entitled, Nummorum antiquorum scriptis Bodleianis reconditiorum catalogus, cum commentario, tabulis aneis et appendice. Wise remarks in his Preface, that no donation, however trifling, was rejected, and that, consequently, there was (as there is still) a very large quantity of Middle and Third brass coins of little or no value. From Rawlinson there came, in 1755, besides coins, a collection of Italian medals (Popes, Medici family, &c.), and numerous matrices of seals, chiefly foreign. Browne Willis contributed the most valuable portion of the whole collection, in his series of gold and silver English coins.

Subsequent benefactors have been C. Godwyn, in 1770; Douce, whose collection included those of Calder, Moore, and Keate, and from whom came a series of Tradesmen’s Tokens; Dr. Ingram, in 1850, whose bequest included some British specimens; the Queen, who gave, in 1841, a portion of the treasure found at Cuerdale (see p. 264); Mackie, Roberts, Elliott, whose valuable series of Indo-Bactrian coins was presented in 1860 (see p. 291), and Dr. Caulfield of Cork, who presented in 1866 a large collection of the Gun-money struck by James II in Ireland. The Ashmole coins were transferred from the Museum, together with Ashmole’s library, in 1861. There is also a cabinet of Napoleon medals.

No catalogue of any portion of the contents of this room (excepting a brief description of the Cuerdale coins) has been issued since the publication of Wise’s volume. For some short time past, however, W. S. Vaux, Esq., of the British Museum, has occasionally afforded his valuable services in arrangement and description; and it is hoped that before long the whole of the collection may be reduced to order and properly indexed.

By the statutes of the Library, the Librarian, or one of the Sub-librarians, must always be present when any coins are exhibited; nor may they be shown to more than two persons at a time, unless two officers of the Library, or a Curator, are present. No examination of coins for the purpose of comparison with other specimens is permitted.

---

1 The special gems are a gold Alectus, and the famous Reddite and Petition crowns of Thomas Simon, the latter of which was struck in 1663. The Petition crown is probably the one which was sold in Dr. Mead’s sale in February, 1755 (Cat. p. 180), and which is noted by Rawlinson in his copy of the sale catalogue as having been purchased by — Hodsall for £12. A gold Alectus was sold at the same sale to the Duke of Devonshire for £21 5s.
APPENDIX F.

Past Librarians.

1598. Thomas James, M.A.
1620. John Rouse, M.A.
1653. Thomas Barlow, M.A., afterwards Bishop of Lincoln.
1660. Thomas Lockey, B.D.
1665. Thomas Hyde, D.D.
1701. John Hudson, D.D.
1719. Joseph Bowles, M.A.
1726. Robert Fysher, M.B.
1747. Humphrey Owen, D.D.
1768. John Price, B.D.
1813. Bulkeley Bandinel, B.D.

Past Sub-librarians.

Before 1619. John Verneuil, M.A.
1647. Francis Yonge, M.A.
1657. Henry Stubbe, M.A.
1659. Thomas Barlow, M.A., afterwards Librarian.

* * * * * * *

About 1680–90. Rev. John Crabb, M.A.
1712. Thomas Hearne, M.A.
1715. Rev. John Fletcher, M.A.
1719. Rev. Francis Wise, B.D., appointed first Librarian of the Radcliffe in 1748, when he, no doubt, resigned his post in the Bodleian.

[1770. 'Jones and White, Price's representatives'.]

1 The date of his appointment is not known, but that it was before, or at least not later than, 1619 is shown by an inscription in a copy of T. Holland's Oraio Sarisb. babita, which records that it came to the Library in that year: 'Ex dono Johannis Vernului, hypobibliothecarii.'

2 His name first appears in 1746 as making out the accounts and receiving money.

3 The reference to the source whence this quotation was taken has been lost.
1780-81. John Walters, Scholar of Jesus College.
Before 1787. Edward Morgan, Jesus College¹, M.A.
1788. John Bown, Lincoln College², M.A.
1797. Henry H. Baber, St. John's.
1798. Henry Ellis, St. John's.
[Before 1804?] Rev. Sam. Rogers, M.A., Wadham College ?]
Before 1810. —— Matthews.
1810. Philip Bliss, St. John's College.
1811. Rev. Bulkeley Bandinel, M.A.
1814. Rev. Henry Cotton, M.A.
1822. Rev. Philip Bliss, D.C.L.
1828. Rev. Charles Henry Cox, M.A.
1831. Rev. Stephen Reay, M.A.
1834. Rev. William Cureton, M.A.
1837. Rev. Herbert Hill, M.A.
1838. Rev. H. O. Coxe, M.A.
1861. Rev. Rob. Payne Smith, M.A.
1865. Max Müller, M.A.

² Ibid. p. 541.
APPENDIX F.

Present Officers of the Library.

LIBRARIAN:
Rev. H. O. Coxe, M.A., Corp. Chr. Coll., appointed Sub-librarian, Nov. 16, 1838; Head Librarian, Nov. 6, 1860.

SUB-LIBRARIANS:
Rev. Alfred Hackman, M.A., Ch. Ch., Assistant for the General Catalogue, April 27, 1837; Sub-librarian, April 20, 1862.

ASSISTANTS:
First Class,
Mr. H. S. Harper, [entered the Library June, 1837.]
Mr. H. J. Sides, [Dec., 1853.]
Mr. H. Haines, [Dec., 1861.]

Second Class,
Mr. Henry J. Shuffrey, [Jan., 1863.]

Third Class,
Percy W. Colcutt, [June, 1866.]
W. F. Green, [March, 1868.]

NEW CATALOGUE.
General Superintendent.

TRANSCRIBERS:
Mr. George Parker, [Sept., 1855.]
Mr. Will. H. Timberlake, [June, 1857.]
Mr. Fred. Prickett, [Jan., 1863.]
Mr. Will. Burden, [Jan., 1863.]
Mr. Will. Plowman, [Nov., 1863.]

ATTENDANTS:
W. R. Sims, [May, 1867.]
W. S. Plowman, [Sept., 1867.]

BINDER:
Edwin Hickman, [March, 1864.]

JANITOR: John Norris, [Oct., 1835.]
DEPUTY-JANITOR: Robert Roby, [Dec., 1860.]

JANITOR AT THE CAMERA RADCLIVIANA: W. Bayzand, [June, 1863.]
APPENDIX G.

Rules of the Library.

The Library is open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. from Lady-Day to Michaelmas, and from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. from Michaelmas to Lady-Day. It is closed from Christmas Eve to the Feast of the Circumcision, both inclusive; on the Epiphany; on Good Friday, Easter Eve, and through the whole of Easter week; on Ascension Day; on Whit-Monday and Whit-Tuesday; on the day of the University Commemoration; for the first week in October (Oct. 1-7), for purposes of dusting and cleaning; and on Nov. 7th and 8th (or Nov. 6-7th, should the 8th fall on a Sunday) for the Visitation.

On other festival days, being days for which services are appointed in the Prayer-Book, and on which Sermons are, consequently, preached before the University, as well as on the days of Latin Litany and Sermon (viz. the first day of each Term), the Library is opened when the Sermon is over, i.e. ordinarily at 11 o'clock.

All graduate members of the University have the right to use the Library. Undergraduates are admitted upon bringing letters of recommendation from their Tutors. Strangers are admitted upon being introduced by a Master of Arts or higher graduate, or upon producing sufficient letters of introduction; but every facility is afforded to strangers who make personal application to the Librarian for permission to make researches for any definite and special purpose.

The Library is under the control of a Board of Curators, consisting of the Vice-Chancellor, the two Proctors, the five Regius Professors of Divinity, Civil Law, Medicine, Hebrew, and Greek, and five Members of Congregation, elected by that House for ten years.

The Camera Radcliffeana, formerly the Radcliffe Library, is open all the year round from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m.; excepting that it is closed during the same periods at which the old Library is closed. In it are to be found most of the publications of the last sixteen years, with the most recent magazines; and books from the general collection may be carried over for use there, upon proper application.

The Statutes of the Library are printed in the general Corpus Statutorum Universitatis.
INDEX.

ABBOT, Archbp., 36.
Abbot, Robert, 36.
Abel-Remusat, J. P., sale, 332.
Abingdon, Earls of, 180, 281.
Abulpharage, Gregory, 114.
Acland (H. W.), M.D., 293, 294 n.
Acton, Oliver, 184.
Actor, Petrus, 113.
Adams, Thomas, 36.
Addison, Joseph, 223, 332.
Adelaide, Q. Consort of Will. IV, 319
Ægidius Romanus, 111.
Ælia, Abbess of Barking, 327.
Ælop, 27 n.
Æthiopic MSS., 63, 113, 215, 267.
Aggas, Ralph, 335.
Airy, G. B., 195.
Albert, Prince, 252, 319.
Albert of Aix, 296.
Alcock, Thomas, 336.
Aldines purchased, 117, 204, 229, 233 n., 242, 262, 300; catalogued, 203.
Aldred, —, M.A., 107.
Aldrich, Henry, D.D., Dean of Ch. Ch., 119, 125, 336.
Aldworth, Rev. John, 39.
Alex, Alexander de, 111.
Alexander, Romance of, 17.
Aleyne, Richard, 314.
Alfred the Great, transl. of Gregory's
Pastoral Care, 100; Preface to Gregory's Dialogues, ib.; coins, 264.
Allen, —, 158.
Allen, Thomas, M.A., donor, 19; mentioned, 58.
Allen, Thomas, Finchley, 57.
Allibond, Dr. John, Rustica Acad. Oxon.
Desc., 75.
Al-malek, Alashraf Shalian, Sultan, 114.
Almanacks, deemed unworthy of admission by Bodley, 66; Clog almanacks,
105, 151, 325; various almanacks,
183; MS. astrological calendar, 329;
brass calendar, 333.
Alstedius, J. H., Systema Monern., 43.
Altham, Roger, D.D., 39.
Altham, Roger, jun., M.A., 106.
Alward, John, 315.
American Tracts, 253, 254, 271;
Psalter, 264.
Anabat, Guili, 312.
Anacreon, 298.
Anderson, Sir Richard, donor, 49.
Anglo-Saxon MSS., 19, 63, 90, 100, 101, 103, 104; the Chronicle, 64; list of some, in some priests' libraries, 25.
Anne, Queen, 127, 137.
Austen, John, 178.
Anwykyl, John, Compend. Grammat., 114 n.
Apley, Sir Peter, 185 n.
Aquinas, St. Thomas, 285 n.
Arabic MSS., 51, 59, 63, 76, 82 n., 91, 95, 113 bis, 199, 206, 207, 208,
215, 216, 229, 231, 233, 267, 269,
289, 290, 294 n.
Arbuthnot, Alex., 304.
Archeologia, cited, 338 n.
Archimedes, 201.
Arethas of Patras, 208, 215.
Aretine, L., 8.
Aristotle, 8, 111, 226.
Armenian MSS., 63, 92, 113.
Arnold, Samuel, Mus. D., 205.
Articles of 1563, with signatures of Convocation, 87.
Arundel, Howard, Earl of, collector of Marbles and MSS., 102.
INDEX.

Arundel Marbles, 138.
Ashantee, Princes of, 319.
Ashburnham, Earl of, 321.
Ather, A., 275.
Ashmole, Elias, 177; his library, 287; a MS, 327; coins, 340.
Ashton, John, or Eschydond, 58.
Asula, A. de, 261.
Athlidian, King, 23.
Athenaum, 281, 295 n., 301.
Atkins, Henry, M.D., 37.
Atterbury, Francis, Bp. of Rochester, 336.
Attila, 334.
Aubrey, John, MSS., 253, 288; Lives cited, 73, 77 n.
Auerbach, Dr. L., 275.
Augustine, St., of Hippo, 20 n., 253.
Augustine, St., of Canterbury, his MS. of the Gospels, 24.
Aurung-zebe, 158.
Awdry, Sir J. W., donor, 337.
Ayliffe, Dr. John, Univ. of Oxford, cited, 31, 38, 86 n.

BABER, Rev. H. H., M.A., Sub-librarian, 204, 217.
Backer, A. De, Bibl., des Écr. de la Comp de Jés, cited, 224 n.
Bacon, Sir Francis, donor, 49; Works, 50; Essays, 51.
Bacon, Roger, 58, 320.
Bacon, Thomas Sclater, 184.
Bagford, John, 112, 177, 178.
Bailly, Lud., 263.
Baker, Thomas, B.D., 178, 212 n.
Bale, John, Bp. of Ossory, 90, 239, 248.
Ballard, George, his bequest, 186-8; cited, 49, 52 n.; references to his MSS., 99, 156; mentioned, 320.
Balliol, Devorguilla de, 314.
Bandinel, Bulkeley, D.D., mentioned, 82 n., 149, 215, 220, 237, 238, 249, 273, 279, 336; Sub-librarian, 217; Librarian, 218; resignation, 292; death, 293; sale of his library, 297.
Banks, Sir Joseph, 194.
Bargis, J. J., 311.
Barker, Christopher, 52, 171 n.
Barker, E. H., 300.
Barker, Robert, donor, 25; mentioned, 36, 171 n.

Barker, Robert, in 1631, 290 n.
Barlow, Thomas, D.D., elected Librarian, 76; draws up a paper against lending books, 79; quotations from it, 50, 72, 77, 81-84; Library accounts, 67, 69, 85; mentioned, 58, 100 n.; resigns, 90; interview with a R. C. priest, 91; his books, 99, 111, 115, 119, 126, 130, 328.
Barnes, J., mentioned, 41; donor, 50.
Barnes, Joshua, 178, 320.
Barnes, Juliana, 160.
Barocci, Giacomo, his MSS., 53-55, 130 n.; references to MSS., 83.
Barrett, P., B.A., 335.
Barrington, Shute, Bp. of Durham, donor, 231.
Barthélemy, J. J., 163.
Bastire, James, 212 n., 213.
Baskett, John, donor, 147.
Baule, Council of, 51.
Bastandyne, Thomas, 304.
Bateman, —, 153.
Bath, Countess of, 185 n.
Battely, Oliver, M.A., 107.
Bathurst, Ralph, M.D., donor, 88.
Baudry, F., 184 n.
Baxter, W. H., 309.
Bayeux, 180.
Bebeth, John, 315.
Becket, Archbp. T. à, 29, 42, 104, 188.
Becon, Thomas, 248.
Beddoes, Thomas, M.D., makes complaint against Price, 197.
Bede, cited, 64, 104, 337 n.; mentioned, 104.
Bedell, William, Bp. of Kilmore, MS. papers, 176.
Beet, T., bookseller, 42 n.
Beever, Rev. F. J., donor, 338.
Bell, Rev. John, 39.
Bembi, Cardinal, 58.
Benallis, B. de, 310.
Bengal, Asiatic Society of, donor, 269.
Benius, Paulus, 50.
Bennet, Sir John, mentioned, 36; one of Bodley's executors, and a defalcator, 37.
Bennet, Matthew, 37.
Bent, Andrew, 233.
Berkshire MSS., 212 n.
Bernard, Edward, D.D., his books, 116, 117; mentioned, 153; Catal. MSS.,
INDEX

Bernstein, Dr., 296.
Berryer, M., 319.
Beley, John, D.C.L., Sub-librarian, 242, 246.
Besant's, 327-8.
Beverland, Hadrian, 207.
Bible, Paris Polyglott, 76; Hebr. MS. 344, pt. 1488, 201; Latin, MSS. 22, 224; c. 1455 (Mazarine), 203; 1463, on vellum, 181, on paper, 201; c. 1470, 210; 1471, ib.; (Strab.) n. d., ib.; Wickliffe's Version, 96; Coverdale's 1533, 239, 321—1537, ib.; Cromwell's 1539, 300; Cranmer's 1540, 1541, 1555, 339; Matthew's 1551, ib.; Bishop's 1568, 233; First Scottish edit. 1579, 304; Aub. Vera. 1631, 290; 1639, 53; Vinegar 1717, 147; Glasgow 1603, 330; Bowyer, 244-5; Doway, 49; Bobemian, Ed. Pr., 283; Dutch 1537, 89; German, Ed. Pr., 203; 1466, 233; Luther's 1541, 245, 330; Royal Press, Berlin, 350; Polish, 1553, 220. Old Test., Syriac, 107; Pentateuch, Hebr. 1483, 216; Samaritan, 196; Syriac, 107; German, 283; Genesis, Greek, 283; Psalms, Lat., 179, 249, 327; 1459, 289; Archbp. Parker's, 250; American, 264; Biblia Pauperum, 1513, 89; Apocalypse 1549, 233; New Test., Codex Ebneri. 239-30; Tyndale's 1534, 233;—1536, 239; Coverdale's 1538, 301; Holybush 1538, 239; Erasmus 1540, ib.; C. Barker, 52; 1625, 53; 1618, 52; 1630, 53. Evangelists, Greek, 94, 234; Gospels, Lat., 104, 327; Lat. (given by S. Gregory to S. Augustine), 24; Early English, 100; Coptic, 107; Russian, 19; Syriac, 50; St. Luke, Greek, 283; St. Luke and St. John, Greek, 283; Lat., 179; Acts, Codex Laudianus, 64; Biblia Pauperum, 321 n.; Apocalypse illustrated, MS., 321, 328; MS. illustrations of the Bible, 324.
Bill, John, 17, 53.
Bilstone, John, M.A., Janitor, 151, 152; deprivation and death, 192.
Bindings, 37 n., 49, 51-3, 57, 89, 230, 324, 333.
Birch, Thomas, D.D., 172.
Bishop, —, 205.
Bishop, Sir Henry, 278.

Blacman, John, 318.
Blackstone, Sir W., 320 n.
Blackwood, Adam, 260 n.
Blades, William, 155, 250, 262.
Blakeway, Rev. J. B., Shropshire MSS., 363.
Blakeway, Richard, M.A., 106.
Blayney, Benjamin, D.D., 198.
Bliss, Rev. Nathaniel, 194.
Bliss, W. H., M.A., 117.
Block-books, 321.
Blow, Dr. John, 205.
Bobbart, J., 115.
Boccaccio, Giovanni, 8, 206, 330.
Bodleian Library, see 'Stationers' Company,' central room built to receive Duke Humphrey's books, 7; destruction of his library, 11—12; re-foundation by Bodley, 14; roof, 14-15; register of benefactors, 16; opened, 24; styled the Bodleian by letters patent, 25; eastern wing built, 20; great window, ib.; endowments, 32; western wing built, 60; statute 1813, 218; new statutes 1856, 284; first catalogue 1605, 207; second 1620, 46, 91; appendix 1635, 60; prices of these catalogues, 60; third 1674, 97, 156-7; Hearne's Appendix, 123; fourth 1738, 156; fifth 1843, 268;
new catalogue now in progress, 391; Uri's catalogue of Oriental MSS., 199; catalogues of pictures, 189; of early printed books 1795, 203; number of books 1620, 46-7; of MSS. 1690, 110; of printed books and MSS. 1714, 137; 1849, 274; 1867, 305; remonstrance from foreign readers against an order of the Curators, 68; loan to Charles I, 37, 69; supposed attempt to burn the library, 70; attendance of readers in 1648-9, 75; in 1730-40, 154; duplicates exchanged with Queen's College, 115; sales of duplicates, 160, 201, 297.
INDEX.

298; western end re-floorcd, 191; annual payment from graduates, 195; books not allowed to be borrowed, 50, 82 n.; borrowing allowed by Lord Pembroke and Sir T. Roe, 51; by Sir K. Digby, 59; loan of books refused to Bp. Williams, 50; to Charles I, 72; to Cromwell, 76; to the translators of the Bible, 82 n.; to Archb. Laud, ib.; granted by special grace, from some collections, to Selden, 79; MSS. lent to Marshall, 100; to the French government by Convocation, 295; removal of books forbidden 1686, 109; books returned — to Univ. Libr., Camb., 154; to Emman. Coll., Camb., 159; to Magd. and Univ. Coll., Oxf., 215; to Durham, 216; to two parishes, 234; books stolen, 74, 80 n., 81, 103 n.; denunciation of a thief by the Curators, 80 n.; books restored, 81, 82, 103 n.; chains for books, 86; pamphlets, 66, 194, 202, 209; dispute between the Hbdomadal Board and the Curators, 198; poem on the Library, 196; returns to House of Commons, 237, 273, 274; Greek text affixed to the door, 209; coldness in winter formerly, 98; warming apparatus, 234; the Radcliffe building assigned as a reading-room, 293, 295; visited by James I, 26, 41, by Charles I, 55, 70, by Charles II, 92, by James II, 109, by George III, 197, by her present Majesty, 319; American visitor's account cited, 134 n.; order in 1722 against admission of readers at unstatutable times, 74; Anatomy Sch., 132, 134, 136, 140, assigned to the Library, 200; heads formerly on the wall of Picture Gallery, 138; the clock, 182 n.; librarians' celibacy, 21; stipends of officers in 1665-7, 87; stipends of Sub-librarians, 260; in 1856, 284; list of officers, 341-343; rules, 344.

Bodley, Gerard, 160.

Bodley, Sir Thomas; early career, 12-13; begins to restore the Library, 14; his motto, 15; bust, 26; desires the Catalogue to be dedicated to the Prince of Wales, 27; builds eastern wing, 29; said to have given plate to the Stationers' Company on their agreement with him, 33; endows the Library, 32; forbad the borrowing of books, 82 n.; his bell, 33; his chest, ib.; death, 37; charged with neglect of his relatives, 38; petition from his grand-nephew and niece, 39; portrait, 336; portrait on glass at Oriel Coll., 45 n.; annual Bodley speech, 105; Reliquiae Bodleianae cited, 14, 16, 21, 23, 36, 27, 28, 31, 33, 40, 41, 88; mentioned, 138; books with his autograph, 32, 295; Justa Funerbia Bodleii cited, 26, 37; Bodleioannnma, 37.

Bodley, Laurence, 13 n.

Bodley, Miles, 13 n.

Boethius, 23.

Boileau, Nic., 298.

Bois, Sim. du, 312.

Bokelonde, Thomas, 8 n.

Boleyn, Queen Anne, 333; book which belonged to her, 27.

Bolingbroke, Lord, 175.

Boninis, B. de, 312.

Bonner, Edm., Bishop of London, 239.

Bonyngton, W., 313.

Boone, T., 304.

Booth, John, Bp. of Exeter, 317 n.

Borlase, Dr. W., 289.

Boswell, James, Life of Johnson, 188 n.

Boswell, James, 231.

Boswell, Sir W., 322.

Botel, Henry, 303.

Bourchier, Sir H., 54.

Bowcher, G., donor, 149.

Bowen, James, donor, 163, 321.

Bowles, Joseph, M.A.; Dr. Hudson's servitor, 139, 140; elected Librarian, 144; Hearne's character of him, 145, 146; began to print a new Catalogue, 158; demanded payment for making lists, 171 n.; death, 151.

Bown, John, M.A., 342.

Bowyer, Sir George, donor, 260.

Bowyer, Rob.; his illustrated Bible, 244.

Boyce, William, Mus. D., 205.

Boyell, J., 258.

Boyle, Robert; History of the Air, 124.

Boys, John, D.D., 36.

Bradley, Dr. James; MSS. of his Astron. Observations, 193, 195.

Bradshaw, Henry, M.A., Camb., 112 n., 155.

Brahe, Tycho; Astron. Mechan., with original MSS. additions, 58.
INDEX.

Braidwood, —, 234, 284.
Breamore, Hants, 131.
Breton, Simon, 58.
Breslan, M. H., 114.
Brett, Lieut., 289.
Breviaries, 213, 280, 303, 310, 311.
Breuer, J. S., M.A., 166.
Brewster, William, M.D., 142.
Bridgeman, William; his sale, 173, 184.
Bridges, John; Northamptonshire collections, 204.
Bridges, Nath., D.D., 204.
Brie, Joh. de, 312.
Bright, B. H., donor, 232 n.; sale, 270.
Brightwell, Rich., i.e. J. Frith, q.v.
Bristol, Charter, 150.
Bristol, George Digby, Earl of, 240.
British Museum; various MSS., 10, 19 n., 101, 102, 153, 180; printed books, 246 n., 272.
Britton, John, 253 n., 288.
Broad, J., 285.
Brooke, Margaret, donor, 57.
Brooks, —, glass-painter, 193.
Brougham, Lord, 319.
Brounston, Richard, 314.
Brown, Thomas R., M.A., 260 n.
Brown, Thomas, 196 n.
Browne, Lancelot, M.D., donor, 22.
Browne, Sir Thomas, 177.
Bruce, James; his MSS., 266-8.
Bruce, John, 61.
Bruno, S., 179.
Bry, J. T. de, 279.
Buckridge, John, Bp. of Rochester, 36.
Buckhurst, Lord. See Dorset.
Buckingham, George, first Duke, 51, 54, 334.
Buckingham, Sheffield, Duke of; portrait, 148.
Buckinghamshire MSS., 190.
Bugenhagen, J., 246 n.
Bull, George, Bp. of St. David’s, 320 n.
Bull, N., Janitor, 189.
Bulls relating to England, 110.
Bunson, Chevalier, 319.
Bunyan, John, 304.
Burbage, John, 316.
Burdett-Coutts, Miss, 43 n.
Bure, G. F. de, 200, 321 n.
Bures, Suffolk, parish register, 234.
Burgess, Thos., Bp. of St. David’s, 196.
Burgo, D. de, 8.
Burgred, King of Mercia, 185.
Burmese MSS., 240, 326.
Burn, J. H., 297.
Burn, J. S., cited, 290 n.
Burnet, Gilbert, Bp. of Salisbury, 175, 238, 251, 254, 276; Life of Hale cited, 77, 85.
Burnett, Alex., Archbp. of St. Andrew’s, 155 n.
Burnford, Humphrey, Librarian, 11.
Burton, Robert; his gift of printed books, 65-7, 111.
Burton, Archd. Samuel, 57.
Burton, Thomas, M.A., 106.
Burton, William, donor, 56.
Bury, Philip of, Bp. of Durham; his library at Durham College, 4.
Bury St. Edmund’s, abbey register, 154 n.
Butler, Charles, 247.
Butler, Samuel, Bp. of Lichfield, 262.
Butler, William, M.D., 333.
Button, James, donor, 44.
Byron, Lord, 237.
CADELL, T., 166.
Cedmon, 102, 327.
Calamy, Edmund, 320 n.
Calcott, John, B.D., 221.
Calcutta, 338.
Caldecott, Thomas, donor, 247.
Calder, —, coins, 340.
Camac, Turner, donor, 190.
Cambridge, Statutes of various Colleges, 179; Corp. Chr. Coll., MS. there, 24; fragment there, 112 n.; Emmanuel Coll., book restored to the College, 159; St. John’s Coll., fragment there, 112 n.; Univ. Library, 112 n.; MSS. restored to Moore’s Library, 154 n.; return to House of Commons of books rejected, 227; map, 335.
Camden, William, donor, 19; MS. collections, 196 n.; engraved portrait, 336; Britannia and Annales Eliz., 153.
Canonici, M. L., his MSS., 223-6, 230 n., 310; fragments of velum Bible, 161.
Canons, early MSS., 100, 103.
Canterbury, MSS. from St. Augustine’s, 33, 24; Statutes of the Cathl., 179.
Capgrave, John, 10, 178.
Carew, Sir G., MSS., 64 n.
Carleton, Sir Dudley, and Alice, 38, 48 n.
Carmey, Angel, 182 n.
INDEX.

Carte, Thomas, his MSS., 165-7; Letters cited, 75.
Casaubon, Isaac, writes verses on Bodley's death, 37; his Adversaria, 95.
Cassubon, Meric, bequeathed his father's Adversaria, 95.
Cassel, D., 275 n.
Cassini, —, 205.
Castell, Edmund, D.D., 150.
Castlemain, Lord, 173.
Catalogues, Sale, 248.
Catherine, S., 178.
Cato, 43.
Cave, Sir Thomas, donor, 188.
Cawood, John, 171 n.
Caxton, William, Deor. of Brit., 88; Governale of Helth, 155; Art Moriendi, 155; Game of Chess, 163; Recuyell of Troye, 163; Hora, 250; Books of Curtesye, 250; Dictes, 262; Chronicle, 260, 321; Pilgrimage, 328; placard, 250.
Cecil, R., Lord Burleigh, 171 n.
Celotti, Abate, 320 n.
Chace, Thomas, Chanc. of Oxford, 7 n.
Chains for books, 86; books unchained, 101.
Chalmers, Alexander, donor, 212 n.
Chalmers, George, sale, 248 n., 254.
Chamberlain, John, 38, 48 n.
Chamberlayne, Edward, LL.D., papers, 176; State of Great Brit., 237.
Chambers, Sir R., 337.
Chambre, W. de, Hist. Dunelm. cited, 4 n.
Chandler, Richard, D.D., 162.
Chandos, James Brydges, Duke of, his sale, 147, 165 n., 184.
Chapman, --, bookseller, 201.
Chapman, George, 231.
Chappell, Anth., 312.
Charlemagne, 250.
Charles I, visits the Library, 55, 70; his application to borrow a book refused, 71-2; loan of money to him, 37, 69; book said to be bound in a piece of his waistcoat, 53; book that belonged to him, 178; Catalogue ded. to him in 1620, 46; letters, 154, 289; Treaty in Isle of Wight, 187; bust, 61; portraits, 148, 255; mentioned, 54, 111, 171 n., 331, 334.
Charles II, visits the Library, 92; platter from the Royal Oak, 324; oak planted by him in St. James' Park, 135; letters, 173; portraits, 255; mentioned, 237, 258.
Charlotte, Q., Consort of George III, 197.
Chartier, Alan, 18 n., 215.
Chaucer, Geoffrey, 96, 178, 336.
Chaworth, Dr., 69.
Cheke, Sir John, 56.
Cherry, Francis, his MSS., 52, 151.
Chester Cathedral, 179.
Chettle, H., 298.
Cheshire MSS., 365.
Chichester, 180.
Children of the Chapel, 156 n.
Chinese books, 28, 65, 91, 208, 284, 338; Chinese visitors, 109, 320; Chinese figures, &c., 338.
Chipping-Barnet, 180.
Christian, Charles, 183.
Christie, —, auctioneer, 267.
Chrisanthus, Patr. of Jerusalem, donor, 143.
Churchill, Sir Winston, 320 n.
Churchyard, Thomas, two of his tracts stolen, 81.
Cition, in Cyprus, 162.
Clapham, John, donor, 28.
Clarendon, Edward, first Earl of, donor, 94; his MSS., 163, 289, 394 n.; resignation of Chanc. of Univ., 323; Gray's copy of his History, 276; v. Sutherland.
Clarendon, Edward, third Earl, 164.
Clarendon, H., Earl of, MSS., 184, 281.
Clarke, —, 115.
Clarke, Sam., M.A., his MSS., 95, 268.
Clarke, W. N., D.C.L., Collection of Letters, 154; Berkshire MSS., 312 n.
Clavel, Walter, 184.
Claymond, John, 11.
Clayton, Dr. John, 81.
Cleaver, E., Bp. of St. Asaph, 192.
Clement VIII, Pope, 283, 310.
Clements, —, bookseller, 144.
Cloyne, 311.
Cobbe, Richard, M.A., 149.
Cobham, Thomas, Bp. of Worcester, first founder of the Univ. Library, 3.
INDEX.

Cobham, Lord, donor, 22.
Cockburn, John, D.D., and his son, 127.
Coins and Medals, 61, 75, 88, 93, 124, 125, 182, 190, 191, 203, 264, 291, 294 n.; Catalogue ordered to be made, 76; enlarged by Hearne, 123; coin-room, 339, 340.
Cole, T., 212 n.
Colf, R., D.D., his sons, donors, 44.
Collins, Richard, 36.
Columba, S., 64, 176.
Compton, Henry, Bp. of London; MS. papers, 154 n., 175; mentioned, 127.
Conde, J. Ant., 238.
Counick, Richard, donor, 43.
Constance, Council of, Acta, 9, 58.
Cook, Captain, Voyages, 198.
Cooper, or Cowper, George, M.A., 121.
Cooper, Samuel, 336.
Cope, Sir Walter, donor, 22.
Coptic MSS., 107, 149, 150, 267.
Corbinelli, J., 296.
Cornbury, Henry Hyde, Lord, donor of the Clarendon MSS., 163.
Cornhill Magazine, 280, 302 n.
Cornish MSS., 44.
Cosin, Richard, L.L.D., 170 n.
Cotton, Archb. Henry, Sub-librarian, 239; mentioned, 213, 235; List of Bibles cited, 97; Typogr. Gaz. cited, 112 n., 162 n., 244, 303, 310 n.; donor, 311.
Cotton, Sir R., donor, 24; MS. from his library, 96 n.; mentioned 9, 86.
Courayer, F. le, papers and portrait, 205.
Coventrey, Thomas, 37.
Coventry, placards, &c., 298.
Coverdale, Miles, Bp. of Exeter, 239, 277, 302.
Coward, William, M.D., donor, 119.
Cowderoy, W., Janitor, 189.
Cowley, Abraham, his Poems, given by him, 45 n.; verses on Drake’s chair, 95.
Cowper, William, 45.
Crabb, John, M.A., Sub-librarian, 131–2.
Crabb, William, 131.
Crabeth, —, 226.
Cranner, Thomas, Archbp. of Cant., Autograph, 17 n.
Crevenna, P. A., sale, 201.
Crew, —, M.A., 93.
Crewe, Nathaniel, Bp. of Durham, donor, 92, 162; portrait, 236.
Croft, William, Mus. D., 205, 206.
Cromwell, Henry, 322.
Cromwell, Oliver, gift of Greek MSS., 55, 89; applies for the loan of a MS., but is refused, 76; letters, 154; Memoirs, 227; portraits, 255.
Cromwell, Richard, 55 n.
Croydon, 180.
Crynes, Nathaniel, M.A., his bequest, 159, 160; had some duplicates from the Bodleian, 46.
Crystall, John, 313.
Cuervedale coins, 264.
Cuper, Gisb., 207.
Cureton, William, D.D., Sub-librarian, 251, 259.
Curl, Edmund, 322.
Curtis, —, 200.
Cyprian, S., 290.

DALRYMPLE, 258.
Daly, Robert, Bp. of Cashel, sale, 321.
Damascius, 108.
Daniel, G., 43 n.
Danish visitors to the Library, 137.
Dante, 226 n.
Davies, A. L., 115.
Davies, John, Deptford, donor, 94.
Davies, John, Hereford, 171 n.
Davis, Richard, donor, 105.
Davy, Capt. L. H., donor, 226.
Davy, William, A.B., 259.
Davydige, Richard, donor, 76.
Dawkins, Henry, gift of MSS., 188–9.
Dawson, Thomas, 36.
Daye, John, 233.
Decker, Thomas, 231, 298.
Dee, Dr. John, papers, 177; mentioned, 169 n., 318.
Defoe, Daniel, 302.
Delahogue, L. A., 263.
Delaram, Francis, 171 n.
INDEX.

Denyer, John, 238.
Denyer, Mrs. Eliz. D., bequest, 238–9.
Depford, 94.
Derby, Geoffrey, Earl of, donor, 281.
Derby, Prior Stephen, 179.
De Rosci, J. B., 236.
Desborough, Major-Gen., donor, 90.
Devonshire, Duke of, 240.
Devonshire MSS., 268.
D'Ewes, Sir Symonds, 10.
Dibdin, Dr. T. F., cited, 18, 19, 114, 130 n., 208, 209, 215, 222, 234, 248; mentioned, 258.
Dickens, Guy, donor, 161.
Digby, Sir Kenelm, his MSS., 58, 318; Allen's MSS. included, 20; willing that they should be lent, 59, 79, 240; his portraits, 196, 336.
Dillmann, Dr. A., 65, 268.
Dillon, Viscount, 112 n.
Dionysius Halicarnassus, 189.
Dionysius Syrus, 108.
Dinney, Dr. John, 237.
D'Israeli, Is., cited, 326 n.
Ditchley, Oxon., 113 n.
Dix, James, 335.
Dix, John, 36.
Djame, 325, 323.
Dodd, —, 220 n.
Dodd, Thomas, 251.
Dodsworth, Roger, his MSS., 96, 97; mentioned, 99.
Dodwell, Henry, M.A., 152, 176, 320 n.
Dolben, Gilbert, and J. E., donors, 237.
Dolben, Sir J. E., Sheldon and Dolben papers, 237–8.
Donatus, 262.
Donkin, W. F., M.A., 277.
Dorne, John, D.D., 86.
Dormer, Sir Michael, donor, 75.
Dornford, Rev. Jos., donor, 326.
Dorset, Sackville, Lord Buckhurst, afterwards Earl of, donor of books, 17; of Bodley’s bust, 26.
Dorset, C. Sackville, Earl of, 173.
Dositheus, 143.
Douce, Francis, his library, 249–51; mentioned, 257 n., 267, 336; references to books, 53, 310, 311, 321 n., 327, 329–332; coins, 340.
Douglas, James, M.D., 248.
Douglas, John, Bp. of Salisbury, donor, 164; mentioned, 267.

Drake, Sir F., his chair, 94.
Drake, Francis, donor, 96 n.
Drummond, W., of Hawthornden, 266.
Drusius, J., cited, 13 n.
Dryden, John, 178.
Dublin, 176, 179.
Dubourg, —, 338.
Du Chesne, Andr., Hist. Fr. Script., 57.
Dugdale, Sir W., donor, 104; MSS. 177, 287, 288.
Dukes, Leopold, 114.
Dukes, T. F., 264.
Duncan, J. S. and P. B., donors, 236.
Dune, Thomas, 314.
Dunstan, St., MSS., 20.
Dunton, John, 177.
Durandus, Gul., 239.
Durham, Register of Bp. Kellow, 216.
Dury, John, MS. papers, 176.
Dutch tracts, 228, 258.
Dyak language, first books printed in the, 203.
Dyas, Earl of, 153.

EASTCOT, Daniel, 81.
East India, portraits of Rajahs, 158.
East India Company, donors, 208, 223, 260.
Eberbach, 318.
Ebner, J. W., 219.
Eccard, J. G., restored some papers stolen from Bodleian, 103 n.
Edelmann, H., 114, 275.
Eden, Robert, M.A., 235.
Edgeman, William, 165 n.
Edgeworth, Miss, 227.
Edmonds, Sir Clement, donor, 49.
Edward the Confessor, 328.
Edward I, 185, 329.
Edward III, 328.
Edward IV, 87.
Edward VI, mentioned, 56, 282, 331; exercise-book, 328.
Edward, Thomas, M.A., account of him, 149, 150.
Edwardes, Thomas, 36.
Ekerman, Peter, 24 n.
Elizabeth of York, wife of Henry VII, 120.
Elizabeth, Queen, exercise-book, 325; gloves, ih.; MSS. presented to her, 49, 316; books bound by her, 52, 153; books translated and written by her, 52, 331: proclamations in her reign, 170 n.; roundels, 339; mentioned, 307, 308.
INDEX.

Elizabeth, Q. of Bohemia, 336.
Elkins, W. H., 300.
Elliott, J. B., his gift of MSS., &c., 290-1, 340.
Ellis, Sir Henry, D.C.L., Sub-librarian, 204-5; Letters of Literary Men, cited, 9, 24, 54, 121; Polydore Virgil, 11; Remarks on Camden, 103.
Elsham, Thomas, cited, 24 n., 25.
Elphibanus, Bp., Chron. of Scot., 96.
Elstob, William and Mary, 187.
English, Thomas, 316.
Enoch, Book of, 267.
Erasmus, Des., 144 n., 239, 336.
Erfurt, MSS. from, 285.
Erpenius, Thomas, 54.
Essex, Robert, Second Earl of, donor, 17; mentioned, 24, 48.
Eton College, 175.
Ettv, Simeon J., M.A., 239, 259.
Euclid, the D'Orville MS., 107.
Eulenberg, Baron ab, 68.
Eusebius, 338 n.
Eustace, G., 311.
Euthymius Zygabenus, 108.
Eutychius, or Eutexus, 20.
Evans, Rev. F., 184.
Evans, Messrs., 276 n.
Evelyn, John, donor, 88; letters, 287.
Exeter, MSS. given by Dean and Chapter,
23; Statutes of the Cathedral, 179.
Exeter, Cecil, Earl of, donor, 44.
Eyre, Dr., 190.
Eyston, Charles, 213 n.

FABER, John, 258.
Fadir, Peter, 317.
Farem, 164.
Fairfax, Sir Thomas, his bequest of MSS., 95-7; versions of Psalms, &c., 97, 289; reference to MSS., 18 n., 314; preserved the Library when Oxford surrendered, 72.
Falkland, Lucius, Lord, 70, 71.
Fanshaw, John, M.A., 107.
Farmer, Anthony, 150.
Fawkes, Guy, lantern, 67.
Fees of Visitors, 133, 114, 266.
Fell, John, Bp. of Oxford, his MSS., 108-9, 120; mentioned, 125, 150.
Fell, Samuel, Dean of Ch. Ch., 72.
Fenton, John, 338.

Fenton, Samuel, M.A., 222, 229.
Fenton, Thomas, M.A., 107.
Ferrand, William, 36.
Ferrar, Richard, 53 n.
Festivale, 112.
Fetherstone, Henry, donor, 31, 54 n.
Field, Richard, 26.
Finnish MSS., 22.
Firth, Richard, M.A., 259, 263.
Fisher, John, Bp. of Rochester, 239.
Fitz-James, K., Bp. of Chichester, 316.
Fitz-William, John, D.D., 177.
Fletcher, —, Librarian, 11.
Fleetwood, William, Bp. of Ely, 141,
170 n., 329.
Fletcher, John, M.A., Sub-librarian,
141; resigns, 146.
Fletcher, Ald. William, donor, 29, 30,
211; buried at Yarmouth, 30 n.; bust, ib.
Florence, MSS. sent thence with merchandise, 226 n.
Foley, Lord, 147.
Foliot, Gilbert, Bp. of London, 188.
Folkes, Martin, 174.
Foreigners in the Library, 68, 137.
Foster, —, 282.
Foster, N., 341.
Footherby, Charles and Martin, 36.
Foucault, Nicholas Jos., 161, 179, 184.
Foukes, E. S., B.D., 277.
Foulkes, Mrs. Edmund, donor, 319.
Foulkes, Thomas, M.A., 107.
Fountaine, Sir Andrew, 134.
Fouquet, —, 236.
Fowler, Edward, Bp. of Gloucester, 131.
Foxe, John, 19, 318.
France, drawings of monuments, 213-
214; atlas of, 205; French tracts,
270; French MSS., 63, 177, 215.
Francis, C., M.A., donor, 113.
Frankland, Thomas, letter, 108.
Franklin, Sir John, 319.
Frappas, Jules, 214.
Frazer, —, MSS., 344 n.
Frederick, King of Bohemia, 238.
Frederick, Elector Palatine, 336.
Frederick, Prince of Wales, epitaph, 169.
Freke, Ralph and William, donors, 88.
Frère, E., Livres de Liturgie, &c., 213 n.
Frewin, Richard, M.D., 294 n.
Frith, John, passim. Brightwell, 239.
Froben, Joh., 337.
Fry, Francis, 341.
INDEX.

Fulke, Will., editions of hisAnnotations in the Library, 41.
Fuller, Richard, 314.
Fuller, Thomas, Ch. Hist. cited, 85.
Furney, Archdeacon Richard, his bequest, 184.
Fust and Schofield, books printed by, 161, 201, 249.
Fylool, Jasper, 19.
Fysher, Robert, M.B., elected Librarian, 151; publishes a catalogue of the printed books, 156, 158; his death, 160; charged with neglect, 161; coins, 16.
GAGUINUS, Rob., 26.
Galanus, C., 316 n.
Gagnieres, —, 213.
Gaisford, Thomas, D.D., Dean of Ch. Ch., 208, 215, 223.
Gale, Samuel, 184.
Gardiner, Richard, 48.
Gardner, Dunn, sale, 321.
Garlick, F. C., B.A., 212 n.
Garter, Order of, the, 179.
Gascoigne, Thomas, D.D., 20 n., 316.
Gassendi, P., 336.
Gent, William, donor, 17, 177 n.
Gentili, Alb. and Scipio, 207.
George, Prince of Denmark, 185 n.
George I, 131, 175.
George III, visits the Library, 197; donor, 198.
George IV, donor, 216, 223.
German MSS., 63.
Gerhard, J. A., 241 n.
Gessinus, Guili, Pamm. Monumenta cited, 163; autograph, 319; sale, 270.
Gianfilippi, P. de’, 230 n.
Gibbon, Anthony, 175.
Gibbon, Edward, 320 n.
Gibbs, James, 204 n.
Gibson, Edmund, Bp. of London, 187 n.
Gidding, Little, 53.
Gigli, Gir., Vocab. Catrin. cited, 216 n.
Gildas, 20.
Girardenguz, Nic., 310.
Girardot, Paul, 321 n.
Girdlers’ Company, donors, 49.
Guylio Romano, 251.
Glastonbury, Chartulary, 110; survey of lands, 162.
Gloucester Cathedral, 185.
Gloucester, Thomas of Woodstock, Duke of, 19 n.—v. Humphrey.
Gloucestershire, 187.
Glover, Robert, 174.
Glynne, H., 271.
Gocthan, Thomas, Archbp. of his labours, 126; visits the Library, 127; donor, 127-8.
Godar, Guili., 312.
Godschall, W. M., 164.
Godwyn, Charles, M.A., his bequest, 193; coins, 340.
Goetz, G. H., 241 n.
Goldberg, Dr. B., 311.
Goldenthal, Dr. J., 243.
Goli, Jac., 133.
Gompertz, Dr. T., 216.
Gonzaga, Leonora, 249.
Good, John, M.A., 90.
Goodwin, T., 81.
Goodyear, Aaron, donor, 105.
Gordon, Sir J. W., 304.
Gouda, 228.
Gower, Rev. F., 265.
Gower, John, 19 n., 96, 237, 336.
Grabe, J. E., D.D., his MSS., 149; autograph, 310 n.
Gravius, J. G., 179.
Grafton, Richard, 300.
Grant, Sir F. A., 281.
Granville, Denis, D.D., Dean of Durham, 177.
Grascome, Bp. Samuel, 177.
Graves, Richard, 184.
Gray, Charles, M.P., donor, 162.
Gray, Thomas, 276.
Greaves, T., D.D., his MSS., 103, 325.
Green, Charles, 194.
Greene, Maurice, Mus. D., 205, 206.
Greene, Robert, 223.
Greenhill, W. A., M.D., 277, 278.
Greensted, Essex, 335.
Gregorius, Jac. de, donor, 92.
Gregory, St., MSS. of his Pastorale.
INDEX.

23, 100; Dialogues, 100; Sacram., 162.
Gregory Nazianzen, 115.
Gregory, David, M.D., 119.
Grenville, Lord, 223.
Gresham Statutes, 180.
Greville, Col. Charles, 253.
Grey, Sir C., donor, 240.
Griffith, John, M.A., 34 n., 211 n.
Griffiths, Ralph, LL.D., 260.
Grimaldi, Doge of Venice, 58.
Grise, Jehan de, 18.
Gronovius, J. F., 320 n.
Grove, Edmund, 251, 266.
Gutch, —, Van der, 168.
Guildford, Earl of, 286.
Guileville, G., 328.
Guillem, John, 174, 187.
Gutch, John, B.D., editor of Anth. Wood, g. v.; mentioned, 219 n.
Gutenberg, J., 203, 221.
Guthrie, —, 104.
Gyles, Fletcher, 172.

HACKMAN, Alfred, M.A., mentioned, 154, 268, 277; Sub-librarian, 298.
Haddan, A. W., B.D., 20 n.
Haden, Messrs., 235.
Hagembach, Petr., 311.
Haghe, Inghilb., 311.
Hake, Robert, M.A., 170 n.
Hakewill, William, 37.
Hale, Sir Matthew, 77, 86 n.
Hale, Archdeacon W. H., 29 n.
Halifax, Montagu, Earl of, 184.
Hall, —, 158.
Hall, Rev. —, donor, 233.
Hall, Anthony, D.D., 28, 56, 145.
Hall, Fitz-Edward, donor, 291.
Hall, Henry, 73.
Hall, Susannah and William, 301.
Hall, W., 110.
Hallam, Henry, 319.
Halliwell, J. O., 101, 212, 298, 301.
Ham House, 155.
Hamilton, —, 290.
Hampden, John, Letters, 154; jewel, 203.
Hamper, W., donor, 240.
Handel, G. F., 205.
Harborne, John, 328.
Harcourt, Earl and Archbp., 211 n.
Harding, John, Chronicles, 87.
Hardouyn, Germ., 312.
Hardy, Thomas Duffus, 64 n., 166.
Hare, Aug. and J. C., donors, 247.
Hare, Robert, 82.
Harewood, Yorkshire, 104.
Harper, H. S., 263.
Harris, J., 320 n., 277, 322.
Hart, Andr., 266.
Haryson, John, 36.
Haslam, Christopher, M.A., 107.
Hastlewood, J., 160.
Hastings, Warren, 208.
Hatton, Christopher, first Lord, 99.
Hatton, Christopher, second Lord, his MSS., 20 n., 99-100.
Hatton, Jane, grand-niece to Bodley, petition to the University, 39.
Haverghal, H. E., M.A., 189, 206.
Hawkins, Ernest, B.D., Sub-librarian, 246, 252.
Hawkins, John, 147.
Hayes, Dr. Phil. and Will., 205, 206.
Head, Sir Edmund, Few Words on Bodl. Libr., 247, 277.
Heath, James, 258.
Hearne, Thomas, M.A., appointed Janitor, 133; makes an appendix to the Cat., ib.; catalogues Ray’s coins, 125; appointed Sub-librarian, 131; his respect for Duke Humphrey, 6; paper against borrowing books, 80 n.; complaints against him, 132, 136, 139; account of his exhibiting a portrait of the Chevalier, 134-6; quits the Library upon refusing the oats, 140; commended by Uffenbach, 145; his death, 152; diary, 180; cited, 4 n., 14 n., 15 n., 22, 28, 33, 43, 45 n., 48 n., 51 n., 55 n., 70, 91 n., 98, 99, 106, 109, 110, 122, 125, 130, 127, 128, 130, 134, 137, 138 bis, 139, 140, 142, 143, 144, 145, 146, 149, 151, 156, 157, 157 n., 333; mentioned, 9, 56, 64, 112, 130, 120; references to his MSS., 156, 178, 326; Reasons for taking the Oath of Allegiance, 152; Dodwell de Parma Woodw., 134, 136; proposed apology for the preface, 137; Camden’s Eliz., 133, 137 n., 213 n.; Letter on Antiquities, &c., 189; Rossi
INDEX.

Hill, Sir John, M.D., Vegetable System, 198 n.
Hill, Richard, 81.
Hindhay farm, see Hendons.
Hoadley, Bp. Benjamin, portrait exhibited by Hearne, 135.
Hobbes, Thomas, 77 n.
Hocclever, Thomas, 178.
Hodgson, B. H., donor, 365.
Hodshall, —, 340 n.
Hody, Humphrey, D.D., bequest, 126.
Hogarth, William, donor, 168.
Holbein, Hans, 333-337.
Holland, T., 341 n.
Holis, John, 28-327.
Holman, W., MSS. for Essex, &c., 174, 175.
Holmes, John, 39.
Holmer, Rob., D.D., Collations of Sept., 207.
Horne, Sir J. E., donor, 276.
Homer, Ed. Princ., 192; Scholia on Odyssey, 246.
Honolulu, Queen Emma of, 320.
Hooke, Col. John, letters, 223.
Hooper, George, Bp. of Bath and Wells, 173 n.
Hooper, Humphrey, 36.
Hooper, John, Bp. of Gloucester, 339.
Hope, F. W., D.C.L., donor, 297.
Hope, J. T., 207.
Hopkins, —, 67.
Horace, 186, 248, 298.
Horne, Rev. T. H., 64.
Hornsby, Thomas, D.D., 194.
Horsey, Sir Jerome, donor, 25.
Hosea, peculiar reading in, 20.
Howe, Josias, B.D., Sermon, 171 n.
Howe, Michael, 233.
Howell, Lawrence, M.A., 177.
Howland, Ralph, donor, 129.
Huber, —, cited, 83 n.
Hudson, John, D.D., elected Librarian, 123; donor, ib.; said to have thrown out Milton’s books from the Library, 46; letter cited, 121; mentioned, 69, 124, 127, 132, 133, 140, 157; twice married, 12; his widow married to Dr. Hill, 28; account of the Library, 38; subscriptions for relief of Bodley’s relations, 39; threatens to remove...
INDEX

Heame, 139; his death, 144; neglect and incapacity, 140, 144, 145.
Hughes, J., M.A., "Boscobel Tracts," cited, 324 n.
Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester, gifts to the Library, 6–10; motto, 6 n.; aided in building the Divinity School, 6; destruction of his library, 11, 12.
Hungarian books, 275.
Hunson, Henry, first lord, donor, 17.
Hunt, Leigh, 227.
Hunt, Thomas, printer and bookseller in Oxford in 1483, 112.
Hunt, Thomas, D.D., mentioned, 109, 294 n.; MSS., 193.
Hunter, Joseph, Cat. of Dodsworth MSS., 96.
Huntingdon, Earl of, 166.
Huntington, Robert, bp. of Raphoe, mentioned, 108, 133; his MSS., 113, 115.
Hussey, Edw. L., 255 n.; 257 n.
Hussey, Robert, B.D., 257 n.
Hutton, —, 143.
Hyde, Thomas, D.D., sub-librarian, 90; elected Head-librarian, 93; dedication of catalogue, 97; note on the agreement with the Stationers' Co., 31; goes to London to claim books from the Co., 110; letters cited, 69, 120; MSS. bought from him, 113; mentioned, 100 n., 109, 130 n., 294 n.; charged with ignorance by Wanley, 118; wishes to have Wanley for his successor, ib.; resigns the Librarianship, 121; his death, 123.
IBOTT, Benj., 232.
Icelandic MSS., 242.
Ince, Peter, donor, 50.
Ingles, Esther, MSS. by her, 48, 49.
Inglis, —, sale, 321.
Inglis, Sir R. H., donor, 183; portrait, 337.
Ingram, James, D.D., bequest of coins, 340.
Innocent VIII., Pope, 148.
Irish MSS., 63, 64, 175; pamphlets, 232, 247.
Isaiah, 82 n., 113.
Isham, Zach., M.A., 106.
Italian printed books and MSS., 63, 177, 225, 260, 271.

Ivan Basiliades, Czar of Russia, 25.
JACKSON, Cyril, D.D., Dean of Ch. Ch., 198.
Jackson, Rev. J. E., 288.
James I, grants letters patent for the Library, 25; visits it, 26, 41; grants books from the royal libraries, 46; a book formerly in his possession, 44; presents his own Works, 47.
James II, visits the Library while Duke of York, 92; Duchess of Buckingham his daughter, 148; mentioned, 166, 173, 222, 237, 253, 255, 259, 340.
James Edward, "the Chevalier," son of James II, portrait exhibited by Heame, 135; portraits of him and his wife, 169 n.
James, Andrew, donor, 50.
James, Edward, B.D., donor, 40.
James, Richard, his MSS., 103, 104.
James, Thomas, donor, 21; Appointment as Librarian, salary, &c., ib.; publishes the catalogue in 1605, 27; a continuation of the classified index in MS., 28; another Catalogue in MS. in 1613, 39; proposes the agreement with the Stationers' Company, 31; publishes the second edition of the Catalogue, 46; resigns his office, 44; death, ib.; cited, 13 n., 16, 60; mentioned, 103; Catal. Interp., 60, 243 n.; portrait, 326.
Janitors, 88, 123, 189, 192.
Jansen, Cornelius, 336.
Janson, Nicolas, 250, 310.
Janua, J. de, 209.
Javanese MSS., 50, 236, 324.
Jehannot, E., 312.
Jekyll, Sir Joseph, 172, 177, 184.
Jekyll, Thomas, 174.
Jernegan, Nicholas, 165, 166.
Jerome, St., 111, 253.
Jersey, Lord, 277.
Jerusalem, 105, 265.
Jessett, —, B.A., 158.
Jews offer to buy St. Paul's Cathedral and the Bodleian Library, 75.
John, a Greek scribe, 215.
John of Aix, 113.
Johnson, —, 77 n.
Johnson, Dr. Samuel, donor, 188;
INDEX.

mentioned, 87, 233 ; Lives of Poets referred to, 106.
Jones, — 341.
Jones, H., M.A. [dec. 1700], his MSS., 109, 120 ; reference to a MS., 96 n.
Jones, H., M.A. 1729, 107.
Jones, John, 310.
Jones, Sir William, 247.
Jonson, Ben, 86, 178, 231.
Juvenal, Bishop William, donor, 88 ;
donor of book to Barlow, 111.
Judge, E., M.A., 239.
Judge, Richard, 171 n.
Junius, Francis, mentioned, 19 ; his MSS. 103, 327 ; Glossarium Septemtr., 108 ;
three Hatton MSS. amongst his own, 100 ; cited, 104 ; portrait 326.
Justell, Christopher, 100.
Justell, Henry, donor, 100.
Justinian, 173 n., 310.
Juvenal, 252, 265, 298.
Juxon, Bishop William, donor, 88 ;
donor of book to Barlow, 111.
KEATE, — 340.
Keating, Geoffrey, Hist. of Ireland, 96.
Keble, — bookseller, donor, 125.
Kedden, Rev. Ralph, 39.
Keigwin, John, 44.
Keil, Prof. John, M.D., 134, 135, 136.
Kellow, Richard, Bp. of Durham, 216.
Kelly, Edward ; his Holy Table, 162 n.
Kemble, J. M., Codex Dipl., 185.
Kempe, Thomas, Bishop of London, 10.
Kempis, Thomas a, 126.
Ken, John (erroneously printed Kerr),
donor, 93.
Ken, Thomas, Bishop of Bath and Wells, 173 n. ; letters, 175 n.
Kennett, White, Bishop of Peterborough, 187 n., 212 n.
Kennicott, Benjamin, D.D., Hebr. Collations, &c., 191, 294 n. ; Arabic tracts, 231 ; autograph, 320 n.
Kennon, Mrs., 182 n.
Kerver, Thilman, 312.
Kewisch, John, 65.
Kibby, — 67.
King, — bookseller, 201.
King, Charles, M.A., donor, 56 n.
King, John, Bishop of London, 36.

King, John, D.D., donor, 159.
King, James, bookseller, Moorfields, 182 n.
King, P., Lord, Life of Locke, cited 124.
Kingsborough, Viscount, Mexican Antiq.
246.
Kingsley, William, 289.
Kington, Felix, a London printer, 32.
Kirkebote, Adam, Librarian, 11.
Kloss, Dr., sale, 253, 262.
Kneller, Sir Godfrey, donor, 147.
Knight, Archdeacon, 153.
Knight, Thomas, donor, 203.
Kno, John, 242, 248.
Koran, 76, 208, 326.
Kyngsbury, Thomas de, 316.
Kyrkeby, John, 7 n.

LACTANTIIUS, 226.
Lacy, Edmund, Bishop of Exeter, 315.
La Fontaine, J. de, 298.
Laing, David, L.L.D., mentioned, 49 n. ;
donor, 183 n.
Lake, Gilbert, M.A., 107.
Lamb, James, D.D., his MSS., 93.
Landino, Christopher, 250, 310.
Landisburg, English monastery at, 245.
Lane, Col. John, and Mrs. Letitia, 324.
Langbaine, Gerard, D.D., his Adversaria,
89 ; mentioned, 59, 67, 78 ; letter cited, 78.
Langley, L. M., 239.
Langley, abbey register, 154 n.
Langley, Henry de, 316.
Langford, Emmanuel, M.A., 158.
Lansing, Richard de, 316.
Lauselles, R., Oxford, cited, 95, 234 n.
Lashier, Jos., M.D., 179.
Lathbury, T., M.A., 283.
Latefather, John, Expositio in Tber.
Terem., 112.
Laud, Archbp., his gifts, 61–65 ; placed at the west end, 62 ; coins, 339 ; letters,
62, 322 ; references to his MSS., 43.
246, 268, 295, 325–327 ; mentioned,
31, 59, 82 n., 240, 290 n. ; writes verses on Bodley's death, 37 ; portrait, 336 ; book given to St. John's College,
53 n.
Laurence, Roger, M.A., 168 n.
Laurence, Richard, Archbp. of Cashel,
220, 221, 267.
Laurentius Gallus, 329.
Layfields, John, 36.
Leake, William, 36.
Lecchalede, John de, 318.
INDEX.

Lee, Sir James, donor, 328.
Lee, William, 302.
Leeu, Gerard, 155.
Legat, Hugh, 313.
Leicester, Robert Dudley, first Earl of, donor, while Lord Lisle, 17; his watch, 139; book that belonged to him, 320.
Leicester, Cope, Earl of, 277, 321.
Leicestershire, 110.
Leighton, Archbishop, 179.
Leland, John, his MSS., 56, 318.
Le Long, le Père, 184 n.
Lendon, Abel, M.A., 303.
Le Neve, Peter, 174, 184.
Lennox, Mary, Countess of, 44.
Lennox, W. J., 310.
Lenthall, —, Janitor, 189.
Leofric, Bp. of Exeter, MSS. given to Exeter, 23.
Lerida, Breu. Illerdense, 303.
Le Sueur, Hubert, 61, 148.
Letheringham, Suffolk, 214.
Lewis, F., 211 n.
Lewis, Sir G. C., 274.
Lewis, John, M.A., MSS., 176, 248, 252.
Lewton, Edward, M.A., 201.
Ley, Edwin, donor, 44.
Leyden, 123, 133, 178, 199, 207, 228.
Lhuyd, Edw., cited, 20, 125; MSS., 289.
Libri, Girol. da, 249.
Libri, Gugli., 273, 390.
Lichfield Cathedral, 179.
Lichfield, Leonard, 65.
Lilly, William, 160 n.
Lilly, W., bookseller, 260 n.
Linacre, Thomas, 316 n.
Lindell, Augustine, Bp. of Peterborough, 51, 290 n., 518.
Lister, Martin, M.D., his library, 288.
Livesmore, George, 311.
Liverpool, Earl of, 221.
Livy, 112, 226.
Llandaff, 190.
Lloyd, William, Bp. of Worcs., 216.
Locke, John, donor, 124.
Lockie, Thomas, B.D., elected Librarian, 90; resigns, 93; death, 16.
Lockhart, James, Papers, cited, 222 n.
Lodge, Thomas, 231.
Loftus, Dudley, 108.
Logan, D., 324.
London, Charter, 180; houses in Distaff Lane, 32; burned in the Fire, 38; their rent in arrear, 58; fire at the Temple, 86; map of London and Westminster, 245; cat. of MSS. at Lincoln's Inn, 96; St. Peter's, Cornhill, 177; Christ's Hospital, 186. London Gazette, 302.
Longhi, G., 290.
Lorentzi, —, 226.
Louis XIV of France, 214.
Louis XVI of France, 267.
Loutherbourg, P. J. G., 244.
Louveau, J., 52.
Low Countries, 186.
Lownes, Humphrey, 36.
Lucan, 223, 262.
Luard, H. R., M.A., 328.
Lucas, —, bookseller, 260 n.
Luff, Richard, monk of Coventry, 314.
Lumley, John, sixth Lord, donor, 17.
Luther, Martin, 245, 246, 283, 285, 302.
Lutheran Tracts, German, 228, 283.
Lydgate, John, 177, 178, 318.
Lydiat, Thomas, M.A., 119.
Lynedewoode, William, Provinciale, 112.
Lyra, Thos., Dean of St. Paul's, 315.
Lyra, Rev. H. F., 273.
MACBRIDE, J. D., D.C.L., donor, 228; mentioned, 278, 320 n.
Macdonald, Flora, 160 n.
Mackenzie, Sir George, 320 n.
Mackie, —, 340.
Macky, John, journey through England, cited, 86 n.
Macpherson, D., 165, 166.
Macray, W. D., 85 n., 176, 206, 233 n., 250 n., 270, 287.
Mac-Regol, Abbot of Birr, 104.
Madden, Sir Fred., 177 n., 281, 330.
Madox, Thomas, 320 n.
Magnus, Finn, his MSS., 242.
Magno Charta, 185.
Maittaire, Michael, 177, 178, 179, 184.
Major, G., 246 n.
Malabar, Bp. of, 319.
Malabaric MS., 324.
Malmsbury, Chartulary, 110, 142.
Malone, Edmund, his library, 231-2.
Malyng, H., 313.
INDEX.

Man, Thomas, 32, 36.
Manaton, Pierce, M.D., 107.
Manchester Cathedral, 179.
Manuzzi, Giuseppe, 235.
Maraldi, —, 205.
Marchant, N., 336.
Margaret of Anjou, 90.
Margaret, Queen of Scotland, 44.
Mariborough, John, first Duke of, 125.
Marriott, Charles, B.D., 278.
Marshall or Mareschal, Thomas, D.D., his printed books and MSS., 107;
recovers a lost MS., 92; said to have borrowed MSS., 100; mentioned, 150.
Martinall, R. de, Bp. of Sarum, 176, 317.
Marvell, Andrew, 320 n.
Mary I., her MS. Horse and inscription, 43; another inscription, 43.
Mary II., 175 n., 255.
Mary, Queen of Scotland, 171 n., 266 n.
Maskelyne, N. S., M.A., 278.
Mason, Robert, D.D., bequest, 264.
Massa, Michael de, 329.
Massey, Dr. Richard M., donor, 129.
Massinger, Philip, 231.
Master, Dr. Robert, donor, 9.
Mather, Cotton, 304.
Matthew of Westminster, 289.
Matthews, Rev. A. H., donor, 210; Sub-librarian (?), 342.
Maximilian, Emp. of Germany, 331.
Maximus, Valerius, 8.
Maynard, Joseph, B.D., donor, 90.
Mead, Dr. Richard, 142, 184, 340.
Medici, House of, 182.
Medici, Mary de, 249, 351.
Medytone, Ralph de, 329.
Meeran, Ger. and John, 238.
Meetkirk, Prof. Edward, 81.
Melanchthon, Philip, 245, 246, 253.
Mendeas MSS., 114, 300.
Mendham, Rev. Joseph, his bequest, 286; Lit. Policy, cited, 91 n.
Mentelin, —, 210.
Munts, 318.
Merrick, John, donor, 25.
Mexican Antiquities, 246, 325.
Michael, J., Hebrew books, 272.
Michaelis, J. D., 320 n.
Middlesex MSS., 175.
Middleton, Viscountess, 164.
Milan, Ambrosian Library, 47 n.
Mill, John, D.D., donor, 125; mentioned, 99.
Milles, Jeremiah, D.D., his MSS., 268.
Milton, John, books given by him, 45; these, at one time, said to have been thrown out, 46, 160.
Missals, 23, 65, 179, 213, 325, 283.
Mocket, or Moket, Richard, 36.
Models, 49, 105, 250, 334, 337, 338.
Molineux, —, 134.
Monasteries, dissolved, 271 n.
Montaur, 205.
Monkhouse, Thomas, M.A., 164.
Mounmouth, Duke of, letters and dying acknowledgment, 173, 323; mentioned, 222 n., 282.
Monson, Sir W., cited, 34.
Montacute, Lord, donor, 17.
Montagu, Capt. M., bequest, 298.
Montagu, Richard, Bp. of Norwich, 47.
Montague, Edward Wortley, 206.
Montague, George, 36.
Monteith, Robert, Hist. of the Troubles, cited, 75.
Montfaucon, Bernard, 224.
Moore, —, 340.
Morant, Philip, M.A., 174.
Morbeck, W. de, 59.
More, Hannah, 227.
More, Sir Thomas, 144 n., 187.
Moreri, L., 94.
Mores, E. Rowe, 156, 212 n., 320 n.
Moran, Edward, M.A., 342.
Morley, Thomas, 206.
Morris, John, D.D., founder of the annual Bodley oration, 105.
Mortara, Count Aless., his library, 225, 279.
Morwen, Robert, 12.
Moses Maimonides, 114, 235.
Motthe, Georges de la, 316.
Mountjoy, Blount, Lord, donor, 22.
Mozarabic Breviary, 280.
Müller, A., donor, 228.
Müller, Max., M.A., Sub-librarian, 303; resigned, 304.
Mummy, an Egyptian, 105.
Munich, duplicates from, 276.
Muir, Joh. de, 76.
INDEX.

Murray, Dr. Alex., 267.
Murray, John, 184.
Musca, —, 9 n.
Music, printed books bought, 22; from Stat. Hall, 189; MSS., 205.
Myslonis, 43

NAHUMUS, Jod., Conc. in Evang., 80 n.
Nairne, David, his papers, 166.
Nelson, John, LL.D., papers, 153-4.
Napier, Sir Richard, letter cited, 73.
Napier, Rev. Richard, 74.
Napoleon I, portrait, 299; medals, 340.
Nash, Thomas, 301.
Nassington, William of, 177.
Naunton, Sir R., 47.
Neal, D., cited, 68.
Needlework, Life of our Blessed Lord, 51 n.; bindings, 51-53; samplers, 53.
Neile, Rich., Bp. of Cov. and Lichfield, 36.
Nelson, Robert, 127 n.
Nennius, 20 n.
Neubauer, Dr. A., 272.
Neville, Sir H., 48.
Nevile, Thomas, donor, 48.
New, E. P., B.D., 236.
Newcastle, William Cavendish, Marq. of, 216.
Newey, Thomas, M.A., 106.
Newington, Kent, parish register, 234.
Neuman, F., 83 n.
Newman, G., 36.
Newman, Henry, papers, 176.
Newspapers, 1672-1737, 302.
Newton, Richard, M.A., 106.
Newton, Thomas, 87.
New-Zealand Newspaper, 233 n.
Nichols, John Gough, 345 n.
Nicol, Alex., D.D., Sub-librarian, 220; mentioned, 65, 95, 199, 215, 233.
Nicolson, Wm., Archbp. of Cashel, 187 n.
Noel, Rev. John, 184.
Norris, Edwin, 44.
Norris, John, Janitor, 134 n., 189.

Norfolk Tracts, 280.
Norrkoping, Norway, 241 n.
North, Lord, donor, 192-4.
Northamptonshire MSS., 204.
Norton, John, 36, 53.
Notes and Queries, 226 n., 250 n., 254 n., 338 n.
Nourse, Tim., donor, 124.
Novello, Vincent, donor, 206.
Nowell, Alex., Dean of St. Paul's, 336.
Nugent, Lord, Mem. of Hampden, 203 n.
Nutt, J. W., M.A., Sub-librarian, 304.

OCCLEVE, Thomas, or Hoceleve, g. v.
Ochini, Bern., 331.
O'Donnell, Magnus, 176.
Offor, G., 233 n.
Ogilvie, James, of Boyne, 222.
Ogilvie, J., 75.
O'Grady, Standish H., 176 n.
Okeover family, 237.
Opie, Mrs., 227.
Oppenheimer, D., Hebrew library, 243.
Orford, Lord, 212 n.
Ormesby, Robert de, 339.
Ormonde, James, first Duke of, 165, 166.
Ormonde, James, second Duke of, 175.

Ormulum, 102.
Osborne, T., bookseller, 216.
Oseyney Abbey, book which belonged to, 176.
Osiusius, Hier., Bishop of Faro, 24.
Owen, H., 264.
Ouigour MS., 115.
Ouseley, Sir Fred. A. G., Bart., donor, 206; MSS. bought from him, 289.
Ouseley, Sir Gore, his MSS., 289, 290, 333; mentioned, 266.
Ouseley, Sir William, his MSS., 269; Orient. Collect. cited, 206.
Ousley, Rev. John, 174.
Ovid, 20, 179, 252, 300.
Owen, Humphrey, B.D., elected Librarian, 180; death, 192; mentioned, 170 n., 185, 192.
Owen, John, D.D., 89.
Owen, John, 227.
Owun, 104.
Oxford, statutes of various colleges, 179; the librarians of Cobham's and Duke Humphrey's libraries were Chaplains to the Univ., 5; almanacks, 211; books in the Library printed at Oxford before 1500, 111-2; map, 335; siege,
INDEX.

240: All Souls' Coll. MS. there, 19 n.; Anatomy School, 133, 134, 136, 140; Ashmolean Museum, 105, 122, 163, 169 n., 189, 203 n.; the Library transferred to the Bodleian, 286-9; Balliol Coll. MSS. there, 5; proposed catalogue of rare books, 201; list of books not in the Bodleian, 203; Ch. Ch. MSS. there, 49, 121; Corp. Chr. Coll. MS. there, 10; the old University chest there, 4 n.; Divinity School, 5; Durham Coll., 4, 20 n.; Exeter Coll., list of books not in Bodleian, 203; Hart Hall, 99; Jesus Coll., list of books not in Bodleian, 203; Magd. Coll. (see J. R. Blossam), spur-royals, 84; muniments, 85 n.; first Grammar-master, 112 n.; list of books not in Bodleian, 203; catalogue of the library, 203; account-books returned to the College, 215; statutes refused to be returned, 261; Merton Coll., proposed catalogue of rare books, 201; Music School, 170 n.; Oriel Coll. MS. there, 10; portrait of Bodley, on glass, 45 n.; proposed catalogue of rare books, 201; list of books not in Bodleian, 203; Queen's Coll. gave some of Junius' papers to the Bodleian, 103 n.; books bequeathed by Barlow, 111, 115; duplicates exchanged with Bodleian, 115; a person employed in the Library, 201; Dr. Mason's bequest, 265; Radcliffe Library, 202; the room assigned to the Bodleian, 203; St. John's Coll. book given by Laud, 53 n., and bust of Charles I, 61; St. Mary's Church, the first Library there, 3, 4; west window, 3; window of old Convocation House, 4 n.; Fysher, the Librarian, buried in Adam de Brome's chapel, 160; Schools' tower, inscription renewed, 147; Univ. Coll. MSS. there, 18 n., 64 n.; £50 due to the Bodleian from the College, 67; account-books returned to the College, 215; Wadham Coll., a person employed in the Library, 201; Friars Minor, 20 n.

Oxfordshire MSS., 175.

PACHYMETERS, 159.

Paine, James, donor, 248.

Palares, Anthony, 303.

Palmerston, Lord, 319.

Palmyra, 189.

Parascève, S., 374.

Paris, Mazarine Library, 47 n., 203.

MS. in Bibl. Imp., 115; Church of Holy Sepulchre, 180.

Paris, Rev. Thomas, 39.

Park, Thomas, 258.

Parke, John, 170 n.

Parke, John Henry, M.A., 214.

Parke, Joseph, 271.

Parke, Samuel, son of the Bishop, 144.

Parke, Thomas, 144, 192.

Parke's, Mrs., 245.

Parliamentary Committee for Augmentation of Livings, 129.

Parr, Q. Katherine, inscription, 43; MS. dedicated to her, 52.

Parret, —, 11 n.

Parsons, Joseph, M.A., donor, 191.

Parthenius, Patriar. of Constantin., 94.

Parthenope of Blos., 178.

Pate, William, donor, 196 n.

Patrick, St., 64.

Patrick, Symon, Bp. of Ely, 185 n.

Patridge, Daniel, 155.

Paul Ill., Pope, 283.

Paulus, H. E. G., 81.

Payne and Foss, Messrs., 229, 230, 245, 332.

Peach, John and Samuel, 194.

Peacock, —, 227.

Pembroke, Philip Herbert, Earl of, donor, 76.

Pembroke, William Herbert, Earl of, donor of the Barocci MSS., 54; letter to the Vice-Chanc., ib.; gave licence for borrowing the MSS., 51, 54, 79; statue of him, given by Thomas, seventh Earl, 148.

Penton, Stephen, B.D., donor, 124.

Pepys, Samuel, his MS. papers, 172.

Percy, Thomas, Bp. of Dromore, 232.

Perrott, Sir John, letters, 150.

Perrott, Thomas, D.C.L., donor, 150.

Persius, 22.

Peters, Hugh, donor, 88.

Peters, Rev. William, 209.
INDEX.

Petit, Sam, MS. Notes on Josephus, 94.
Petrarch, 8, 298.
Pett, Peter, L.L.B., donor, 76.
Phaedrus, 398.
Philip the Good, Duke of Burgundy, 331.
Phillips, Sir Thomas, 288.
Phoenician Inscription, 163.
Picus, Joh., 316 n.
Picking, William, sale, 282.
Piétre Flosomian, 101, 178.
Pigott, Rev. G., donor, 269.
Pigouchet, P., 312.
Pindar, —, Consul at Aleppo, donor, 33.
Pinelli, Mapheo, 200.
Pipping, —, 241 n.
Pius V, Pope, 283.
Plato, 8 n., 9, 10, 59, 115.
Playford, John, 206.
Plays, their admission discouraged by Bodley as a scandal to the Library, 66; collections purchased, 248.
Plenius-Amoris, various scribes of this name, 18, 19 n.
Pliny, S., 111, 250, 273, 310.
Plot, R., Nat. Hist. of Staff cited, 325.
Plunket, O., R. C. Archbp. of Armagh, 337.
Pococke, Edward, D.D., his MSS. and printed books, 113, 115, 268, 311; mentioned, 78, 199; references to MSS, 81.
Pole, Francis, 184.
Polish Books, 276.
Politian, Ang., 273.
Poinset, Ben., donor, 92.
Pollyander, Dr. John, 278.
Pontifical, Salisbury, 176.
Pope, Alexander, donor, 158; letters, 178, 322; mentioned, 232; portrait, 316.
Pope, Sir Thomas, 289.
Porro Helpe, 155.
Porret, Gilbert, 9 n.
Porter, —, M.D., 162.
Powle, Henry, 184.
Powney, Richard, LL.D., 164.
Prent, L. de, 226.
Prendergast, J. P., 166.
Prescott, W. H., 319.
Prestwich, —, 67.
Price, Daniel, Dean of St. Asaph, 178.
Price, John, B.D., elected Librarian, 192; complaint against him, 197; death, 217; portrait, 336; mentioned, 166, 194, 197, 204, 205, 209, 218.
Prices of books, 65.
Prichard, Constantine, Janitor, account of him, 98-9.
Prideaux, Dr. John, 81.
Priestley, Dr., 280.
Primer, Salisbury, 296.
Prince, Daniel, bookseller, 200.
Prince, Mrs. Mary, donor, 148.
Printers, clerical, 259-60.
Prior, Matthew, 175.
Procis, 59.
Prudentius, 23.
Purcell, Henry, 205, 206.
Purefoy, Humphrey and Thomas, 56.
Puttick and Simpson, Messrs., 245.
Pybrac, Sieur de, 49.
Pynson, Richard, 312.
QUARTERLY REVIEW cited, 257 n.
Queensberry, Duke of, 164.
Quignones, Cardinal, 284.
Quiviv, Peter, Bp. of Exeter, 317.
RADCLIFFE, Joseph, 164.
Radzivil, Prince N., 239.
Raffaelle, 251, 334.
Raleigh, Sir Walter, donor, 24.
Ramsay, John, 316.
Randolph, John, D.D., 198.
Ransbough, Bible which belonged to the church, 224.
Rassam, Hormuzd, donor, 335.
Ratelband, —, bookseller at Amsterdam, 312.
Ravius, Constantine, 92.
Rawlins, T., Pophills, 168 n., 173 n., 174 n.
Rawlins, Richard, D.C.L., account of him, 168-9; his printed books, 170, 171, 183; MSS., 172-182, 216, 217; coins, seals, &c., 182, 183; some of his portraits, 336, 337; references to MSS., 19 n., 28, 35, 53, 77 n., 137 n., 126, 128 n., 154 n., 155 n., 157 n., 160 n., 165 n., 216, 234, 252, 261, 271, 321, 323, 325, 328, 335; book-
Index.

plate, 3: Continuation of Wood's Athenæa, cited, 130; History of Hereford, 120; endeavoured to compile a list of the annual Bodley Orators, 106.
Rawlinson, Sir Thomas, 168.
Rawlinson, Thomas, his son, 169, 170 n., 178, 184.
Ray, William, donor, 124.
Reade, William, 58.
Reader, W., 298.
Reay, Stephen, B.D., Sub-librarian, 242; resignation and death, 293; mentioned, 163, 286.
Reubenstein, A., 275 n.
Record Commission, Report for 1800 cited, 151, 167, 177, 185, 205; for 1837, 96; Eighth Report of Dep.-Keeper of Records, 170 n.
Red-letter books, 171 n.
Reggio, J. S., 280.
Renouard, —, 242.
Reynolds, Edward, D.D., 45 n.
Reynolds, Sir Joshua, 248.
Richards, —, 164.
Richmond, Margaret, Countess of, 105.
Richmond, George, 337.
Ridley, Thomas, 36.
Rigaud, John, B.D., donor, 303.
Rigaud, Prof. S. P., M.A., 195.
Rivers, Richard, Lord, 19.
Rives, George, Warden of New College, donor, 22.
Roberts, —, 340.
Roberts, B. and E., 271.
Roberts, Lewis, donor, 51.
Roberson, Prof. A., 194.
Robertson, Rev. F. W., 297.
Robius, George, 267.
Robinson, —, clock-maker, Gracechurch-street, 183 n.
Robinson, John, Bp. of London, MS. papers, 175.
Robson, Charles, B.D., donor, 56, 92.
Roch, Thomas, Janitor, 88.
Rochester, Henry Hyde, Earl of, 163, 164.
Rock, Dr., Church of our Fathers, cited, 29.
Rodd, Thomas, 258.
Roe, Sir Thomas, his gift of MSS., 49, 50-51; sanctioned the lending of his books, 51, 79.
Roger of Hereford, 58.
Rogers, Samuel, M.A., 342.
Roiillet, Nicholas, 283.
Rolin, Cardinal John, 310.
Rolle, R., of Hampole, 101, 177, 178.
Rolright, Oxon, glass from the church, 30.
Rome, reports from agents, 177; Rocca Library, 47 n.
Rosamond, Fair, her coffin, 30 n.
Ross, Alexander, donor, 91.
Ross, John, Hist. Angl., 120, 138, 141.
Rosse, John, 141.
Rostington, Captain, 77 n.
Rouceby, Walter de, 328.
Rous, John, M.A., elected Librarian, 44: applies to Milton for his Poems, 45; reception of King James' Works, 48; hinders the breaking open of Bodley's chest, 45 n.; appendix to catalogue, 60; complains of the neglect of the Stationers' Company, 31; refuses to lend a book to the king, 72; death, 76; legacy, ibid.; mentioned, 56, 309.
Routh, M. J., D.D., his printed library bequeathed to Durham, 4 n.; sale of his MSS., 141 n.; donor, 237; mentioned, 253; portrait, 337.
Rowell, G. A., 309 n.
Roxburghe sale, 42 n.
Rubens, Sir P. P., 148.
Runic alphabets, 22 n.; almanacks, 105, 161.
Rupert, Prince, letters, 154.
Rushworth, John, donor, 104; cited, 31.
Russel, Rev. Bertrand, donor, 205.
Russell, Charles, D.D., President of Maynooth, 166.
Russian books, 19, 22, 25 bis, 55, 63, 105, 107; cloak, 40, 307.
Ruthin School, 157.
Ryley, William, 174.
Rymner, Thomas, 320 n.
Ryser, Jeorus, 65.
S. W., bell-founder, 33.
Saadi, Rabi, 92 n.
Sacramentaria, 262, 290.
Sadler, Anne, wife of Ralph, donor, 333.
Saihante, Giovanni, 226, 230.
St. Amand, James, his bequest, 185; Catalogue, 216.
St. Amand, George and Martha, 185 n.
St. Bridge, Adam, 314.
St. George, Sir Richard, 174.
INDEX.

St. George, Sir Thomas, 174, 184.
Sale, George, MSS., 204 n.
Salisbury, books which belonged to the Cathedral, 175.
Salt, W., 302.
Samaritan MSS., 107, 113, 126, 296.
Sancroft, Archbp., mentioned, 125; his papers, 153-4.
Sandford, Oxon, Chartulary, 110.
Sandwich, Earl of, 166.
Sandy, Lady K., donor, 28.
Sanford, Jos., B.D., donor, 170 n.
Sanskrit MSS., 93 (the first); 265, 269, 272, 291, 294 n., 323.
Saona, Gul. de, 298.
Sarpi, Paolo, 207.
Saumarez, Sir James, 218.
Savile, Sir H., donor, 19; mentioned, 83 n., 251.
Saxon, — 245.
Say, William, 7 n.
Scarborough, Sir Charles, his auction, 115.
Schelging, Samuel, 241 n.
Schneider, — 283.
Schoenleben, Conrad, 230.
Schloffer, Peter, see Fust, 310.
Schönperger, Hans, 310, 312.
Schultens, H. A., 199, 320 n.
Schweighäuser, Joh., 320 n.
Scotland, letters of Scottich bishops, 154, 237; Hooke’s correspondence, 222.
Scott, G. G., 235, 284.
Scott, Capt. Jon., 206.
Scott, Thomas, first janitor? 88.
Scott, Sir W., 237, 288.
Scott, Will., Lord Stowell, 196.
Seal, or ‘sea-elephant’; a, bought, 104.
Sebastian, St., 332.
Secker, Thomas, Archbp. of Cant., 199.
Seffrid, Bp. of Chichester, 314.
Selden, John, his library, 77-87; deathbed, 77 n.; book in his collection which belonged to Anne Boleyn, 27 n.; some MSS. burnt at the Temple, 86; some of his books at Lincoln’s Inn and Coll. of Physicians, 38; books placed at west end of Library, 60; references to books and MSS., 55, 111, 239 n., 243, 246, 320; gave an Arabic astrolabe to Laud, 61; his house broken into by robbers, 83; mentioned, 50, 51, 139; portraits, 336.
Seligmann, Isaac, 243.
Selwyn, G. A., Bp of Lichfield, 319.
Sermons, collections of, 273, 276.
Servetus, Michael, 247.
Sévér, Henry, 316.
Seward, Miss, Anecdotes, cited, 110 n., 203 n.
Seymour, Jane, Q, consort of Henry VIII, 334.
Sforza, Bona, 249.
Shakespeare, W., the first Folio, 41; Venus and Adonis, and other poems, 67, 247; editions of single plays, &c., 231, 248, 258; his autograph, 300-302.
Sharpe, John, Archbp. of York, 127.
Sharpe, Dr. Gregory, 294 n.
Shaw, Henry, Illuminated Ornaments, cited, 250, 330 bis.
Shaw, Thomas, D.D., donor, 163.
Sheldon, Archbp. Gilbert, mentioned, 97; Papers, 155 n., 237; his family Bible, 237.
Sheldon, William, 313 n.
Sherfiddin Iahia ben Almocar, 114.
Shirley, W. W., D.D., 90.
Shotover, near Oxford, 29 n.
Shropshire MSS., &c., 163, 263-4.
Shuckbridge, Grace, 131.
Siamese Prince, 319.
Sichardus, Joh., 17 n.
Siddons, Mrs. 232.
Sigismund I of Poland, 249.
Silk, books printed on, 170 n.
Simeon, Sir John, 101.
Simon, Thomas, 340 n.
Simonides, Dr. Const., 199 n., 280-1.
Sloane, Sir Hans, donor, 120.
Slythers, — 11 n.
Smallridge, George, Bp. of Bristol, 149.
Smith, — 42 n.
Smith, Edmund, M.A., MS. of his Bodley Speech, 106.
Smith, Miles, Bp. of Gloucester, 82 n.
Smith, Richard, 141.
Smith, R. Payne, D.D., mentioned, 65, 180, 206, 300; Sub-librarian, 286, 293; Regius Professor of Divinity, 303.
Smith, Thomas, D.D., his MSS., 55,
INDEX.

Smith, Thomas, 67.
Smith, William, M.A., donor, 150.
Smynth, Edward, account of a Russian cloak, 307.
Smynth, Miles, 337.
Smythe, Thomas, 19.
Snoetsham, John, D.D., 315.
Steele, Rev. Walter, 326.
Stokehill, William, grand-nephew to Bodley, petition to University, 39.
Solly, —, 245.
Somers, John, Lord, 173, 184.
Somerset, Duke of, 256.
Somnians, John, 120.
Sophia, Electress of Hanover, 175.
Sotheby and Wilkinson, Messrs., 97, 300.
Sotheby, Samuel Leigh, cited, 45, 246, 281, 321; mentioned, 268, 272, 276.
South, Professor John, 81.
South, Robert, D.D., bequest, 143.
Southampton, Jane Wriothesley, Countess of, book which belonged to her, 43; her daughters, 44.
Southwell, Sir Robert, 173 n.
Spanish books, 76, 225, 235, 252.
Sparciford, Archdeacon Richard, 316 n.
Sparks, Thomas, M.A., 106.
Spelman, Sir Henry, 184.
Spencer, Earl, 251.
Spencer, or Spicer, —, 67.
Spencer, Sir Richard, donor, 177 n.
Spener, John, 36.
Sprat, Thomas, Bp. of Rochester, 173.
Stap boon, C. P., 311.
Standish, Dr., 17 n.
Standish, John, 36.
Stanhope, Lady Hester, donor, 229.
Stanley, Edward, donor, 196.
Stapilone, Sir Miles de, 329.
Stark, J. M., 386.
Stationers' Company, grant to the Library of all books printed by them, 30; negligent in performance, 31, 41, 73; plate given them by Bodley, 32; first book given by them, 32; ordinance for supply of books to the Library, 34; payment from the Library to the Bedel of the Company, 40; Statutes for delivery of books, 97; books claimed personally by Hyde, 110; first Copy-right Act, 118; last Copy-right Act, 244; increased receipt of books, 218.
Statius, 176.
Steinachner, Dr. M., 245, 246, 272.
Steele, —, 120 n.
Stephens, Robert, 300.
Stephen, King of England, 185.
Stephen, a Greek scribe, 209.
Stevens, Henry, 232, 272.
Stevenson, Rev. Joseph, 18 n., 105.
Stewart, C. J., 128, 143.
Stillingfleet, Bp. of Worth., 9, 124.
Sutche, George, 316.
Stoke, Abbot John, 313.
Stow Wood, near Oxford, 89 n.
Stratford, Thomas, third Earl of, 175.
Strange, John, 202.
Strange, Sir Thomas, 219.
Strangeways, Giles, 19.
Strickland, H. E., M.A., 277.
Strode, William, M.A., 55.
Stryke, John, M.A., 170 n.
Stubb, H., M.A., Sub-Librarian, 88, 89.
Stukeley, William, M.D., 57.
Suida, 226.
Summers, Prof., 284.
Summerset, John, M.D., 8 n.
Sunderlin, Lord, donor of Malones collection, 231.
Sunningwell, Berks, 109.
Sussex, Duke of, his sale, 97, 321.
Sutherland, Alexander H., 215, 258; portrait, 336.
Sutherland, Mrs., illustrated Clarendon and Burnet, 254-258.
Sutterton, Lincolnshire, churchwarden's accounts, 177.
Sutton, Sir Robert, 143.
Swallow, Joseph, B.A., 147.
Swedenborg, Emmanuel, donor, 189.
Sweynheym and Pamfrat, 210, 212, 273.
Swinton, John, D.D., Inscr. Civere cited, 162.
Sydenham, Sir Philip, 136.
Symonds, —, 17 n.
Symonds, Henry, M.A., 231, 266.
Syriac MSS., 56, 63, 91, 107, 114, 295, 300, 345.
Talman, J., 332.
Talmud, 244.
Tamil MSS., 296.
Tanner, Thomas, Bp. of St. Asaph, his printed books and MSS., 153-156; mentioned, 104, 106, 142, 190; references to his books, 81.
Tartar MSS., 115, 208.
Tasso, Torquato, 355.
Tattam, Archdeacon, 150.
Taunton, J. B., M.A., 266, 270.
Taylor, Richard, 231.
Telugu MSS., 319, 326.
Tenison, Thomas, Archbp. of Canterbury, 173 n.
Tennison, Alfred, 319.
Terence, 230; Vulgaria ab Terentio, 112, 303.
Terry, Thomas, M.A., 106.
Teesbury, John de, 316.
Te Watir, J. W., 236.
Thame School, 180.
Theocritus, 186.
Thomas of Newmarket, 58.
Thomas, E., 197.
Thomas, John, Bp. of Winch., 132 n.
Thomas, John, M.A., 200.
Thomas, Vaughan, R.D., 337.
Thomson, —, 337.
Thomson, Thomas, 303.
Thoreby, Ralph, 187 n.
Thorkelin, G. T., 242 n.
Thorpe, Benjamin, 103.
Thorpe, Thomas, 286.
Thurland, Francis, M.A., 219, 221.
Thurland, F. E., M.A., 266.
Thurloe, John, his State papers, 172.
Thurston, William, donor of Oriental MSS., 92; reference to a MS., 56.
Thwaites, Edward, donor, 333.
Tibetan MSS., 208.
Tickell, Rev. J., donor, 222.
Tigernach, 175.
Tippoo Sahib, 208.
Tischendorf, Dr., 64, 282.
Tomson, L., 52.
Tonga dialect, books in the, 376.
Tonstall, C., Bishop of Durham, 239.
Torcy, M. de, 222.
Torelli, Joseph, 201.
Torino, God., 312.
Tour, Archd. de la, 245.
Tounebee, Thomas, M.A., 156, 158.
Tradescant, John, 309 n.
Trescher, J., M.A., 397 n.
Trefussis, John, donor, 324.
Trent, Council of, 286.
Trott, Nicholas, Clavis Ling. Sancta, 108.

Turck, John, 183 n.
Turkish MSS., 63, 125, 207.
Turner, Dawson, sale, 280, 290.
Turner, Francis, Bishop of Ely, 173 n., 174; papers, 176, 178.
Turner, Dr. Peter, 55.
Turner, Capt. Samuel, MSS., 203.
Turner, Thomas, Dean of Canterbury, papers, 176, 178.
Turner, William, 73.
Twells, Rev. L., 78 n.
Twine, Thomas, M.D., donor, 34.
Twayne, Brian, MS. of Univ. Musterings, 187; cited, 37 n., 70, 80, 307.
Tyndale, W., 239, 248.
Tyrrell, James, donor, 125.
Tyrwhitt, Thomas, 196.

UFFENBACH, Z. C., Commerc. Epistol.
cited, 120, 130, 144, 145.
Ulatr, Annals of, 175.
Upcott, W., 299.
Uri, John, account of him, 199; Catal. mentioned, 65; cited, 114; autograph, 320 n.
Usher, Archbp., MSS., 125, 151, 176, 318; cited, 54; portrait, 336; absolved Selden on his death-bed, 77 n.; mentioned, 90, 102.
Utrecht, Treaty of, papers, 175.
Utterson, E. V., sale, 112, 321.

VALENTIN, Robert, 296.
Vambery, A., 115.
Vandyck, Sir Anthony, 196, 336.
Vansittart, Robert, D.C.L., 198.
Vaughan, P., Warden of Merton, donor, 223.
Vaux, W. S., 340.
Ven,—, a Dane, 68.
Venice, reports of ambassadors, 177.
Verard, Anthony, 310, 312.
Verneuil, John, M.A., Sub-librarian, 73—
4, 341; donor, 341; Nomenclator, 31, 67, 73, 130; Cat. of Commentators on Holy Script., 60.
Vertue, George, 182.
Vetulicastro, S. de, 310.
Victoria, Her Majesty Queen, donor, 264; her visits to the Library, 319.
Vidoveus, Petr., 311.
Villemerque, T. de la, cited, 20 n.
INDEX.

Vincent, William, D.D., 263.
Viner, Charles, 294 n.
Virgil, 170, 232, 233, 252; Sertorius Virgiliani tried by Charles I, 70.
Virgil, Polydore, 10, 11.
Vivian, William, M.D., 198.
Vostro, Simon, 317, 318.

WAKE, Edward, M.A., 106
Wake, Sir Isaac, cited, 15, 18, 27.
Wake, William, Archbp. of Canterbury, papers, 121, 174.
Walden, Thomas, Fossae Eiose, 90.
Wales, Albert Erw, Prince of, 304, 319.
Walker, Gen. Alex., his MSS, 265, 270.
Walker, Euston, 167.
Walker, John, D.D., his MSS, 167; William, his son, 167.
Walker, John, M.A., marriage, 229, 235.
Walker, Sir William, 470.
Wall, E., M.A., 277.
Wallington, Richard, 58.
Wallis, John, D.D., 90, 251.
Wallis, J., M.A., 123.
Walpole, Horace, Anecdotes of Painting, cited, 50; R. and N. Authors, 258.
Walters, Rev. John, 107.
Walters, J. B.A., Sub-librarian, 196-7.
Walton, Brian, Bp. of Chester, 95.
Walney, Humphrey, cited, 9, 20 n., 34, 90, 100; employed in the Library, 116; donor, 116 n.; selected books from Bernard's library, 117; dispute with Hyde thereon, 18; Hyde desires Walney to succeed him as Librarian, 118; portrait, 336.
Watt, Sir Edmund, 178, 187.
Ware, Sir James, 184.
Warham, Archbp., 313.
Waring, George, M.A., 105.
Warnerford, —, 106.
Warton, Thomas, B.D., Hist. of Eng. Poet., cited, 18, 29, 46, 81, 156 n., 188 n.; Life of Sir T. Pope, cited, 331 n.

Watson, Abbot Thomas, 315.
Waterson, Simon, 36.
Watson, —, 11 n.

Watson, James, 248.
Watson, Thomas, 206.
Weelks, Thomas, 206.
Weever, John, 250 n.
Welles, —, 317.
Wellington, Duke of, 319.
Welwood, J. M.D., Memoirs cited, 70.
Wentworth, St. Ex., M.A., 251.
Werden, Major-General, 185 n.
Werfrith, Bp. of Worcester, 100.

West, James, 212 n.
West, Rev. W., 179.
Westminster Abbey, 179.
Westmoreland, Earl of, 256.
Westphal, J. de, 305.
Westphaling, Herbert, Bp. of Hereford, donor, 19.
Westwood, Professor J., 105, 227.
Wettsten, P., 341 n.

White, William, 329.
White caught in the Severn, 104.
Whalley, Peter, donor, 88.
Whalley, Peter, B.A., 204.
Wharton, Henry, M.A., 153 n., 249, 322 n.

Wharton, Phillip, Lord, 156, 178.
Whately, Charles, M.A., 144.
Whethamstede, John de, 8.
Whetstone, George, 231.
Whiston, William, M.A., donor, 141; mentioned, 149, 184, 320 n.
Whitchurch, E., 282.
White, —, 341.
White, Messrs., Appleton, 33.
White, Edward, 36.
White, John, M.A., 107.
White, Joseph, D.D., 206, 208; portrait, 209.
White, Peter, 9.
Whiting, Thomas, B.A., 197.
Whole duty of Man, author of, MS. of Decay of Piety, 125.
Whorwood, Robert, 322.
Wheytt, —, Librarian, 11.
Wibb, W. de, 317.
Wickliffe, John, 10, 90, 96, 252.
Wick-Risington, Gloucestershire, 58.
Wiggan, George, M.A., 107.
Wight, Osborne, M.A., bequest, 205.
INDEX.

369

Wigmore, Henry, 37.
Wilbye, John, 206.
Wild, Henry, the learned Norwich tailor, 142.
Wildgoose, —, painter, 138.
Wilkie, Sir D., 319.
Wilkins, David, D.D., 78.
Wilkinson, John, D.D., 84.
William III, 255.
William, King of Scotland, Homage to Henry II, 30.
Williams, Dr. St. John's College, Cambridge, 183, 184.
Williams, Charles, D.D., Donor, 197.
Williams, George, B.D., 329.
Williams, John, Bp. of Lincoln, applies to borrow a book, but is refused, 50; Funeral Sermon on James I, 51.
Williams, Sir John, 271.
Williams, John, B.A., 157 n.
Williams, Rev. John, Welsh Grammar cited, 20 n.
Williams, Zach., 188.
Willis and Sotheran, Messrs., 245.
Willis, Browne, Letters to Owen, 160 n.; Bequest of MSS. and coins, 190-1, 340.
Willis, Thomas, M.D., 191.
Wilson, D., Bp. of Calcutta, Portrait, 337; donor, 338.
Wilson, H. H., M.A., his MSS., 265.
Wilson, Lea, 233 n.
Wilson, Ralph, 147.
Wilson, Thomas, Bp. of Sodor and Man, 289.
Wilson, Thomas, 258.
Witthire, MS. collections, 154 n.
Winbolt, Thomas, B.A., 158.
Winchelsea, Henage Finch, Earl of, 94.
Windsor, Dean and Chapter of, donors, 34.
Wingfield family, 214.
Winwood, Sir Ralph, donor, 25.
Wodecherche, Will. de, 317.
Wolf, Jo. Christopher, 95.
Wolfe, Reginald, 87.
Wood, Antony a, bequest, 89; MSS. bought from him, 110; a MS. given by Ballard, 187; his Library, 287-8; MS. of his History, 270; illustrated copy of Guth's translation of his History, 30; Rawlinson's Contin. of the Athens, 181; Malone's copy of the Athens, 232; Dr. Bliss's copy of the Athens, 289; cited, 10, 17, 25, 41, 44, 45, 46, 79, 83 n., 85, 86 n., 106, 110, 159, 201; Life, 192 n.; mentioned, 289, 322.
Wood, Robert, 189.
Worcester Cathedral, 179; MSS. from thence, 100, 103.
Worde, Wynken de, 155, 183, 239.
Wordsworth, Dr. Christopher, cited, 53 n.
Wordsworth, Will., 227.
Wotton, Sir Henry, donor, 25, 58.
Wren, Sir Christopher, 119, 251.
Wright, —, 12.
Wright, Abraham, B.A., Delites Delicarum, 65.
Wright, Francis, 67.
Würzburg, books 'e Coll. Herbip.' 61, 65.
Wyatt, Sir Thomas, 336.
Wyatt, Thomas, 330.
Wyatt, William, M.A., 128.
Wyberd, John, 68.
Wyngarde, Ant. van den, 255.
Wryde, William, 174.
XIMENES, Cardinal, 280, 298.
Xiphilinus, 320.

YARNTON, Oxon, 30 n.
Yonge, Francis, M.A., Sub-librarian, 74: death, 89.
Yonge, Nicholas, 206.
York Minster, 30; Tower of St. Mary, 96; Museum, 212 n.
Yorke, Sir Joseph, 199.
Young, Edward, D.D., 178.
Young, Patrick, 48, 51, 55, 61, 83: donor, 325.
Yriarte, —, 253.

ZAMBONI, J., J., 178.
Zell, Ulric, 210.
Zend MSS., 149, 191, 269.
Zernichaus, Adam, 143.
Zoroaster, 149, 159.
Zuns, Dr. L., 272.
ADDENDA ET CORRIGENDA.

P. 1, l. 9. [The University Seal is engraved in Ingram’s Memorials of Oxon, iii. 17, where it is said to be ‘c. A.D. 1200.’]

P. 15, note 2. [The University Arms are engraved in Ingram’s Memorials, iii. 1, from the painted glass in the great east window of the Library. In this representation three mottos are given: Domicius, &c., on a scroll above, Septentrio et Felicitas on the Book, and Bosius regnabit, Veritas liberabit, on a scroll below.]

P. 50, l. 1. for William read Williams.

P. 81, l. 19. for Wharton read Warton.

P. 93, l. 6 from bottom. for Kerr read Ken. Gentoo, add [i.e. Sanscrit.] [See p. 265, note.]

P. 115, l. 5. for M. Vainbéry . . . to form read M. Vanbbery, the traveller in Tartary, who is engaged in forming.

P. 129, l. 6. for one volume of Index read one earlier volume containing a list of livings in the diocese of Norwich, with their values and incumbents.

P. 230, Codex Ebor. [A facsimile, from the commencement of St. Luke, with a notice of the MS., is given in Shaw’s Illuminated Ornaments.]
OXFORD:

BY T. COMBE, M.A., E. B. GARDNER, R. F. HALL, AND H. LATHAM, M.A.

PRINTERS TO THE UNIVERSITY.